CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

That the quarterly earnings statement of the United States Steel Corporation, to be given out next week, would make a remarkably favorable showing was the report on the floor of the Consolidated Stock Exchange when United States Steel common was advancing late in the day under vigorous buying. The stock closed at 65⅝, its highest for the day, this representing a 3-point advance from Saturday's final price. The war stocks attracted particular trading attention at the opening, but later the railroad shares also became prominent.

COTTON IN SEESAW, BUT NEWS BULLISH

Prices Advance 15 Points on Cables and Report of Big Damage to the Crop

BUT YIELD TO PROFIT TAKING

New Orleans Times-Picayune Review Indicates Plant in the Worst Condition on Record.

Irregularity continued in the cotton market yesterday, with a strong opening based on high cables, excessive rains in the Western and Central belts, and a bullish crop report from The New Orleans Times-Picayune. Prices opened at an advance of about 10 points, which was increased by about 5 points on local buying. Profit taking before the close, however, caused a decline, prices closing unchanged to 5 points advance.

Crop news was decidedly bullish. Heavy rains had occurred over Sunday in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and the Mississippi Valley. The precipitation was general, and in some cases amounted to more than three inches. Open cotton was subjected to a good deal of damage not only as to quality, but quantity, as the rainfall in some cases was sufficiently heavy to keep the cotton from the open bolls.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune in its crop report said that deterioration had been exceedingly heavy, and that the condition of the crop was practically the lowest on record. Picking was said to be nearly completed in many sections, as the crop was short and labor plenty. F. B. Hayne wired from New Orleans giving the substance of The Times-Picayune report, and predicted 15-cent cotton by Christmas.

The Liverpool market showed considerable steadiness, and private cables stated that offerings were limited. Spot sales reached a total of 15,000 bales, including 11,000 American.

The Census Bureau announces that the report on the amount of cotton ginned to Oct. 18 will be issued on next Monday, Oct. 25.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to 13 points higher. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 10 points higher. Futures closed steady.

LONDON MARKET DULL.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—The large supply of money keeps discount rates easy and attracts attention to Treasury bills, which are selling in larger quantities. American exchange was firmer, cable transfers ranging from 4.69⅞ to 4.70. Government buying of American bonds and Canadian Pacific stock assisted in the firmness.

There was a good investment demand on the Stock Exchange for the war loan and short term, colonial and Japanese bonds, while Mexican securities were again a good feature. Rio Tinto and copper stocks were weak. The market otherwise was dull.

American securities were neglected owing to the rise in exchange. Canadian Pacific and United States Steel were firm exceptions.

U. S. EXPRESS DIVIDEND.

$25 a Share to be the First Liquidation Payment.

The United States Express Company yesterday declared a dividend of $25 a share, payable Nov. 15 to stockholders of record Oct. 30. This is the first distribution of assets to be authorized since the company went into dissolution June 30, 1914. The cash required for the dividend is $2,560,000, and has been derived from the sale of the company's physical property in the express business, from real estate, and the sale of securities.

Directors of the company declined to tell the amount of assets still to be disposed of. It was said that better results have been attained in the liquidation than were expected when the war began. A statement issued last April showed total securities owned of a par value slightly more than $5,000,000. It is understood that a considerable quantity of these still remains to be sold.

MORE UNITED CIGAR STORES

Corporation Takes Over Up-State Whelan Business.

C. A. Whelan, President of the United Cigar Stores Company, announced yesterday that thirty cigar stores in Northern and Western New York had been bought from C. A. Whelan & Co. and Whelan Brothers. These include the original stores started by George J. Whelan, which served as a model for the United system. The new stores have a gross business of about $600,000 yearly, and their addition to the United Cigar chain brings the total under the one management well above 1,000 stores.

The stores taken over are in Syracuse, Troy, Elmira, and other cities. A prominent stockholder in the two smaller Whelan companies is A. E. Nettleton, the shoe manufacturer of Syracuse, who backed George J. Whelan in his first venture into the retail tobacco industry.

TAKE MARINE FIGHT TO JERSEY COURTS

WOULD HALT BONDHOLDERS

Expect to be Able to Show That the Receivership Was Unwarranted as Well as Illegal.

Stockholders of the International Mercantile Marine Company, acting through the Wallace Committee plan to get their fight against the proposed foreclosure sale and reorganization into the courts today or tomorrow. To accomplish this, application will be made to the New Jersey court which named Chauncey G. Parker as receiver in that State to require him to file an answer to the original receivership application, which was made in New York. The answer which the Wallace Committee desires to have Mr. Parker make incorporates charges that the original receivership was unwarranted and illegal.

By getting its case before the courts at this time the Wallace Committee will steal a march on the Bannard Reorganization Committee, which intends to ask for a foreclosure decree within a short time. The same court which must pass on the foreclosure will have before it all the data of the Wallace Committee's expert accountants, which, it is asserted, substantiate the charge that the receivership was unwarranted.

The original application for a receiver for the International Mercantile Marine was made in New York State, and P. A. S. Franklin was appointed receiver. When dissenting stockholders, represented by William D. Loucks, began a crusade against the Bannard reorganization plan last August and threatened suits against the Directors of the company, the company, through its Secretary, sought for and obtained an additional receiver in New Jersey. It is in that State that the company is incorporated, and any actior against the Directors must now be made through the receiver. Mr. Parker's appointment was accepted as effectively blocking any suits brought by individual stockholders.

Receiver Parker's answer to the original application for a receiver, if he is compelled to make such an answer, will be filed in the New York Supreme Court, and it is there that the Wallace Committee will undoubtedly make its real fight against the Bannard forces, headed by Otto T. Bannard, President of the New York Trust Company.

The decision to go into the courts, moreover, is accepted as a further measure to force a compromise of the reorganization plan which has already been declared operative by the Bannard Reorganization Committee. This committee made one concession in eliminating the proposed $2.50 assessment on the stock of the company, but it was found then that the Wallace Committee demanded much greater concessions. The Wallace Committee, headed by James N. Wallace, President of the Central Trust Company, demands that the bondholders of the Marine Company permit the stockholders to retain all of the stock of the new company and thus control the company.

Profits in the shipping business in war time promise to figure prominently in the fight between the two strong banking factions. It is alleged that the International Mercantile Marine Company is now earning at the rate of $40,000,000 net a year, or four times more than it ever earned before in one year. Records of the company's books, proving that enormous profits are being made and also backing up the claim that there was $8,000,000 in the treasury when a default was permitted on the company's bonds, it is understood, will be incorporated in the preferred stockholders' answer to the receivership petition.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Wheat prices declined 2½ to 2⅝c yesterday under pressure of large receipts at primary points which brought out heavy hedge selling as well as liquidation. Shorts covered very freely during last week's advance and in absence of a large outstanding short interest there was a general lack of buying power and the market was apparently technically weak. The visible supply of domestic wheat in the United States increased 642,000 bushels for the week compared with an increase of 3,035,000 last year. The total was 18,888,000 compared with 60,156,000 a year ago. In the local cash market No. 1 Northern Duluth was quoted at $1.11½ and No. 1 Northern Manitoba $1.07⅝, cost, insurance, and freight Buffalo.

CORN.

The corn market was also weak with declines of ¾@1¼c. Longs sold quite heavily, and sentiment was influenced by more favorable weather conditions over the West, and indications that some of the recent reports on frost damage had been overdrawn. Receipts at primary points were small, and the visible supply decreased 197,000 bushels, compared with a decrease of 672,000 last year. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 77¾c, prompt shipment.

OATS.

The oats market declined ⅜c to 1½c under selling by leading cash interests and owing to heavy receipts at primary points. Exporters were again in the market, however, and sales were estimated as high as 750,000 bushels, principally to France. The visible supply increased 424,000 bushels, compared with an increase of 2,132,000 last year. The local cash market was easy; No. 3 white quoted at 42½@43¼c; No. 4 white, 41@42c; ordinary to fancy clipped, 41@45c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was firmer at the start, owing to decreasing stocks in the West as a result of large recent shipments, but on the advance there was considerable pressure, partly in sympathy with grain, and closing prices were easier. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 22,000; estimated for Tuesday, 16,000. Kansas City received 9,000 and Omaha 3,700.

The coffee market again experienced a moderate outside demand, and at the start prices were 3 to 6 points above the final of last week. The market eased off a trifle toward the close under profit taking, and final quotations were net unchanged to 3 points higher. Total sales for the day were 22,250 bags. The local spot market was steady, with Rio 7s quoted at 7¼c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 4,868 packages, including 270 packages in transit for export. There was a little speculative demand for high-grade creamery this morning, and the market steadied, with extras selling fairly well at 28½c. No reports are heard of fresh purchases for export; some lots will go out this week both to British markets and to Copenhagen, but largely stock bought earlier. Not much fresh creamery offering under 26c, the cheaper creamery being largely held fresh. Renovated and other lower-priced butters without material change. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 28½c; higher scoring, 29@29½c; first, 26@28c; seconds, 24@25½c; thirds, 22½@23½c; State dairy, finest, 27½@28c; good to prime, 25½@27c; common to fair, 22@25c; renovated, extras, 24½@25c; firsts, 23½@24c; lower grades, 21½@23c; imitation creamery, firsts, 23@24c; ladles, current make, firsts, 22½@22½c; seconds, 21@21½c; lower grades, 19½@20½c; packing stock, June make, fine, 21c; current make, fine, 21c; No. 2, 20@20½c; lower grades, 17@19½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 8,32 cases. There is a better call for higher qualities of fresh gathered eggs, and, with rather light offering of such, the market has recovered a firmer tone, some sales of fine extra firsts reaching 54c. The medium and lower grades are still dragging and rather urgently offered, and values continue extremely irregular; a large part of the supply is offering in range of 25@30c per dozen, with poorer qualities lower. Storage eggs quiet but steady. Near-by whites continue scarce, and very few are of strictly fancy quality; possibly quotations might be exceeded for uniformly new-laid whites showing large size, but there are scarcely any such obtainable in straight packages. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 35@36c; extra firsts, 32@34c; firsts, 27@31c; seconds, 22½@26c; thirds and poorer, 20@22c; dirties, No. 1, 21@22c; No. 2 and poorer, 18@20½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 20@20½c; culls and inferior, 15@19c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 28c; firsts, 24½@25½c; seconds, 23@24c; thirds or poorer, 19@22½c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery whites, fine to fancy, 36@36c; ordinary to good, 35@47c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 33@47c; Western, gathered whites, 30@36c; State, Pennsylvania, and near-by hennery browns, 36@38c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 27@33c; near-by refrigerator whites, 27@30c.

A company that has no indebtedness and only one class of stock—is paying 12% dividends and its earnings are over three times this amount.

Conditions in the sugar market are exceptionally favorable.

MAXIM MUNITIONS WARNING.

Corporation Says There Is No Stock That Can Be Delivered.

The Maxim Munitions Corporation, a $10,000,000 company formed last August, yesterday issued a statement warning the public against accepting at their face value rumors that have been circulated about big war orders. The company has bought a factory at New Haven, but, according to an officer, it has not yet begun to operate on a broad scale. The statement was signed by Hudson Maxim, President, and said:

"It has been brought to the attention of the officials of this company that in the last few days certain unauthorized and inaccurate statements have appeared in some of the papers, and statements and advertisements have also been issued by certain brokerage firms, which statements apparently have caused dealings in the shares of this company. We wish publicly to state that no one is now or has been authorized by us to quote any prices on our shares. There is no stock that can be delivered, and this company has not made, and it is not at the present time prepared to make, any public statement. It furthermore wishes to state that Sir Hiram Maxim has no connection whatsoever with this company. When this company considers it a proper time to do so, it will make a statement of such of its affairs as will be of interest to the public."

The company's stock has been traded in for several days on the Curb on a when issued basis. Sales were reported yesterday at 20⅜, as compared with 18 toward the close of last week.

Sugar Stocks IN War Times

Great Britain consumes at the rate of 2,000,000 tons of sugar annually all of which must be imported.

France which usually supplies its own needs is now importing American sugar.

Cuba second alone to Germany in sugar production is now particularly benefited, by the increased demand due to the war.

More War Orders.

There is fresh activity in war orders for uniform cloths and blankets. The leading factor in the market is credited with closing a contract with the Russian Government calling for 5,000,000 yards of heavy overcoating at $1.47 a yard. This order follows closely the report that, a short time ago, the same company had obtained a contract to turn out 5,600,000 yards of uniform suiting cloth for the English Government. The mills of the company are understood to be working on this contract now. It will require about 13,000,000 pounds of cleaned wool stock and over 1,800 looms three months to complete the Russian order. Besides these orders, which have already been placed, inquiries are being made for well over 2,000,000 blankets. Italy is expected to be in the market shortly for more uniform cloth, to supplement the supplies now being made up.

The Situation in Burlaps.

Notwithstanding the activity reported in the burlap trade in the last week, the demand was light enough yesterday, from all accounts. Spot prices were firmly held at recent levels, however, the feature being the price asked for 10½-ounce "forties" because of their scarcity. Recent reports from Calcutta indicate that September shipments were very light, only about 31,000,000 yards, which is taken to mean higher prices before very long. Another "bull" factor is the report that a sharp increase in wages is being asked by operatives in the Dundee jute mills, which if granted will mean higher prices on Scottish goods. Lightweight burlaps continue cheap in comparison with heavy goods, yesterday's spot quotations on forty-inch fabrics being: 7½-ounce, 5.15c; 8-ounce, 5.25c, 10-ounce, 7.60c, and 10½-ounce, 7.90c.

No-Sale Policy Rewarded.

The clothing retailers, who have fought the sales evil and "trading down" tactics, are beginning to realize their reward in the way of increased business. The buying public is showing a disposition to swing its patronage to the stores that steered clear of continual sales even through the lean periods. This has been noted by several manufacturers. Despite the argument that certain reductions should be made to clear out unseasonable merchandise the sales evil has had a very harmful effect on the trade. A salesman who has sounded retailers on the matter has concluded after his investigation that a serious effort will be made from now on to check the abuse. A number of retailers have determined to put off their Fall sales until as late a date as possible, and not hold them during the latter part of this month and in November as they have usually done.

Government Fur Sale This Week.

On Thursday and Friday of this week the United States Government will put up at auction in St. Louis Alaska blue and white fox skins. The Alaska sealskins will not be offered at this sale, which will be conducted by Funston Bros. & Co. This will be the third year in which the Government's furs have been sold in St. Louis, instead of in London, as formerly. Prices at the initial sale ran from 5 to 15 per cent. higher than those formerly obtained in London. St. Louis is said to be the largest primary market for furs in the world, estimates of the value of the annual receipts of raw skins in normal years there placing it at $10,000,000 to $12,000,000.

Hongkong Buyers Like Our Goods.

Consul General G. E. Anderson, who is at Hongkong, reports that a careful study of the cotton piece goods situation in that city by experts has convinced a good many buyers that the United States offers the best first-hand market for them at present, and inquiries for American goods are becoming more numerous and much more in earnest. This is especially the case in plain gray shirtings and sheetings, in which central Europe shared a good share of trade before the war. There is a marked demand for cotton blankets, cotton flannel, and other goods which formerly came from Europe. In addition to this, the demand for American goods is coming to include a number of fabrics which have hitherto been obtained almost exclusively from Europe, but in which experts believe American manufacturers can now successfully compete.

Invents a Paint Agitator.

A patent has been awarded in this country for an agitator for barrels, a device which, it is claimed, will be of great value to the various industries which use mixed paints or other coatings. The device is placed in the barrel at the paint factory before it is filled. It consists of a shaft connecting both ends of the barrel, and on it are fastened two stirring blades, one at each end, with a steel wire brush affixed halfway between the two. When the paint or other covering material is to be withdrawn, the barrel is put in a horizontal position and tapped at the head. At the other end a small crank is fastened to the shaft. When the crank is turned the steel brush passes through and dislodges the heavier pigment at the lower centre of the barrel and scatters it throughout the mixture. When the centre pigment is disturbed, the remainder of the pigment flows toward that part of the barrel and comes under the action of the brush. In addition to eliminating waste, the inventor claims that the device will produce an even consistency of the material.

Expect Heavy Buying Movement.

The piece goods selling agents expect a heavy buying movement when goods for next Fall are opened up in December and January. The market at present is well cleaned up on heavyweights. Many of the mills that were accustomed to devoting the slack period to making stock goods have taken war contracts, thereby greatly diminishing the usual supply of overcoatings available to the domestic trade. But, in the scarcity has been exaggerated to some extent. Buyers have gone from one selling agent to another with inquiries for goods, and what scarcity there actually is appears greater on account of this.

Clothing Prospects for Spring.

There is every reason to believe that the clothiers will enjoy a most satisfactory Spring business. The representative of a prominent young men's clothing house, who has already booked considerable business for next season, finds that in nearly every instance the initial orders placed this year have doubled those which were given in for the last Spring season. His trips have taken in the middle Eastern and Southern States, as well as New England, and in each centre the disposition of retailers was been one of confidence and a willingness to buy. The scarcity of overcoats this Fall will doubtless help on the buying movement for Spring as the retail trade is beginning to realize that, unless they put in early orders, merchandise may not be obtainable when they need it.

Gray Goods Movement Only Fair.

The movement of gray goods in this market yesterday was none too large, but prices continued, for the most part, to be held firmly at recent levels. Here and there odd lots of goods were let out by first hands at slightly less than the market figures, and there were reports of some more second hands' goods on the market in limited quantities. Among the most notable of the day's sales were spot business on 39-inch 68-72s at 5¼ cents and on 38½-inch 60-52s at 4¾ cents. At least one small lot of 39-inch 56-44s was let out for prompt shipment at a sixteenth off the figure quoted below. A fair business, which had very little feature, was reported on sheeting and drills. Staple printcloth prices were:

Hosiery Novelties Sell Well.

A nice business is being done here on high-class novelties in women's hose. Among the most popular of these are Richelieu ribbed effects, with circular colored stripes about two inches apart, which are offered in a number of attractive combinations. Black and white vertical striped effects, in narrow and wide stripes, are much liked by buyers, as are novelty jacquard patterns and natty combinations of polka dots and "clocks." Vertical stripes in colors, the stripes being about a quarter of an inch wide, are selling well. A large variety of fancy embroidered and beaded "clocks" is offered and proving popular with the retail trade, the clocking in this case usually being in white on black. A great many boot effects of various kinds are shown, of which plaids are said to be far and away the leaders.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The account of the Culbertson, Grote, Rankin Company, Spokane, Wash., is now being handled by Alfred Fanti, resident buyer, 316 West Thirty-second Street. Mr. Fanti's business has increased to such an extent of late that he has been obliged greatly to enlarge his quarters at that address.

An international trade conference of special interest and practical benefit to the manufacturers of the country will be held, under the auspices of the foreign trade department of the National Association of Manufacturers, at the Hotel Astor on Dec. 6, 7 and 8.

American firms desiring to secure goods of German or Austrian origin ordered before March 1, 1915, must follow in detail the forms of affidavit which the trade advisers have requested them to fill out. If any firms desire to secure complete information in regard to this matter they may do so by applying to E. C. Porter at the local office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

RECORD WHEAT EXPORT.

Big Canadian Shipments to Allies Go Through This Port.

Heavy buying by England, France, and Italy for war requirements is responsible for the largest movement of Canadian wheat through New York in the history of the port. Records of the Produce Exchange up to last Friday show that 4,263,791 bushels have been brought here from Canada since the early part of August and reloaded for shipment across the ocean.

While wheat under the Underwood tariff is free of duty ordinarily, it happens that Canada levies a duty on American wheat imported into the Dominion. In such a case the American law requires the levy of a 10 per cent. duty in retaliation. Consequently the Canadian wheat brought to this port for transhipment is in bond to aid the American customs tax.

The Canadian wheat crop, estimated by grain men for this season at approximately 332,000,000 bushels, is one of the largest in the history of the Dominion.

The total export movement through New York from Aug. 1 to Oct. 15, is placed at 12,111,525 bushels, of which 7,845,734 bushels was grown in the United States. In August there was exported 2,761,694 bushels of domestic wheat and 145,978 bushels in bond; in September, 3,624,814 bushels domestic and 1,140,433 bushels in bond; from Oct. 1 to Oct. 15, 1,429,226 bushels domestic and 2,920,385 bushels in bond.

MUST PAY MORE DUTY.

Present Values of Toys Are Test in Matter of Imports.

Judge McClelland, sitting as a reappraisement official of the Board of General Appraisers, yesterday passed upon many invoices of Philadelphia toy importers who brought in large quantities of goods from Germany and Austria before the British blockade became effective. When the goods reached Philadelphia the importers claimed that they should be allowed to pay duties on the goods at the prices prevailing in the two countries in 1914, when they were purchased or contracted for.

The Collector, however, held that the 1914 prices no longer served as a basis, since the toys were not exported until during the first five months of this year, when prices had gone up in the countries of production. Duty was accordingly taken plus the advances in market value alleged by the Custom House authorities to have occurred on the respective dates of shipment. The importers then appealed to the board for a review of the Collector's action.

Judge McClelland sustained the Philadelphia customs men in exacting the advanced duties. Some of the toys were advanced as much as 20 per cent. over invoice prices, others varying from 5 to 12½ per cent. The importers will also have to stand a penalty of 1 per cent. for each per cent. of value advance imposed by the General Appraiser.

The large consignments of German and Austrian toys recently released through an arrangement with the British authorities, and now on their way to this and other ports, will be subjected on arrival to treatment similar to that accorded the Philadelphia shipments.

AFTER COMMERCIAL FRAUDS.

All District Attorney Candidates Promise Stringent Prosecutions.

A committee of the New York Credit Men's Association, consisting of Edward D. Flannery, George Williams and Frank S. Flagg, recently appointed to ascertain from candidates for District Attorney their attitude toward the prosecution of commercial fraud, announced yesterday the result of its canvass.

District Attorney Perkins said he was fully in sympathy with the efforts of the credit men in trying to reach commercial crooks. He promised hearty co-operation with the association if elected

Frank Moss assured the committee that he was "in general sympathy with your position, and think that a plan should be worked out to relieve the situation of which you write."

Direct assurance was given the committee by Judge Swann that if successful at the polls, he would establish a commercial fraud bureau in the District Attorney's office. This bureau, the Democratic candidate said, would deal exclusively with business transactions that have a criminal aspect. He added that "there is a healthy demand that the public have greater protection against frauds, cheats, and imposition."

It was stated in behalf of the credit men's committee that the assurances received from the candidates made it certain, irrespective of who may be elected, that the merchants of this city will receive from the District Attorney's office protection against commercial crime which should result in a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions Classifying a Number of Imported Articles.

O. G. Hempstead & Son, Philadelphia, were partly sustained in protests filed with the General Appraisers regarding reliquaries, bookmarks, and crucifixes composed in chief value of metal plated with silver. The Collector took duty at 60 per cent. as articles worn or carried about the person, valued at more than 20 cents per dozen. The board held that the reliquaries and bookmarks were properly dutiable as claimed at 50 per cent. ad valorem as metal articles silvered. Judge Sullivan decided that as the protests did not contain a claim for 50 per cent. duty on the crucifixes, they would have to stand the Collector's tax of 60 per cent., although the correctness of taking the higher duty was questioned in the board's decision.

John Wanamaker was sustained in a controversy over ornaments and trimmings composed in chief value of beads or spangles and in part of netting. The customs men took duty at 60 per cent. ad valorem, whereas the importer claimed 50 per cent. tax under the specific provision for beaded and spangled goods. The Collector was directed to make a reliquidation.

A difference of opinion existed between the board and George F. Lucas of San Francisco relative to the state of completeness of amber necklaces. The Collector took duty at 50 per cent. ad valorem as beaded articles, while the importer claimed that the shipment consisted of amber beads loosely strung, which should be admitted at 35 per cent. A sample of the merchandise submitted to the board consisted of a nicely graduated set of beads strung on a substantial yellow silk cord. The board denied that the beads were loosely strung for transportation purposes, and held the sample an unfinished necklace, or unfinished jewelry. It was held that the Collector should have taken duty at 60 per cent., but as he did not do so, his tax of 50 per cent. was affirmed without acquiescing in the classification.

Massee & Co. objected to the Collector's classification of two classes of merchandise. One was reported by the Appraiser to be old bottles or broken glass ground to powder on which duty was taken at 30 per cent. ad valorem as a manufacture of glass not specially provided for. The other was returned at 20 per cent. as a mineral or earthy substance wholly or partly manufactured. As to the first, the importer's claim was for free entry as crude or manufactured sand, the balance of the goods being asked duty exemption as crude artificial abrasives.

The testimony taken at the trial showed that the product returned as broken glass was as a matter of fact dug out of open sand pits in Durberg, south of Frankfort, Germany, and was shipped exactly as it was taken out of the pits, in the form of sea sand, or a little coarser, and some of it in fine powder form. It was denied that the product was used as an abrasive, or for match heads. The board reversed the collector as to the sand, but held that the claim as to the rest of the importation was not the proper one, the Collector being affirmed to that extent.

UNDERVALUATION OF FUR?

Beaver Skins from Canada Come Under Appraiser's Ban.

A controversy between the customs officials of this port and Shapiro & Co. of Toronto culminated yesterday in action by Judge McClelland of the Board of General Appraisers which may result in the seizure by the Government of Canadian beaver skins for undervaluation. Another Toronto firm also had heavy advances imposed by the General Appraiser, although they did not quite reach the seizure point.

It is thought that special agents of the Treasury Department stationed along the border informed the local customs officials that furs were being brought into this country at undervaluation rates. At any rate, when the beaver skins arrived here they were taken to the Appraiser's stores and subjected to a thorough examination by Appraiser Sague's examiners. The appraiser reported to Collector Malone that the goods were entered 100 per cent. below their market value in Canada. As the official seizure limit is 75 per cent., the Collector in the usual procedure would have seized the skins.

The representatives of the Toronto firm, however, appealed to Judge McClelland for a reappraisement, which acted as a stay. It appeared at the hearing that the skins were shipped by Shapiro & Co. to this city for their own account and in bond. The purchaser's testimony, Judge McClelland said in his decision, had the effect of sustaining the advances over the entered values. The reappraisement held that beaver skins entered at $1.50 properly represented a market value of $3, while those entered at $1.25 had a value of $2.50 each. Before the Government authorities can take further action in the matter of seizure, Shapiro & Co. will have the right to a review by a board of three General Appraisers.

Another beaver skin case heard yesterday by Judge McClelland involved importations made by New York representatives of the Freifeld Fur Company of Toronto. In this case the merchandise was small dressed beaver skins, entered as worth $4 and advanced to $4.50 each; entered at $5.50, advanced to $7 each, and a third lot entered at $6.50 and found to be valued at $10 each.

TO AVOID ANTHRAX.

Alternative Methods Suggested for Disinfecting Hides.

Acting Secretary Newton of the Treasury Department has sent out an order to collectors of customs notifying them of methods of disinfection of hides which may be substituted for the method of immersion in a solution of bichloride of mercury.

The circular letter states that, in accordance with a recommendation of the Secretary of Agriculture, the regulations of the Treasury dated May 2, 1910, are amended, whereby either one of two methods named may be used in place of the former practice. The first of these is by immersion in a solution containing 10 per cent. of sodium chloride and 2 per cent. of hydrochloric acid in water, with not less than forty-eight hours' exposure.

The alternative method is of immersion in a solution containing 2,500 parts of a 1 per cent. formic acid solution and one part of mercuric chloride, for not less than twenty-four hours. The Secretary of Agriculture stated to the Treasury Department that these methods of disinfection for anthrax hides or suspected anthrax hides will be acceptable to his department.

GIVE RECOGNITION TO CARRANZA TODAY

Decision Announced by Secretary Lansing After Pan-American Conferees' Final Session.

CALLED CHIEF EXECUTIVE

That Title for Carranza Preferred to "Provisional President"—Carranza Troops Take Toluca.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Formal announcement was made by Secretary of State Lansing at 4 o'clock this afternoon that tomorrow the Carranza Government in Mexico would be recognized as a de facto Government by the Governments of the United States, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, and Uruguay. This announcement followed the fifth and final session of the Pan-American conferees in the office of the Secretary of State. It was made verbally by Secretary Lansing, as follows:

"The conferees, under instructions from their several Governments, will recognize tomorrow the de facto Government in Mexico of which General Carranza is Chief Executive."

The decision to refer to General Carranza as "the Chief Executive" of the de facto Government of Mexico was reached after some discussion as to the proper title. Although "Provisional President" is a generic term applied to the Executive of a republic, fear was expressed in some quarters that, since it had not been used by General Carranza himself, its use by foreign Governments might create the impression in Mexico that he was being chosen to a new office by foreign Governments.

The words "Chief Executive" were used also to avoid any impression that a constitutional Government was being recognized, for, while there is no difference in the benefits of recognition to a de facto or de jure Government, the constitutional order in Mexico will not be proclaimed until a constituent assembly is called some weeks hence. This assembly will formally designate General Carranza as "Provisional President" or "President ad interim," and arrange for the constitutional elections of President and Vice President.

A separate letter notifying the Carranza organization of recognition will be delivered tomorrow by each of the Governments represented in the Pan-American Conference to Señor Arredondo, the special agent of the Carranza Government in Washington, who will hasten to the Mexican border and deliver the letters to General Carranza, who is now en route to the border.

Señor Arredondo, it is supposed, will be designated by Señor Carranza as Ambassador to the United States. Secretary Lansing said today that no decision had been reached yet as to the appointment of an Ambassador to Mexico. Carranza has a number of Consular officers in this country, whose credentials will have to be presented so they may obtain exequaturs. All American Consular officers have been withdrawn from Villista territory.

It is expected that recognition by other South American Governments will quickly follow. Secretary Lansing has been informally notified to that effect. Although not sounded on the subject by the United States, it is presumed that the various European Governments will follow suit within a short time.

Carranzistas Take Toluca.

A cablegram to the Carranza agency today from Hipolito, Mexico, announced the fall of Toluca, which was taken by the Constitutionalist forces Saturday. The opposing troops fled to the jungle. Rafael Buelna, Villista leader on the west coast of Mexico, has fled into the mountain fastnesses of that State, following a defeat by the Constitutionalists.

The Carranza agency reports that five districts, nearly half of the State of Chihuahua, are under control of the Carranzistas. This military movement has cut off Juarez from the interior. People in the towns have armed themselves against attacks from bandits created through the disintegration of the Villista forces. Before evacuating Parral the Villistas sacked it.

Cable advices received today by Eliseo Arredondo report further advances in the value of the Carranza paper currency. It now requires $60 of Constitutionalist paper money to purchase an American $10 gold piece. One week ago it required $150 in paper money to purchase the same coin.

General Carranza's war office has moved from Vera Cruz to Mexico City.

The State Department had advices today from Piedras Negras of a steady improvement in conditions there. Railroad service was reported to be good to points south. The department was informed in advance from Vera Cruz that passenger service to Mexico City had been resumed. Reports from Gomez Palacia indicate conditions rapidly improving. The Carranzistas have control. Great quantities of provisions came to light as soon as the owners were satisfied that they would not be seized.

Announces Shanklin Resignation.

Secretary Lansing today made formal announcement of the resignation of Arnold Shanklin as Consul General at Mexico City, but made no reference to the reason, understood to be Mr. Shanklin's dissatisfaction with the department's attitude toward his differences with the Brazilian Minister to Mexico. The announcement follows:

"Mr. Arnold Shanklin has tendered his resignation as American Consul General at Mexico City and his resignation has been accepted, to take effect at once. Mr. Shanklin, who has been in this country for several months, will return to Mexico City to straighten up his affairs at that place."

Secretary Lansing was asked late today about a report that General Huerta might be turned over to the Carranza Government. He said he had never heard of it.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 18.—Repairs to the Laredo route were completed this afternoon, and it is expected that a through passenger train will leave here tomorrow for Laredo. A passenger train for Vera Cruz is leaving every morning.

The American Red Cross representative, Mr. O'Connor, with other Americans, expects to leave for Vera Cruz Wednesday or Thursday en route home.

The bells of the cathedral and other churches were rung, firecrackers were exploded, and processions with bands of music were formed to celebrate the news of the recognition accorded to the Carranza Government by the United States and six South American republics.

Dan C. Webb Out of Bankruptcy.

Dan C. Webb, for twenty-one years manager of the Broadway Central Hotel at 667 Broadway, who went into bankruptcy in May, was discharged yesterday in the Federal District Court by Judge Augustus N. Hand. He owed $72,327 and turned over all his assets, which were less than $400, to Henry Van Holland, who has been running the hotel for the benefit of his creditors. Webb ascribed his failure to the inconvenience caused by the subway work.

WALSH, SHORT $4,800, MARRIED AS HE FLED

Letters From the Bride Says She Eloped With Missing Ticket Seller to Philadelphia.

Edward Walsh, the twenty-six-year-old ticket-seller who disappeared on Oct. 1 simultaneously with the disappearance of $4,800 from a safe in the Grand Central Terminal, was married on the day of his disappearance in Philadelphia to Molly Donovan, of 769 East 156th Street, the Bronx, and is now on his way with her to San Francisco, according to information in a letter received by the girl's mother, who communicated with the police yesterday. The girl, who appeared to be in ignorance of the fact that detectives were searching for her husband, wrote joyfully that she had married and was having a splendid honeymoon. The letter was mailed from a town in Indiana, and detectives hurried from the city yesterday afternoon hopeful of overtaking the couple.

Walsh's attentions to Miss Donovan were noticed by the friends of both some months ago. The girl was a telephone operator in the 125th Street Station of the New York Central, and Walsh used to meet her there frequently. Before daylight on the morning of Oct. 1, according to Mrs. Donovan, he called for the girl at her home, carrying two suitcases. Mrs. Donovan could not understand his appearance, but she did not anticipate an elopement, and left her daughter talking to him at the front door. When she arose after daylight she found the daughter's room empty. She knew nothing definite about her daughter's movements after that until the receipt of the letter from Indiana.

Edward F. Walsh, the ticket seller's father, of 2,874 Briggs Avenue, the Bronx, has been a baggageman in the Grand Central Terminal for many years and obtained his son's job for him. On account of the fathers' reputation the young man was put in a place of responsibility. He was given the combination to the safe which was robbed, and he was trusted to put into it each day the money he received. After he had disappeared the compartment used by him and four other compartments in the safe were found broken open and looted. Whoever opened the safe bored holes into it with a brace and bit in the effort, it seemed, to make it appear as if entrance had been gained by that means, but, according to the police, the safe was opened by means of the combination.

Several times before his disappearance Walsh reported to his superiors that his cash drawer had been robbed, once of as much as $100. New York Central detectives who investigated these incidents came to suspect Walsh himself, and it is thought that he was aware of their suspicions when he left on Oct. 1.

POLICEMAN CURED BY NEW WAR REMEDY

The new treatment for gas bacillus which has been developed since the beginning of the present war to combat the ravages of the disease among the fighting troops is receiving what is believed to be its first trial in this country at the Thompson Hospital in Rhinebeck, N. Y. The disease itself has been known to the medical profession only a few years and is comparatively rare in this country. The existence of the bacillus was discovered by Dr. William H. Welch of Johns Hopkins University. Before the development of the new treatment it is said that the disease nearly always proved fatal.

George Barber, a Jersey City policeman, was taken to Thompson Hospital about two months ago, and was said to be in a critical condition from the disease. In most cases it is said to cause death in forty-eight hours. Dr. George Chandler of Kingston, N. Y., had recently heard Dr. Lyle of this city describe the new treatment which he had seen used to combat the disease in the German trenches, in a lecture at the University Club in this city. The treatment consists of injections and external applications of hot hydrogen peroxide, camphor, and carbolic acid. Dr. Chandler tried it. It was reported at the hospital last night that the patient was practically well.

Dr. Chandler said last night that the disease was somewhat similar to tetanus and that the germs were carried by cows and horses. They derive their name from the fact that they cause detention of gas in the tissues of the body. Dr. Chandler said until the new treatment was developed, the disease was playing havoc with German troops in the trenches, where it was communicated through even slight cuts in the surface of the skin.

HINT AT ARMY SCANDAL.

Regular Officers Drew Aviation Pay, Witnesses Assert.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 18.—In the trial by court-martial today of Lieut. Col. Lewis E. Goodier, Judge Advocate of the Western Department, two army aviators, both officers of the army, testified that certain officers of the aviation section of the army drew "flying pay," a 35 per cent. increase over regular pay, for hazardous work, who could not operate aeroplanes at all.

Colonel Goodier is on trial on a charge of inciting officers to prefer charges against Captain Arthur S. Cowan of the Signal Corps, Commander of the San Diego Aviation School. According to the testimony given today, Colonel Goodier, as Judge Advocate, gave advice to officers who did prefer charges against Cowan, charges that never came to trial, but according to the two witnesses called today, this advice was given only on request.

Lieutenant Byron Jones, an army aviator, testified that Captain Cowan had been drawing "flying pay" since July, 1913, when he was not capable of taking a machine into the air.

Britain Tells Greece That Treaty Must Be Upheld

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—The Daily News says this morning:

"It is understood that the Government has made strong representations to Greece that her treaty obligations must be upheld and is now awaiting her reply."

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—News that the Bulgarian army operating against Vranya has succeeded in capturing that city, thus cutting the railroad between Nish and Saloniki; that Italy and Russia have declared war on Bulgaria, and that the Quadruple Entente Powers have informed Greece that they do not accept her interpretation of the treaty with Serbia, which she has renounced, are the outstanding features in the latest developments of the Balkan situation.

Russia's decision to fight Bulgaria is made known in a manifesto by the Czar, which seems likely to impress the Bulgarian people, if it should become known to them. It is possible that the action which Russia and Italy intend to take in the Balkans will now be clearly defined. Meanwhile a squadron has left Italy under sealed orders, presumably to participate in the blockade of the Bulgarian coast.

The new pressure on Greece took the form of a friendly note handed to Premier Zaimis by the British and Russian Ministers. Besides pointing out that the entente's interpretation of Greece's treaty obligations to Serbia was not in conformity with that of the Greek Government, the communication outlined the plans of the Allies and their intention to land more troops at Saloniki.

It is not believed here that anything but allied success will have any influence with Greece, or, for that matter, with Rumania, although the fact that Greece is at least considering the advisability of going over to the Allies and is prepared to do so should events so shape themselves as to render the move prudent is indicated by the Government organ Neon Asty of Athens, which says that the recent council of Ministers adopted measures to be taken should the operations on the Serbo-Bulgarian frontier bring the Bulgarians into Greece, an eventuality which, the paper says, the Government will not tolerate.

The number of British and French troops which are being disembarked at Saloniki is so large, according to a dispatch from Athens, that it is impossible to forward them all promptly by rail to Serbia, and some of the troops are making forced marches northward across Greek territory.

Teuton Progress in the North.

The latest German official report of the operations in Serbia, issued by the Berlin War Office yesterday, show that the Austrian Army, which for so long has been held back on the Save River, along the northwestern border, has at last broken down the desperate resistance of the Serbs and occupied Obrenovats. The bulletin says:

Austro-Hungarian troops under General Koevess captured the town of Obrenovatz.

South of Belgrade the German and Austro-Hungarian units, after a battle, reached the heights east of Vranio, south of Ripanj, and south of Grocka, on the Danube. (This indicates an advance of about twelve miles along the railroad.)

The right wing of the army of General von Gallwitz, has captured the region west of Seone, as well as the villages of Vobanj and Malakrisna. The plateau at Lucica, and those south and east of Bozevac, as far as Mialjenovac, were wrested from the enemy.

The army of General Bogatcheff, (commander of the First Bulgarian Army,) rushed forward by way of Inovo toward Miajecal, and in the direction of the valley of Pirot, (in the direction of Nish, which is about forty miles west of the town of Pirot.)

Other Bulgarian troops captured Vranya, in the valley of the upper Mcrava, and, further south, already have crossed the Egri-Palanka-Stip line.

Austrians Storm a Mountain.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19, via London, Oct. 20.—The following imperial manifesto has been issued:

"We hereby make known to all our loyal subjects that the treason of Bulgaria to the Slav cause, prepared with perfidy since the beginning of the war, has now, although it seemed impossible, become an accomplished fact. Bulgarian troops have attacked our loyal ally, Serbia, already bleeding in the struggle against a stronger enemy.

"Russia and the great powers, our allies, tried to dissuade the Government of Ferdinand of Coburg from taking this fatal step. The realization of the ancient aspirations of the Bulgar people regarding the annexation of Macedonia was assured to Bulgaria by other means, in conformity with Slav interests, but underhand methods prompted by the Germans and fratricidal hatred of the Serbians triumphed.

"Bulgaria, our co-religionist, liberated but a short time ago from the Turkish yoke by the fraternal love of the Russian people, openly took sides with the enemies of the Christian faith, Slavism, and Russia.

"The Russian people regard with sorrow the treason of Bulgaria, which was so near to it until these last few days, and, with bleeding heart, it draws its sword against her, leaving the fate of the betrayer of the Slav cause to the just punishment of God."

REPULSE GERMAN DRIVE NEAR RHEIMS

French Are Forced from Trenches by German Assaults, Aided by Gas.

BUT REGAIN LOST GROUND

Germans Take the Offensive in Belgium Also, but Are Thrown Back.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—An assault on the French line east of Rheims was made by the German forces today on a wide front and in great numbers. Prolonged and violent bombardment and the use of gas shells and clouds of chlorine gas preceded the attack which penetrated part of the French trenches.

A sharp counterattack by Joffre's soldiers followed, and, according to the official bulletin issued in Paris tonight, a large part of the lost ground was regained. With another French onslaught, it is said, the Germans were driven back to their own lines.

The Germans have also taken the offensive along the Yper-Ypres Canal in Belgium, and last night, according to Belgian official advices, gained a foothold on the east bank. From this point they have since been dislodged.

The French night bulletin says:

To the east of Rheims the enemy attempted an attack with strong forces this morning on a front of ten kilometers, (approximately 6.2 miles,) between La Pompelle and Prosnes, which ended in a complete check. This attack had been most carefully prepared, it being preceded by a prolonged bombardment by the artillery, with the employment of suffocating shells and banks of chlorine gas.

The enemy infantry succeeded at first in penetrating some parts of our trench of the first line, but was almost completely driven out by immediate counterattacks.

In the afternoon an energetic counteroffensive resulted in the expulsion of the last enemy troops, who were thus entirely thrown back into the trenches which they had left. The German infantry experienced in the course of that fruitless attempt heavy losses.

In the rest of the front there were artillery engagements. These were particularly violent in Artois, in the sector of Loos, to the north of the Aisne, on the plateau of Nouvron, between the Meuse and the Moselle, in the forest of Apremont and in Lorraine, to the south of Leintrey.

The day bulletin reads:

German forces last night delivered three serious attacks, making use of hand grenades, in the Bois-en-Hache, to the northeast of Souchez. Our infantry, firmly intrenched in the position recently conquered by us, completely repulsed their assailants. In this they were helped by our batteries.

To the south of the River Somme, in the sector of Lihens, there were spirited rifle exchanges in which both sides took part.

In the Champagne district there has been some fighting with bombs to the east of the neighboring farm.

The concentrated fire of our artillery against the batteries of the enemy put a stop to a severe bombardment directed by them against our position at Les Eparges. There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

A group of French aviators during the night of Oct. 17 and 18 bombarded the German aviation field at Burlioncourt, to the northeast of Chateau Salins. It was apparent that certain hangars were demolished.

A Belgian official communication says:

After having taken last evening, as the result of a violent bombardment, a post established on the east bank of the Ypers-Ypres Canal, the Germans were driven out that night by our troops.

There has been an intermittent bombardment at various points along our front, in the neighborhood of Oostkerke, Noordschoote, and the "Ferryman's House."

The German Army Headquarters Staff statement said:

"In the Western theatre there were no important incidents."

TALKS OF "REVOLUTION."

Liberal Member Predicts Failure of This Cabinet and the Next.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—Horatio Bottomley, Liberal member of Parliament, in a speech at Newcastle last night, predicted the immediate collapse of the coalition Government. He said that the Premier, for all practical purposes, already had resigned and would be succeeded by Andrew Bonar Law, but that the new experiment would be no more successful than the coalition and that before the end of the war "we should have a revolution or a national council of business men."

ASQUITH'S ILLNESS POSTPONES CRISIS

But "War Committee" of British Cabinet Holds Session with French War Minister Present.

PESSIMISM IS DECREASING

Dardanelles Campaign Not to be Abandoned—Recruiting Controversy Silenced.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—With the announcement of Premier Asquith's illness yesterday the threatened Cabinet crisis was postponed, and it is probable that action will not be taken until Mr. Asquith recovers, which may not be for a week.

The Premier's illness has had the effect of producing a greater air of calm in political circles than would otherwise have attended the resignation of Sir Edward Carson from the Attorney Generalship, and from present appearances there will be no more resignations from the Cabinet.

Late last night it became known that a committee of the Cabinet, known as the "War Committee," met yesterday afternoon and was joined by Alexander Millerand, the French Minister of War; Paul Cambon, the French Ambassador to Great Britain, and M. Millerand's Secretary. The committee sat for an hour and a half, after which another Cabinet council was held at the House of Commons.

Nothing is made public regarding the circumstances calling for two Cabinet meetings in the same day, as well as the conference of the War Committee with the French War Minister, but it may be assumed that they had to do with the development of the military situation in the Near East.

The Prime Minister is suffering from an attack of gastro-intestinal catarrh, which will necessitate a few days of complete rest.

Mr. Asquith was indisposed on Monday, but attended that day's Cabinet meeting, and received a number of visitors during the evening. His condition was so aggravated yesterday that he consulted a physician, who ordered him to remain in bed for several days and then take a rest of a few days in the country.

The Cabinet had been holding long and frequent meetings since the Balkan crisis developed. Both newspapers and politicians agree that vital differences of opinion had arisen over the conscription issue and the Near East question.

The resignation of Sir Edward Carson, the Attorney General, was the first proof of differences in the Cabinet. The reason assigned for his withdrawal is disagreement with the Cabinet's policy in regard to the Near East, but the specific point of division is withheld, as in the case of the retirement of Foreign Minister Delcassé of France, in whose footsteps Sir Edward appears to follow.

The Cabinet and the whole country as a whole would regard a general election on party lines as a calamity. If such a contest were fought on the question of conscription it might be expected to foment great bitterness and class dissension. It is generally agreed, however, that, for the moment at least, the controversy over recruiting has been silenced, for the conscriptionists, or a majority of them, have decided to give Lord Derby's new scheme a fair trial.

So far as the Dardanelles and the Balkans are concerned, a good deal of the pessimism which reigned a week ago has disappeared. It is believed that, instead of any idea existing of abandoning the attempt to open the Strait and sea route to Constantinople, the appointment of General Sir Charles Munro means a more strenuous effort, and that when the right moment comes the Italian Navy, if not Italian troops, will co-operate.

It is known that the forces on Gallipoli have not been weakened for the Balkan campaign, and, while the task is difficult, the majority of the British public are confident that it will ultimately be accomplished.

The Irish Times said yesterday:

"We make two inferences. One is that the Dardanelles campaign is not going to be abandoned. The other is that in this quarter, and we hope in all other quarters, the war is going to be prosecuted with new vigor and purpose."

One complaint from the newspapers is that a Cabinet of twenty-two members is too cumbersome a body to manage the affairs of the Government. On the other hand, there is said to be dissatisfaction in the Cabinet that the conduct of the war is given over to a small

Summary Punishment Inflicted Upon Suspected Bandits and No Details Are Given—Three Americans Dead and Four Wounded on Wrecked Train.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, Oct. 19.—Ten Mexicans today paid with their lives for alleged complicity in last night's wrecking of a St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico passenger train on the outskirts of Brownsville, the killing of three Americans, and the wounding of four others. Peace officers said tonight they had clues to other Mexicans connected with the robbers. No secret was made that more would be killed if the civilian posses caught them.

The Americans killed by the Mexican bandits were:

Engineer H. H. Kendall, pinned beneath engine.

Dr. E. S. McCain, Deputy State Health Officer at Brownsville, shot.

Corporal McBee, Third United States Cavalry, shot.

Those injured were Harry J. Wallis, Brownsville, shot in arm; R. Woodhall, fireman, scalded and bruised; Claude J. Brishear, Troop A, Sixth Cavalry, shot in the jaw, and C. H. Laymon, Troop D, Third Cavalry, shot in neck and leg.

The wrecking of the train, which occurred near Olmito, seven miles north of here, last night, was followed by the robbery of the passengers. The Mexicans are declared to be followers of Luis de la Rosa, leader of the so-called Texas revolution.

Civil officers here were in most cases powerless to prevent summary executions of Mexicans, for many of the posses were composed mostly of men who worked independently of civil or military authority. The military authorities under their present instructions have no power to act, except in cases of actual fighting on the river front, in which case they may take charge temporarily of directing the operations of any civilians who may be near the scene of the fight. In order to make search, or even arrests, except in emergencies, the military authorities have had to call for the aid of civil officers, who alone have the right of search and arrest.

Mexican Passenger First Victim.

The first Mexican killed as an act of reprisal by the posses was an unidentified young man, a passenger on the train, who was accused of revealing the hiding place of Dr. F. S. McCain, Deputy State Health Officer here, who took refuge in the lavatory of the car when the bandits began firing. Sheriff W. T. Vann of Brownsville denied reports of this Mexican's death, but tonight it developed that posses killed the man after Sheriff Vann left the scene of the wreck. This Mexican was himself threatened by the train robbers because of his unusually fair complexion, but was not molested after he told them where two of the "Gringoes" whom they were hunting had hidden.

Only the bare facts of the killing of other Mexicans today were obtainable, as the posses would not give details. The second Mexican killed was alleged to be a "partner" of the young man on the train. The vague meaning of the word "partner" was not made clear. Four Mexicans were hanged to trees at various points, and four others were shot. The most reliable information indicated that these shootings were on or near the banks of the Rio Grande, where the closest watch for Mexicans was maintained for a distance of 100 miles. This watch extended much further than the bandits could have traveled in a day.

1,500 Soldiers Take Up Search.

Probably 1,500 cavalrymen and infantry today joined in searching for traces of the bandits. Hundreds of civilians joined them.

Civil and military authorities today did not agree on whether any of the bandits had crossed from the Mexican side of the river. Military officers believed the raid was made up from the American side. Luis de la Rosa, whom two passengers claimed they recognized among the robbers, has several times been seen in Matamoros, and American army officers had asked for his arrest by Carranza officials. The latter about two weeks ago announced officially that De la Rosa had a bandit camp on the Mexican side about thirty miles above Brownsville. It was said they were trying to capture him. Since that announcement nothing has been heard of him until last night.

The death of Doctor McCain late today was the third to result from the wreck. Doctor McCain was shot in the abdomen when the bandits learned that he had taken refuge in the car lavatory and then fired through the door. Harry J. Wallis, prominent in Texas politics, was wounded slightly at the same time. The four injured, three of them by bullet wounds and the fourth by scalds when the train was wrecked by the removal of a rail, were said tonight to be on the way to recovery.

Five prisoners were brought to the Brownsville jail today, where they were believed to be safe from violence, but the Brownsville jail is the only institution of its kind in this valley, and the chances of a suspected Mexican reaching here as a prisoner from any distance during the present degree of excitement are small.

SINK 6 GERMAN SHIPS, TORPEDO 2 OTHERS

British Submarines Reach a New Climax of Activity in the Baltic.

ATTACK 4 NEAR STOCKHOLM

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 19.—Four German steamers, the Pernambuco, Söderhamn, Johannes-Russ, and Delalfven, have been torpedoed in the Baltic Sea off Oxeloesund, to the south of Stockholm, by a British submarine.

The Pernambuco and Dalafven were sunk, but the Söderhamn and Johannes-Russ are still afloat. The crews of all the steamers were saved.

The Söderhamn, which was leaded with wood, and the Pernambuco, with a cargo of iron ore, were bound for Germany. The destinations of the Johannes-Russ and Dalafven are not known.

In addition, according to reports from various pilot stations, four other German steamers were sent to the bottom by British submarines outside the southern Stockholm archipelago during the last twenty-four hours. The names of these vessels have not yet become known.

British sailors sank them by opening their sea valves, after having given the German crews plenty of time to leave their vessels.

The Dalalfven was caught and sunk just outside Swedish waters and under the eyes of Swedish warships.

There are now forty-one German ships, mostly iron ore carriers, blockaded in Swedish waters.

The Pernambuco was a vessel of 4,788 tons, the Söderhamn of 1,499 tons, and the Johannes-Russ of 1,751 tons. The Dalalfven is not mentioned in available shipping records.

GEFLE, Sweden, Oct. 19.—The Nordlandsposten states that the Swedish Legation at Petrograd has informed the Foreign Office at Stockholm that the Swedish steamer Nike has been captured by a British submarine.

The Nike was on her way from a Swedish port for Stettin, Germany, with a cargo of ore. She was taken by the submarine to the Russian port of Reval.

A PROTEST BY NORWAY.

Says Steamer Eir Was Illegally Seized by Germany.

LONDON, Oct. 19. — The Norwegian Government, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Copenhagen, has requested Germany to release the Norwegian steamer Eir, recently taken into a German port under the escort of a German torpedo boat. The Norwegian authorities declare that the cargo of the Eir consisted of cotton, which Germany has not declared contraband, and further that the steamer was captured in international waters.

The cotton, the Copenhagen dispatch adds, appears to have been destined in part for Gothenburg, Sweden, and the remainder for Copenhagen to an American, the representative of a New York firm, who since is alleged to have disappeared from Copenhagen.

M'ANENY TO RESIGN TO JOIN THE TIMES

WILL FINISH WORK IN HAND

Regrets Leaving Associates, but Feels That He Will Still Be in the Public's Service.

George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen, announced last night that he would resign his office at the end of the term of the present Board, in January next. As announced elsewhere in this newspaper, he will be connected with THE NEW YORK TIMES as an associate in its management. Mr. McAneny gave out this statement last night at his home, 19 East Forty-seventh Street:

As THE NEW YORK TIMES will announce tomorrow, I have accepted Mr. Ochs's invitation to enter the service of that paper as his associate in its management.

I shall not, however, resign my city office until after the end of the term of the present Board of Aldermen, in January next, and not, of course, until proper disposition has been made in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the measures before the several committees of which I am Chairman.

After six years of service at the City Hall I shall leave it, naturally, with regret; but it is to be my good fortune to exchange one field of public service for another, and my opportunities for aiding the cause of good government will not be abridged.

I shall give up, too, with a feeling of real loss my daily association with Mayor Mitchel and my other colleagues in the administration. Upon their rare ability and integrity a new order of city government has been building, and it has been a constant privilege to work with them.

Mr. McAneny's announcement came as a surprise to politicians and city officials, only Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast having been informed of his intention.

It is the understanding of the Corporation Counsel's office that a successor to Mr. McAneny will not be elected until the fall of 1916. The rules which apply to the election of a successor to President McCormack of Richmond, who died last Summer, will apply, it was said at the Corporation Counsel's office, in the case of Mr. McAneny.

After Mr. McAneny's resignation next January, the newly elected Vice Chairman of the Board of Aldermen, will serve until a President is elected at the general election in the Fall. Under a recent decision of the Court of Appeals a vacancy in the office of President of the Board of Aldermen shall be filled permanently at the general election next following. An ad interim appointment shall be made by the Board of Aldermen, but only until December 31 of the year in which the vacancy occurs.

Mr. McAneny has had much newspaper experience. He began as a reporter on the old Jersey City Journal and was connected with The New York World and Evening World from 1885 until 1889. From the latter date until 1892 he continued as a correspondent of New York papers. From 1892 until 1902 he was Secretary, then the executive office, of the Civil Service Reform Association and the National Civil Service Reform League. TO ADD 185 SHIPS TO AMERICAN NAVY

WILL COST HALF A BILLION

With Annual Upkeep the Total Reaches $1,000,000,000—An Increase of 11,500 Men.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Secretary Daniels tonight announced the details of the national defense program for the navy. It embraces the expenditure of $502,482,214 during the next five years for construction of new vessels, aviation, and reserve of munitions. As this will be in addition to the annual appropriation of more than $100,000,000 for the upkeep of the navy, aggregating more than $500,000,000 in the next five years, exclusive of new construction, it is apparent that the plans of the Administration call for an expenditure of more than $1,000,000,000 on the navy during the next five years, or an average of more than $200,000,000 for each annual naval appropriation bill.

President Wilson will urge Congress to adopt the five-year program of naval increase recommended by Secretary Daniels. Here are the new units, which it is proposed to add to the navy during that period.

Battleships	2	2	2	2	2	10

Hospital ship	1	0	0	0	0	1
Total	55	34	27	35	34	185

The Five-year Grand Total.

The amount to be spent for construction of these new vessels during the fiscal years 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921 will be $422,984,087. In addition it will be necessary to spend during the next two years $48,518,127 for the completion of new naval units authorized in the last two years, and which are now either under construction or just about to be started. The grand total to be spent on the increase of the navy in the next five years will be as follows:

For 185 new ships	$422,984,087
For continuing ships already authorized	48,518,127
For aviation	6,000,000
For reserve supply of munitions	25,000,000
Total for increase	$502,482,214
Total for the navy for 5 years	$1,017,482,214

Of this grand total the official estimates for the navy, approved by the President, call for the appropriation of $217,652,173.32 at the coming session of Congress. This would be an increase of $67,990,308.44 over last year's appropriation, which amounted to $149,661,864.88. Under this recommendation the amount to be appropriated at the coming Congressional session for new naval construction, including $8,000,000 for increasing the reserve of munitions and $2,000,000 for aviation, is $95,372,127, of which $57,003,000 is for new construction which will be recommended during the coming Congress, and $28,369,127 for continuing the program of new construction which was authorized by the Sixty-third Congress. The Sixty-third Congress authorized the construction of five battleships, twelve destroyers, one fuel ship, and twenty-six submarines, three of which are to be of seagoing type and twenty-three of coast defense type.

In announcing the program tonight Secretary Daniels said:

Cost of Each Type of Ship.

"The Bureau of Construction and Repair, owing to the increased size and protection of the new battleships, estimates that each dreadnought will cost, including armor and armament, $18,800,000. A portion of this increase may be attributed to the greater cost of materials, which are higher than formerly, and, perhaps, abnormally high, owing to the great demand caused by the war in Europe. It may be that those prices will be reduced, if so, the Congress will not have to appropriate so much money. Then, again, the demand for materials entering into the construction of vessels may continue to be as great as or greater than at present, so that the estimates will not be too high.

MRS. GALT OPPOSES VOTES FOR WOMEN

NOT AN ACTIVE WORKER

But Her Declaration Gives Comfort to the Anti-Suffragists in the National Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The attitude of Mrs. Norman Galt, fiancée of President Wilson, on the votes for women question was made known today, when, without allowing herself to be interviewed, Mrs. Galt permitted the statement to go out that she was not for suffrage.

This does not mean that Mrs. Galt is an active "anti." She has not allied herself with either party, and having lived just half her life in Washington, where even men have not had the vote in forty years, is not vitally interested in the subject. This declaration from Mrs. Galt on the fateful Oct. 19, just as the President was hastening to vote "yes" on the question, is giving great comfort to the anti-suffragists of the District of Columbia, and will be regarded as active support in the remaining campaign States—Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts.

Mrs. Marshall, wife of the Vice President; Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. Edward Douglas White, wife of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; Mrs. Philip H. Sheridan, Mrs. Robert T. Lincoln, and Miss Mabel Boardman are a few of the well-known women not only not in favor of votes for women, but emphatically opposed to the movement. Mrs. Elihu Root and Mrs. John W. Weeks, whose respective husbands are Presidential possibilities, are both active members of the Anti-Suffrage Society, one in New York, the other in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Galt will be in very good company from a social point of view, should she agree to join the Anti-Suffrage Society of the District of Columbia, as this body includes leading women of every circle represented in Washington.

WILSON VOTES "YES," IN PERIL FROM HORSE

President Followed to Booth by Crowd—Works on Nation's Affairs on Train.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 19.—President Wilson arrived at Princeton a few minutes after noon today and was met at the railroad station by a cheering throng, among whom were hundreds of students from the university. As he walked to the old firehouse in Chambers Street, where another crowd had collected to greet him, he smiled and removed his hat frequently. Then he went into the polling booth and made his X mark beside the word "Yes" in the space allotted to the woman suffrage amendment. He also voted in favor of two proposed amendments of secondary importance.

The big crowd of students began their college yells as the President left the firehouse and he again bowed and smiled in recognition of the demonstration. Several photographers asked him to pose, but he refused, saying:

"No, this is too serious a matter to make a spectacle of it."

In many ways the demonstration was unusual, for, from the time the President's train arrived here until he left at 1:50 o'clock in the afternoon, he was followed by a crowd. A score of the most prominent leaders in the woman suffrage movement here waited on Mr. Wilson to thank him for his statement in favor of the cause.

The most exciting incident of the President's day in Princeton came as he was walking into the railroad station to take the train back to Washington. He was surrounded by a mob of cheering people and as he approached the station a grocery wagon plunged into it.

"Who do you think you are?" the boy driver shouted as he tried to pull in his horse. He got the animal under control just as Secret Service men jumped to grab its head, for the animal was

WOMEN WILL KEEP UP FIGHT

Leaders Say Political Experience Gained Will Prove Invaluable.

CARRIED ONLY ONE COUNTY

ONLY FEW FRAUD CHARGES

Woman suffrage was defeated at the special election in New Jersey yesterday, when it had its first test in any Eastern State.

Returns received up to 3 o'clock this morning show a majority of 46,278 against it, with 239 out of 1,691 election districts missing.

An unusually heavy vote for a special election was cast. The latest returns indicate that the total vote throughout the State ran considerably above 300,000. This was double the vote that had been expected in political circles.

There can be no doubt of the decisive sentiment against the enfranchisement of women among the voters. Every county except one went solidly against the Constitutional amendment, some with towering majorities. The only exception was Ocean County, where the suffrage amendment has received a majority of 210.

Essex County, where the two organizations composed of women contending for the enfranchisement of their sex had conducted a tremendous campaign for the last six months, went against the suffrage amendment by a majority which is estimated by the Secretary of State at 15,000. This is one of the largest in the history of that county, and certainly the largest in proportion to the total vote cast in any election ever held in New Jersey.

Big Vote Surprised Leaders.

The vote that was polled for and against the amendment surprised the political leaders, who declared it was out of all proportion to the vote usually cast in a special election. That was particularly true in such industrial centres as Newark, Paterson, Elizabeth, and Camden.

The advocates of the suffrage cause were bitterly disappointed over the outcome in Paterson, where they had expected a heavy vote from the workers in the silk mills, a large proportion of whom are affiliated with the Socialist Party, which indorsed woman suffrage in its platform this Fall.

Women Must Wait Five Years.

Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, President of the Woman's Political Union, and Mrs. Edward L. Feickert, President of the Woman Suffrage Association of New Jersey, declared that defeat saw them undaunted and that they would renew their fight with the rising of today's sun.

Under a provision of the New Jersey Constitution, however, it will be impossible to submit the proposed constitutional amendment which was defeated by the voters yesterday within the next five years.

A constitutional amendment submitted yesterday for the purpose of repealing this provision of the fundamental law and make constitutional amendments easier was defeated with the suffrage amendment in the special election.

Few localities registered a majority for the woman suffrage amendment, and in each instance these majorities were puny, while the majorities against were heavy. In Hoboken every one of the forty-five election districts went against the amendment.

Wilson Indorsement Futile.

President Wilson's indorsement of the suffrage cause and his pledge to vote for the Constitutional amendment on which the suffragists of New Jersey had built such strong hopes did not help to carry the day for the suffragists even in the precinct where he himself cast his ballot yesterday.

President Wilson voted in the Seventh Precinct of Princeton Borough. The vote cast in that district stood 64 for the amendment and 160 against, a majority of almost 100.

In the voting precinct of Governor Fielder of New Jersey, who was opposed to woman suffrage, the amendment carried by 53 majority. This was in the silk stocking ward of Jersey City.

Mrs. Galt, the President's fiancée, while Mr. Wilson was on his way to Princeton to vote "Yes," let it be known in Washington that she is opposed to women voting.

Mrs. Van Winkle Charges Frauds.

The charge that many fraudulent votes were cast and that the anti-suffrage movement in New Jersey was backed by crooked politicians, the brewery interests, and the Public Service Corporation, was made late last night by Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, President of the Woman's Political Union.

quarters of the union at 79 Halsey Street, Newark, but the crowd became so large that the women adjourned to the Halsey Street Methodist Church to talk over the result of the vote. Mrs. Van Winkle said:

"There were frauds. Men came in and voted twice, and that wasn't all. I can't tell you anything more now. But I had Burns detectives at work, and they got a lot of facts. They were watching James R. Nugent, the Democratic leader, and his gang of workers, and also the representatives of the brewery interests and the Public Service Corporation.

"The so-called anti campaign was a mere sham. These men, these interests were the real antis. Any woman who took any part in the anti-suffrage campaign should be ashamed to come out into the sunlight."

Suffragists Receive Returns.

The suffragists had made elaborate arrangements to receive the returns. The Woman's Political Union had a special wire service into its headquarters at Newark, and in addition had rented a theatre for the night, where the rank and file of the suffrage army could gather and see the figures thrown on the screen. The Woman's Suffrage Association of New Jersey had a special wire service at their headquarters in Jersey.

From the very beginning they found little in the returns to cheer them. The very first returns to come were from Jersey City The first district heard from was the Third in the Fourth Ward of Jersey City. The vote in that district stood 62 for and 84 against.

The suffrage leaders at first sought to convince their sisters in the ranks that these figures were a hopeful sign and that they had expected a much larger majority against suffrage in this district. Then came in the figures from the Tenth Precinct of the Fourth Ward. This was 48 for and 99 against.

These early returns still left ground for hope, but soon came the figures from Newark, the stronghold of James Nugent, the Democratic leader, whose face had been set like adamant against the suffragists and all their works.

The suffrage organizations had put up a tremendous fight there. The very first returns from Essex County showed that sixteen out of ninety-six districts in Newark had given only 137 votes for woman suffrage to 1,412 against.

Suffrage leaders both in New Jersey and in this State, after the early returns had begun to spell out the story of defeat for their cause, admitted that the failure of the amendment enfranchising New Jersey's women would influence the result in this State, in Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, where the test will come on Nov. 2.

LIKE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

Large Vote, Few Fraud Charges—Politicians Against Suffrage.

With thousands of women who want the right to vote acting as watchers at the polls or hurrying about in automobiles urging men to support the cause and offering them rides to the voting booths in their districts, New Jersey, the first of the Eastern States where the fight for woman suffrage has been put to the test, experienced the most unusual election day in its history.

Facing many odds, as they found the great political machines arrayed against them in some of the most important centres of population, the women put up strenuous and unfaltering battle, and by their activity managed to get out a heavy vote, when it is taken into consideration that interest, in the past, has not been at fever heat where special elections were concerned.

The women knew that much would rest on the result in Essex, Bergen, Passaic, Hudson, and Union Counties in the northern part of the State, and in Camden County in the southern tier, and accordingly they put forth their best efforts in those localities. The real storm centre, perhaps, was in Essex County, where the forces of James R. Nugent, Democratic leader, were out in the open against the women who wanted the vote. Newark, the biggest city in New Jersey, is in that county.

Heavy Vote Not Expected.

The unexpectedly heavy voting all over the State was especially noticed there. From the opening of the polls at 6 o'clock in the morning to the end of the ballot taking at 7 o'clock in the evening all of Newark was tensely alive. The activity made it seem more like a Presidential contest than a special election on Constitutional amendments.

Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, President of the Women's Political Union, went to the suffragist headquarters, 79 Halsey Street, at 4 o'clock in the morning and remained there until the result of the election was known. She was the commander in chief of the suffrage forces and was kept busy all day directing watchers, messengers, and others working under her.

Among the complaints that came to the headquarters from districts predominantly under the control of Nugent were many that the women were not receiving courteous treatment. Some of the men at the polls seemed to take delight in assuming a facetious attitude toward the women watchers, declining to give serious answers to their questions. Several of the women were offended and wanted to quit, but by far the greater number were defiant and eager to show the men that they could stand their ground.

Difficulties of the Watchers.

Efficiency on the part of many of the watchers was manifested in difficult situations. For example, in the polling place at 78 Greene Street, in the Fourth Ward, a man, according to the suffragists, began the morning with electioneering. The woman watcher on duty at once complained, but he did not stop. The watcher, without wasting words, telephoned to headquarters, and within a few minutes Mrs. Frank H. Sumner arrived in an automobile, she being one of the minutewomen, ready all day long for just such emergencies.

After observing the man for herself, she drove to Police Headquarters and lodged a formal complaint. Within a few minutes a policeman had warned the man not to abuse his privilege at the polling place, and there was no more trouble in or around that booth.

The women were always quick to challenge or complain, and when they were sustained by appeals to law or authority they enforced their points. Sometimes they were the victims of too heading enthusiasm and of ignorance of the law, but in such instances they admitted it gracefully when proved to be in the wrong.

One of the women most active in Newark during the day was "General" Rosalie C. Jones, who led the suffrage hikes to Albany and Washington. She was doing general overseeing work when she learned that a woman watcher at 33 Court Street had been forced to leave her post. Then she obtained a watcher's badge and hurried to the booth, where she remained until the polls closed.

Despite the activity of suffragists and their opponents in Newark, the election was orderly, only a few arrests being made. Mayor Thomas L. Raymond, who voted for the suffrage amendment early in the day, gave special instructions to the police to see that incipient disorder was headed off.

No Fraud Charges in Court.

Though many general charges of fraud were made by the suffragists during the day, few specific accusations were made, and none before a court. Some of the woman at suffrage headquarters said that repeaters were busy in certain wards, but they did not place responsibility for these, except upon the Democratic machine in general. It seemed that the careful precautions taken against fraud By the suffragists were effective, if dishonesty were contemplated. One of these precautions was a reward of $100 offered by a Men's Suffragist Committee of One Hundred through George M. La Monte, State Banking and Insurance Commissioner, for the arrest of any person found guilty of repeating at the polls.

The suffrage leaders said that they would not be prepared to announce the extent of frauds until they received complete returns from their watchers at the polls.

In Camden, across the river from Philadelphia, the suffragists found themselves opposed by the strong Republican organization. State Chairman Bugbie announced that he was against the suffragist cause, but added that he did not make the announcement as leader of his party in the State, but as an individual voter. The suffrage workers, however, felt that the effect would be the same.

Women in Whirlwind Finish.

In the larger municipalities such as Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Trenton, Paterson, and Camden the women, and especially those in favor of suffrage, were out for a whirlwind finish to their bitterly fought campaign for the vote. Street cars and wagons were covered with thousands of cartoons and picturesque posters calling upon the people to aid the cause.

Excited women dashed up and down the streets in automobiles bedecked with great suffrage banners, and scores of them spoke to the crowds wherever crowds would collect, asking them to go to the polls. If any voter wanted a ride to a polling booth he got it. Hundreds upon hundreds who would not otherwise have taken enough interest to go to the polls were hunted up in their homes. Old-time politicians said the women certainly made the most of such organization as they had been able to get together.

While the anti-suffrage workers were less spectacular in their methods they strove none the less earnestly to defeat the amendment. They called upon men to forget party lines and join in the fight to beat the suffragists. It was estimated that from 5,000 to 6,000 women participated actively in the fight, the majority of them members of the suffrage organization.

Party Machines Were Anti.

While the party leaders in most of the counties except Essex and Camden said they were not taking sides, suffragists were open in their charge that as a general proposition the politicians were working against them and while unwilling to come out in the open for fear of the result, should the suffragists win, were doing as much as they could, quietly, to defeat the amendment.

The reports which came in from most of the counties were that except in isolated cases the balloting was carried on with the greatest care as to honesty and fairness.

As a general thing, the law against the opening of saloons while the votes were being cast was well observed, although there were several complaints in the larger cities. The closing of the saloons worked against rather than for the suffragists, as there was plenty of evidence that most of the saloon men were opposed strongly to the passage of the amendment. With their saloons closed, they were able to give more time to getting out the vote which they controlled, the suffragists charged. A press report from Paterson was to the effect that the saloon keepers had worked steadily throughout the day and had sent many men to the polls.

An indication of how the vote was cast was given by figures sent from Jersey City. Up to noon 8,000 votes had been cast, or about one-quarter of the number of voters then registered. There have been about 40,000 votes cast in Jersey City in a Presidential year.

There was a heavy vote by the commuters early in the day, and this was the first evidence that the election, as the suffragists had predicted, had roused New Jersey to an unusual interest, and that for once a special election would be held which would get out a large percentage of the votes cast in a Presidential year.

Two Other Amendments Voted On.

While the suffrage amendment held the public attention in New Jersey, two other proposed constitutional amendments were voted upon. Under the present Constitution, a vote to amend it cannot be taken more frequently than once in five years, and one of the amendments voted on yesterday was to strike this restriction from the Constitution, so that amendments might be voted upon as often as they passed two successive Legislatures. The suffragists were particularly desirous of passing this amendment, so that, if defeated yesterday, they might have the legal right to force another suffrage referendum two years from now, or when the submission of the vote to the people should have passed two Legislatures.

The other proposed amendment was to permit excess condemnation in cases where State or local authorities took over property for public uses. It has been argued that the authorities should be permitted, when condemning property, to purchase lots adjoining those actually needed for public purposes so that, when the erection of a public building or the opening of a street or park increased the value of abutting property, the authorities might reap the benefits. Also, it was argued, the authorities sometimes needed larger land plots while a building was in course of erection than that on which the building actually stood.

OLD FRIENDS GREET TUMULTY.

Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, arrived at Jersey City at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon and cast his vote on the suffrage amendment in the polling place in the Fourth Ward opposite his old home. He was greeted by many friends as he walked up Grove Street from the Pennsylvania Railroad Station.

As he was approaching the voting booth Mr. Tumulty was approached by Samuel Wilson, agent for the Anti-Saloon League, who was greatly excited, and said that liquor was being sold freely in some cafés despite the law. While Mr. Tumulty waited on a corner Mr. Wilson slipped into a saloon by the side door. He appeared a few minutes later accompanied by several men. Mayor Mark M. Fagan had joined Mr. Tumulty, and Wilson, running up to them, said he had found men standing at the bar and that he had put one of his fingers in a glass of beer and thus tasted the liquid. It was beer all right, he said.

Mr. Wilson then hurried to the City Hall to report the matter to the Director of Public Safety, and Mr. Tumulty and the Mayor strolled on. Mr. Tumulty returned to Washington late in the afternoon.

NUGENT'S COMMENT SATIRIC.

"Imported, Hysterical Reformers" Helped Beat Suffrage, He Says.

James R. Nugent, Democratic leader of Essex County, who led the anti-suffrage forces there, expressed great satisfaction over the result of the election. It would have a salutary effect, he said, on the elections in Pennsylvania, New York, and Massachusetts.

The campaign in New Jersey, Mr. Nugent added, had been directed on the one hand by the best citizenship and womanhood of the State, and on the other by a coterie of imported, hysterical, itinerant reformers and female politicians.

"The strongest argument presented to the sober-minded Jersey men against woman suffrage," he said, "has been a procession of long-haired men and short-haired women streaming across the Hudson River into New Jersey."

LOST IN ALL 45 DISTRICTS.

The woman suffragists did not carry one of the forty-five election districts of Hoboken. Pre-election estimates by the most conservative suffragists claimed from ten to twenty districts.

The chief excitement of the day, apart from the election itself, was furnished by a woman who wanted to speak against suffrage without permission from the city authorities. She told the police she was Mrs. Caroline McKenzie, 57 years old, of 58 High Street, Brooklyn. Early in the afternoon she mounted a soap box at Sixth and Willow Streets, and began to address a crowd. She had just given her fourth reason why the amendment should be defeated, when a policeman, learning that she had no permit, ordered her to stop talking.

He walked away and, according to the police, Mrs. McKenzie took up a position across the street and began to talk again. Another crowd collected, and again the policeman interfered. Mrs. McKenzie once more moved across the street and attempted to make a speech, but this time the policeman placed her under arrest, charged with disorderly conduct. She was released on bail last night.

The vote in Hoboken was unusually heavy, though the voters did not turn out until the afternoon. Before noon the voting was light, but shortly after 1 o'clock the voters began to appear, and when the polls closed, lines of belated ones were turned away from many of them.

ORATORS QUIT AS POLLS OPEN.

Few Newark Women Watchers Complained of Treatment.

As the Newark polls opened yesterday morning at 6 o'clock the last weary woman of a squad of suffragists who had been speaking in relays in Military Park for twenty-four continuous hours stepped from her platform with the women's last word: "Vote for the suffrage amendment." The speakers, beginning at 6 o'clock on Monday morning, took a strategic position in the park and addressed as many of the passers-by as would stop and listen to them. Monday afternoon and evening the speakers talked to thousands.

Comparatively few complaints of their treatment were made by the women watchers, though in some instances they reported that they had been ordered from the polling places. In most cases where this occurred the women had provided themselves with what the men at the polls considered insufficient credentials.

SAW MONEY PASS, SHE SAID.

Paterson Woman Unable to Give Details of Her Charge.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, Oct. 19.—The returns were received by the suffragists at the headquarters of the Women's Political Union, and the leaders became gloomy early in the evening. Mrs. William Post, the Secretary, who comes from California and will now engage in the campaigns in New York and Massachusetts, admitted that there was lack of organization here. Not more than half of the seventy-four polling booths were watched by the women, although more than seventy were assigned to that task.

There were some complaints of fraud, and one woman said she saw money pass, but no warrants were sworn out.

"I didn't need glasses to see the crooked work," she said, but when she was asked for proof she was unable to give further details.

SILK WORKERS VOTED "NO."

Suffragists Showed Lack of Organization in Paterson.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 19.—Lack of organization among the suffrage workers and the vote piled up against suffrage by the employes of the silk mills were the features of the election most commented on here. The women had predicted that they would score heavily in the districts where the silk-mill employes live, but as soon as the returns began to come in it became evident that the operators were largely anti-suffrage. Most of them live in the Sixth Ward, and there the vote was two to one against the amendment.

During most of the day many of the polls were not watched by suffragists. Many of the watchers were school teachers, who had to leave the polls for hours, returning to their political duties after the schools closed.

The vote in the city was the largest ever registered in a special election since 1892, when horse racing was voted out of New Jersey. It was estimated that fully 70 per cent. of the registered voters were polled.

Mrs. William Post, the head of the Woman's Political Union in Paterson, was discouraged when the early returns indicated that the city had rejected the amendment, but she was not despondent.

"At any rate," she said, "the women have learned much about politics and elections, and this knowledge will serve them in good stead. They could not have acquired it but by such an experience as today's election, so there is no such thing as complete failure for us."

The Socialists in Paterson were active in getting out the suffrage vote. It is admitted that, but for them, the defeat of suffrage here would have been even more emphatic.

NEGRO WOMEN AS WATCHERS.

Lost Votes for Suffrage, Men Say, in Atlantic County.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 19.—Negro women as suffrage watchers at polling places are thought to have lost votes for the amendment here. Either because watchers were scarce or for some political reasons, the negro women were much in evidence, and many white voters were heard to express disapproval of their presence. According to responsible citizens, many voted against suffrage for this reason who might have favored the amendment.

Most of the votes for suffrage here were recruited from the Democratic Party, many of whose leaders worked actively for "The Cause." The vote was heavy for a special election. It became evident, even before the close of the polls, that the antis were leading by large numbers. There was little disorder at the polls, no important arrests being made.

SUFFRAGISTS SAD, ANTIS JUBILANT

Defeated Women Charge Loss of New Jersey to Opposition of Political Machines.

SET UP CRIES OF FRAUD

Turn Brave Face to Foe in New York, However, and Declare They Expect to Carry the State.

Jubilation filled the quarters of the Men's League in Broad Street, Newark, where the official returns from the New Jersey suffrage election were received by 200 members of the Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage last night. The messages were brought in from a neighboring telegraph office, and the rooms were filled with louder and louder cheers as the night advanced. Mrs. Edward Yarde Breese, the President of the association, said that the result was what she had expected.

"The election," she said, "in every way justifies our position. We hope that the result will put an end to the activities of the suffragists. Perhaps now they will turn their energies and their executive ability to a nonpartisan effort toward solving some of the great social, civic and economic problems of the day. The defeat of the suffragists is due to the fact that the men of New Jersey of all political parties decree that woman suffrage must not be permitted. In the Eastern States the conditions are so different from what they are in the West that I doubt if there will ever come a time when the women will have a vote or that the majority will want it. The population of the Eastern States is so much greater than that of the Western and there are so many points of difference that it hardly seems possible that there will be any change on the suffrage question."

Antis to Continue Crusade.

"What," Mrs. Breese was asked, "will the anti-suffrage forces do, now that the fate of suffrage has been decided?"

"We shall certainly keep up our organization," was the reply. "Although we believe that the suffragists have been so overwhelmingly defeated that they are not likely to return to the effort to get the ballot, this organization intends to remain and to show what woman can do for the community without the ballot.

"In this connection I wish to express our great appreciation of what THE NEW YORK TIMES has done in our behalf. It has from the first taken a most dignified stand and has presented all the facts, ably and clearly. In both its news articles and its editorials it has been admirable. We deeply appreciate what THE TIMES has done for us."

Miss Clara Vezin, the campaign manager of the anti-suffrage cause in New Jersey, said the result was about what she had expected, and that she believed from the returns which had been gathered that the suffragists had been defeated two to one. Now that the battle was over, however, she said that the forces opposed to suffrage were not disposed to gloat over the outcome, especially in view of the hard work their opponents had gone through in the last few months. She felt sure, however, that the question of the ballot for womankind had been definitely settled by this election.

Dr. Anna H. Shaw Hopeful.

"We have not lost New Jersey because it has never been ours; we cannot lose; we can only win," said a statement issued last night by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, President of the National Woman Suffrage Association. "The failure to carry the election in New Jersey is not a defeat. It is simply a postponement, and instead of despairing of final success will only inspire the true lovers of freedom to more perfect cooperation and greater zeal. This delay is still a victory for suffrage, for this splendid campaign has proved woman's loyalty to a great purpose and her indomitable courage in the face of great odds and unscrupulous foes and methods.

"The sun will rise tomorrow on a reorganized army, undaunted and hopeful, whose flag will never be furled until women are politically free. It is now for the men in New York to show themselves more worthy of their freedom and to show their gratitude to the women who have helped to make this great State by their vote on Nov. 2, and let it be victory."

Suffragists Charge Fraud.

"It is not at all surprising," said Mrs. Raymond Brown, President of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association, in speaking of the result of the New Jersey election. "It was impossible to fight successfully against a political machine as powerful and as ruthless as that in New Jersey, with its open corruption, its methods of registration and its unnumbered ballots.

"I don't think the result in New Jersey will effect New York at all. We never expected New Jersey to win, because the State was bound up by machine politics. The chances in New York are splendid. I really think we are going to win. This New Jersey defeat will not do any harm. It may make the women in New York State work a little harder."

"It merely shows that the New Jersey men have not been educated enough to be sensible and give their women the vote," said Miss Mary Garrett Hay, leader of the Woman Suffrage Party of New York. "New Jersey is noted among the Eastern States for its fraudulent politics. The New Jersey women had that to contend with. If the women had had a fair vote it would have been wonderful. This was their first big fight in the East, and, of course, they will go at it again."

To Appeal to Legislature.

Though defeated in the State election, New Jersey women will at once begin a campaign to get the Legislature to give them Presidential suffrage, and will also throw all their energies into a campaign for a Federal woman's suffrage constitutional amendment, according to Mrs. E. L. Feickert, President of the Woman's Suffrage Association of New Jersey.

"At this time," said Mrs. Feickert last night at the headquarters in Jersey City, of the Woman's Suffrage Association, "it looks as if we had failed in our attempt to carry the election. In any event, we have polled a tremendous vote, and our opponents have been obliged to resort to the worst conceivable tactics in order to defeat us.

"We shall start in tomorrow on a new suffrage campaign. It is not our intention to work for the next five years to take our cause again to the voters, but to get Presidential suffrage at the next session of the Legislature. The Constitution of the United States provides that the Legislature of each State shall determine who in that State shall vote in Presidential elections, and it is within the power of the State to give us that degree of suffrage.

"With the strong organization which we have and the many thousands of voters who have taken their stand on our side, there is no question but that such a bill will pass at the next session. Our next demand will be for full suffrage by Federal constitutional amendment."

Mrs. Garret A. Hobart, widow of the former Vice President of the United States, who is a Vice President of the New Jersey State Organization Opposed to Woman Suffrage, said in Paterson last night:

"I wish to compliment the men on their good sense and sound judgment. We predicted the victory and we were right."

John W. Griggs, ex-United States Attorney General, said in Paterson:

"I voted against the suffrage amendment. It seems that I was with the voters of good sense who denied suffrage to women."

HISTORY OF THE FIGHT.

One Organization Has Been at Work Since 1867.

The referendum yesterday was the culmination of a long and determined struggle by the women of New Jersey, already in possession of the right to vote on school questions, to regain the full suffrage which was granted to them in 1776 and lost in 1807 on account of alleged frauds, attributed by suffrage leaders to men in women's clothes.

Of the two organizations which have conducted the suffrage fight, one, the Woman Suffrage Association of New Jersey, has been in existence since 1867; the other, the Woman's Political Union of New Jersey, was organized three or four years ago when the suffrage question again became acute.

Two years ago the constitutional amendment providing for a referendum was passed by the Legislature, but on account of a technical fault in advertising was thrown out. This at once stirred the suffragists to greater exertions. The two suffrage organizations set to work on the legislators with the result that the amendment was passed by the next Legislature and again by the last one—the constitutional prerequisite to its submission to popular vote.

The majorities were very large in both houses at the last session. The Progressive and Socialist parties were committed to the hearty support of the measure, and the Democrats and Republicans each put a plank in their last platforms agreeing to submit the proposal to the people.

The really active campaign began this year. Both sides saw in the decision of New Jersey an indication of the way sentiment would move in New York, Massachusetts, and Pennsylvania. The campaign was enlivened in its latter weeks by the declarations of President Wilson, Secretary Tumulty and Secretary of War Garrison that they would vote in favor of the amendment. It was marked, on the other hand, by the presence in the ranks of the antis of the widow of Grover Cleveland and the widow of Garret A. Hobart.

The two suffrage organizations divided the State for the final struggle. The thickly populated industrial counties of the north were taken over by the Woman's Political Union, which was led by its President, Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle of Newark, and its executive Secretary, Mrs. Minnie S. Reynolds, who took an active part in the fight for suffrage in Colorado years ago. More recently as a resident of Newark she has done energetic and able work in organizing the campaign. The Woman's Political Union made a spectacular fight, with many street speeches and demonstrations.

EXPECTS 10,000 MEN IN SUFFRAGE MARCH

James Lees Laidlaw Has 5,000 Enrolled Already for Next Saturday's Parade.

MOTHERS TO BRING BABIES

Hundreds of men are enrolling daily for the suffrage parade of next Saturday. There is an actual list of 5,000 names, and James Lees Laidlaw, President of the Men's League, says there will be 10,000 men in the line.

The banner which led a parade in the Montana campaign will be carried in the New York parade by Mrs. John Duff of Montana, who is a Justice of the Peace. All the marchers representing the countries whose women are enfranchised will carry green palms. No general attempt is being made to have these countries represented by women born in them, but the Finnish group will be led by Mrs. Aino Malmberg, the Finnish patriot. Dr. Anna Kubiata will have thirteen women to represent the Bohemian group.

Mrs. John W. Alexander, who is in charge of the decorative effects, will have the women in certain groups joined by festooned wreaths. A Mother-and-Child group will be one of the features of the Woman Suffrage Party division. The mothers will push the children in their carriages. These are to be decorated by Mrs. Mabel Keep, who is arranging the group, with blue and yellow suffrage balloons, some of them dangling in front to amuse the little ones.

The Children's Van, which was a feature of the yellow rallies, will be decorated with kewpies by Rose O'Neill. Mrs. James Ripley Bartholomew is to be the Disfranchised Woman chained to Ignorance, Prejudice, and Vice, represented by three men in black, who will not allow their names to be used. Mrs. Clarence Handyside will be Justice. The Old Guard Band, led by Henri Conrad, is to precede the Fifteenth Assembly District delegation, of which Miss Sanford Peters is leader. Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw will head a band of prominent clubwomen of the State. The women to represent the suffrage States will include Mrs. Flora Gapen, Miss Mary Nicholls, Miss Helen M. Hill, Miss Gertrude Watkins, Miss Elizabeth Hines, Miss Mary D. Newcomb, Miss R. A. Kudlich, Miss Charlotte A. Black, and Miss Antoinette Byrne.

A Paisley shawl, the mate to the shawl made for Queen Victoria, is to appear in the parade worn by the owner, Miss Mary Ogden White. Two shawls were made at the same time by the Paisleys to show a certain velvet texture. One was presented to the Queen, and the other was given to a Scotch woman organist, Marian MacGregor, who later, as Marian MacGregor Christopher, was organist in the Broadway Tabernacle, when Dr. William Taylor was pastor. She was the most noted woman organist of her day. The shawl has the suffrage campaign colors.

within ten feet of Mr. Wilson. When the boy saw the President he began to apologize, but Mr. Wilson smiled and seemed not the least nervous because of his narrow escape from injury.

With the President on his trip to Princeton were Dr. Cary T. Grayson, Charles Swem, private stenographer, and Secret Service Agent Murphy, and others. After voting the President walked through the town and over to the college campus, where he called upon Professor Vreeland, an old-time friend. From the Vreeland home he walked through the leafy avenue that goes by the name of "Lovers' Lane" at Princeton and stopped for a few minutes at the home of Dean Fine of the science department, who is an ardent anti-suffragist.

There was another big crowd of students at the station to give the President a parting cheer. As the train pulled out Mr. Wilson stood on the observation platform and waved his hat.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—President Wilson returned to Washington tonight after casting the first ballot ever given by a Chief Executive of the United States in favor of woman suffrage. He attracted much attention upon arriving here by getting hurriedly from his private car and walking to his automobile so rapidly that several members of his party had to run to catch up with him.

The President put in a hard day's work going to and from Princeton. He spent several of the hours on the train dictating answers to letters and also worked on the note to Great Britain regarding interference with American trade which was sent to him from the State Department some time ago.

MRS. WALDO DIED $135,000 IN DEBT

Mother of Former Police Commissioner Received Legacy of Nearly $360,000.

Mrs. Gertrude Rhinelander Waldo, mother of ex-Police Commissioner Waldo, was in debt to the extent of $135,329 when she died on May 27, 1914, according to the appraisal of her estate, filed in the office of the State Controller yesterday by Transfer Tax Appraiser Albert J. Berwin. The report shows assets of cash and a trust fund in the City Chamberlain's hands of $1,341, and debts and administration expenses amounting to $136,670.

The largest debts, according to Appraiser Berwin's report, were two loans from the L. V. Rhinelander Estate amounting to $121,065.

There is an affidavit in the report by Percival S. Jones, who is attorney for the Columbia Trust Company, the executor under Mrs. Waldo's will. The document recites that Mrs. Waldo, in 1882, came into possession of an inherited estate amounting to less than $380,000, largely in the form of real estate in New York City, only a portion of which was productive of income.

Mrs. Waldo sold a part of her real estate about 1896 and with the proceeds purchased land at the southeast corner of Madison Avenue and Seventy-second Street, upon which she erected two houses at an aggregate cost of $340,000, subject to mortgage loans of $195,000.

These houses were never occupied, the affidavit recites, and produced no income from 1896 to 1911, when both were sold under foreclosure proceedings, which resulted in deficiency judgments being obtained against Mrs. Waldo.

In order to meet the carrying charges, the affidavit goes on to say, Mrs. Waldo mortgaged and finally sold most of her remaining realty and personal property and in addition obtained loans from her sister, Laura V. Rhinelander. About 1910, the affidavit recites, Mrs. Waldo transferred all of her remaining real estate, consisting of 83-85-87 Barclay Street, which was heavily mortgaged at that time, to her sister in consideration of the payment by the latter of all outstanding liens and charges against the property, an aggregate amount in excess of the market value of the property.

The affidavit of Lawyer Jones says that all the living and other expenses of the decedent during the last six years of her life were paid by Miss Rhinelander.

STRANGE NEW MONITORS INVENTED BY BRITISH

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—Ellis Ashmead Bartlett, in a dispatch dated the Dardanelles, Sept. 26, published in The Daily Chronicle, describes new monitors employed by the British. He says:

"One afternoon there appeared at the entrance of Kephalos Harbor an amazing looking object. She could hardly be said to steam up, but rather wabbled into port like a huge goose primed for Michelmas. It was impossible to tell at a distance whether she was broadside on or snowing her bows or her stern, for she seemed to be quite round. Her high sides held aloft as absolutely flat deck, on which nothing showed except an enormous turret, from which projected two guns of enormous girth and length, while rising from her centre, like a giant of some Californian forest, was a huge striped tripod bearing aloft a kind of oblong jewel box, an exact replica on a huge scale of that in which the Dalai Lama bears about with him the ashes of his first embodiment.

"With great difficulty, steering wilely, she made her way through the crowded harbor and dropped anchor, with the eyes of thousands riveted on her. No one had ever seen the like of her before. Sensation, in fact, followed sensation. Her crew began to bathe, apparently all possessed of the divine power of walking on water, for on descending a ladder, instead of plunging into the waves, they walked along them by the side of her, and, having thus distributed themselves, proceeded to dive in, only to climb out again a few minutes later at their will.

"We set off in boats to investigate this strange phenomenon, and found that just below the surface her sides bulge out some 10 feet and then curve under, forming a platform just washed by the waves. This is the secret mystery of these craft. In that bulge man has concentrated his ingenuity to defeat the submarine. If a torpedo strikes her side it will explode amid a variety of substances which I must not mention, and the hull of the vessel will escape injury.

"These huge monitors carry naught but two fourteen-inch guns and some anti-aircraft armament. The first time one of these monitors went to the mouth of the Dardanelles to celebrate she gave the poor old Turk a horrid shock of surprise. Her guns go off with a terrible roar and carry over three-quarters of a ton of metal fifteen miles.

"Later on three more of these monitors arrived, giving us eight fourteen-inch guns with which to bombard the enemy's position in addition to the large number of smaller monitors of all shapes and sizes, some with names and some without, but each armed with the very latest weapons of precision."

Kewanee Smokeless Boilers Cut Coal Costs in Two Ways

They permit you to use cheap Bituminous coal because they burn that fuel so perfectly that none of it is wasted in the form of smoke. And New York's ordinance doesn't say you can't burn soft coal — it only prohibits smoke.

Bituminous coal costs less than Anthracite. It averages $3.75 per ton against $5.46 for anthracite. And a ton of it actually contains more heat than a ton of Anthracite; so a Kewanee Smokeless Boiler cuts your coal costs by permitting you to use cheaper fuel.

when operated under conditions similar to those prevailing in most large buildings, average from 73 to 81% efficiency. In other words a Kewanee uses from 73 to 81% of all of the heat in coal, while 60% is a high average for ordinary heating boilers.

These are facts which are proven in many buildings right here in New York City.

COSSACKS SMASH TEUTON DEFENSES

GERMANS SHIFTING TROOPS

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19, (via London.)—Russian cavalry, charging the Germans at Podcherevitch, west of Rafalovka, on the Kovel-Sarny Railroad, in the recent fighting, broke through their lines of defenses and overrode the trenches, inflicting heavy losses, and seriously interfering with the evident plans of the Germans to dig in along the Styr River for Winter quarters.

Along the front of the Styr and Stokhod Rivers the Germans apparently have renounced their offensive. Reports received from prisoners taken in this region say that the trenches there are manned largely by worn-out troops from the Dvinsk-Riga front, who have been sent southward to recuperate. These men, the prisoners assert, were suprised by the impetuous rush of the Russian cavalry, and broke from their positions and floundered through the marshes, more than a thousand of them falling into the hands of the Russians.

The capture simultaneously of Novo Selki, (between Baronovitchi and Pinsk,) where another huge bag of prisoners and munitions was taken, is considered to have further weakened the German line and to threaten their position from the Pripet to the Niemen. There is evidence of a continued removal of troops from this district to the northern theatre, in the vicinity of Dvinsk and Riga.

The success of the Russians has been extended and more prisoners taken on the Styr, according to tonight's official report, which is as follows:

The successes reported yesterday in the region of the Middle Styr River have been brilliantly developed by our troops. In the fighting near the Zaladine Farm, north of Rafalovka, we captured numerous prisoners and many machine guns. The town of Czartorysk was taken by our sudden attack in force.

Turning simultaneously both flanks of the Germans operating in this district, we took as prisoners more than 700 soldiers of the First Kronprinz Grenadier Regiment, with twenty-eight officers, among whom was the Commandant of the Third Battalion. We also took nine cannon and bomb-throwers.

Revenge for Explosive Bullets.

Owing to the exasperation caused among our men by an almost general use of explosive bullets by the Germans, a large number of men from the above regiment were bayoneted. Fighting and pursuit of the enemy continues.

On the Styr above Czartorysk the Germans and Austrians have been put to flight by a renewal of our vigorous attack. We carried by assault the villages of Budka and Rudnia, capturing numerous prisoners and machine guns, the exact number of which has not yet been ascertained.

On the River Aa, below Mitau, the Germans have succeeded in occupying the village of Kich. On the Mitau road, northwest of Mitau, the fighting continues. The artillery fire has noticeably increased on this front. In the wooded region north of the Mitau-Neugut Railway the Germans have succeeded in advancing to the north. Everywhere in this region terrific fighting is going on.

In the region of Duckern Village, south of Jacobstadt, we had the advantage in engagements with the Germans.

In the region of Dvinsk there is heavy artillery firing at some points. On the front of Lakes Demmen and Drewiaty, and to the south as far as the Pripet region, there is no change in the situation.

Six Corps Operating Against Riga.

The Dvinsk region has been comparatively calm since the heavy battles of two days ago, but the Germans are strengthening their line there preparing for further assaults. It is estimated that the Germans are employing six corps (240,000 men) in their operations against Riga, but that they are still two days' march from the city. The military authorities are still undetermined whether the manoeuvre there comprehends a serious effort toward Riga or is masking an effort to flank the Dvinsk position.

A German officer prisoner at Czartorysk says that the past three weeks of uninterrupted fighting at Dvinsk has been a terrible strain on the German Army and that thousands of men, nervous wrecks, had been sent southward. The officer is reported to have declared also that the Germans had no men to spare to carry their sick and wounded to the rear.

The Russian aerial service has been greatly improved.

Submarines Hamper German Transports.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The Germans are being considerably hampered by British submarines in the Baltic, for, besides sinking a large number of steamers engaged in the ore trade between Germany and Sweden, the submarines are interfering with transports between German ports and the Courland coast.

Try to Flank Russians.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 19, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Unable to dislodge the Russians from Galicia by direct frontal attacks, the Germans and Austrians keep making unsuccessful attempts to penetrate through the swamp region to Sarny and Rovno, and, by outflanking the Russians here, compel them to withdraw their front from Galicia. It is a hopeless business, and the slight successes won under the most trying topographical conditions inevitably culminate in defeat.

One more or less acceptable reach of the Styr lies near Rafalovka and southward thence to Czartorysk, i. e., just to south and north of the Kovel-Sarny railway. Several times the enemy has secured a footing here, but whenever he seems on the point of developing his success in the direction of Sarny, a sharp blow from the Russians frustrates his plans and the wearisome task has to be begun over again.

The Russians have now recaptured four villages on the Styr, near Rafalovka and Czartoupk, and taken in the process over 3,000 German and Austrian prisoners, besides a large quantity of war material. The blow is not absolutely crushing, but should certainly paralyze the enemy's movements between the Styr and Stokhold for some time to come.

OFFICIAL WAR REPORTS.

BERLIN, Oct. 19, (via London.)—The German official report on the eastern front is as follows:

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: South of Riga our troops stormed several Russian positions and reached Duona, east of Borkowitz. One officer and 240 men were taken prisoners and two machine guns were captured. A Russian attack northwest of Jacobstadt was repulsed.

In the region of Smoley a French biplane, which was piloted by a Russian Captain and equipped with a British machine gun, was shot down by one of our battle planes.

Army Group of Prince Leopold:

VIENNA, Oct. 19, (via London, Oct. 20.)—The official communication issued today says:

The Russians yesterday continued their attacks in the swampy and wooded region on the lower Styr River. Near the village of Boguslawka, northwest of Derazno, the enemy thrice successfully stormed the position of one of our honved divisions, but were put to flight by our fire, and in the hand-to-hand fighting we captured 3 officers and more than 500 men and 2 machine guns. A Russian division advancing by way of Kulikovichi (on the Styr between Kolki and Czartorysk) was repulsed on the east bank of the river.

In the region of Czartorysk some of the enemy reached the west bank of the Styr, where the fighting continues.

North of Rafalovka the Russians likewise attacked with strong forces, but were repulsed. We captured 100 men. Otherwise the situation in the northeast is unchanged.

LORD DERBY'S PLAN TO AVOID CONSCRIPTION

Men to Enlist at Once, but Those Wishing to Do So to Remain at Work Till Called.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—The Earl of Derby, to whom the Government has intrusted the task of solving the recruiting problem, in addressing a mass meeting at the Mansion House yesterday gave the gist of the plan with which he hopes to meet the situation.

"I suggest," he said, "that every man who recognizes that the State has a right to call on his services for her protection should enlist at once. All those found physically fit and wishing to join the colors at once could do so, and the remainder continues at their usual vocations, subject to call when needed."

Unmarried and married men, Lord Derby explained, would be put into respective groups, and the bachelors called first. Married men would be called later, according to age. By such a system, he pointed out, there would be no sudden, unmanageable number of recruits, but a steady supply as needed by Earl Kitchener's army.

Some one had asked, the speaker said, why recruiting was an urgent necessity, to which he replied: "Look at the map."

Lord Derby said that a fortnight would be allowed to men who were called to adjust their private affairs. He hoped that, with a proper response, it would be unnecessary to call the older married men. In any event these elder men would, so far as practicable, be placed in the medical and transport units.

BELGIAN EXECUTIONS REPORTED IN SCORES

Great Round-up of Suspected Persons Carried On Since Allies Began Their Offensive.

MANY OF HIGH SOCIAL RANK

Countess de Belleville and a French Woman Among Those Sentenced to Die—Pope Intervenes for Ten.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—Recently there has been a sweeping round-up of spies and suspects of various kinds by the German authorities in Belgium, according to messages reaching London from the Dutch frontier. It is said there have been hundreds of arrests and scores of executions. The roundup followed the beginning of the Anglo-French activity on the western front.

General von Bissing issued a long proclamation containing references to "attempts by Belgians to endanger the safety of the German Army," and threatening penalties of the utmost severity against any person detected committing offenses against the specially devised code of regulations for the conduct of civilians.

Immediately after this proclamation came a series of wholesale arrests in various parts of the country, including many persons of high social standing, who were accused either of espionage or assisting in the escape of Belgian, French, or English persons. There followed also, it is said, numerous military trials for the arrested civilians, the result of which is known in only a few cases.

Virtually no details of the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, the English woman who had been the head of a training school in Brussels, who was charged with harboring English, French, and Belgians and assisting them to escape from Belgium, and of other civilians, have reached the frontier. It is said that the Spanish Ambassador at Brussels vainly endeavored to intervene in Miss Cavell's behalf.

The brief official proclamation announcing the execution of Miss Cavell gives the names of four other persons who were sentenced to death, all of them Belgians. They were Philip Baucq, an architect; Louise Thulier, a school teacher; Louis Severin, a chemist, and the Countess Johanna de Belleville. The proclamation also gives the names of twenty-three persons who were sentenced to varrying terms of imprisonment, including a ten-year term for the popular Princess Alexandre Croy of Bellignies, who comes from one of the highest families of the Belgian aristocracy.

According to advices to the Dutch newspapers there have been additional executions and imprisonments in almost every important town in Belgium, including five executions at Bruges and the imprisonment of ninety-four workmen at Lesse for "insubordination."

Many Other Executions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 19 (Dispatch to The London Daily News).—The sentence of death on Miss Cavell, the English nurse, at Brussels is but a part of a campaign of German terrorism which has recently been conducted in Belgium as a result of the unrest among the inhabitants which was manifested immediately following the Allies' offensive.

Not only in Brussels but in Bruges and other places nearer the fighting line many people have been sentenced to death and executed.

At Bruges, for instance, six were sentenced and shot without public notice. At Lille others suffered the extreme penalty.

On hearing of the sentence of death on Miss Cavell the Spanish Ambassador interested himself in the matter. He visited Governor von Bissing and attempted to obtain a reprieve. The German Civil Governor, however, replied that the case was one for the military authorities. The Ambassador thereupon visited the Chief Military Officer, but failed to obtain a reprieve.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—No information could be had from either the Belgian Legation or the French Embassy tonight in regard to the Countess de Belleville, Baron de Hemptinne, and the French people said to be under sentence of death in Belgium.

At the French Embassy it was said that no dispatches in regard to these cases or that of Miss Cavell had been received.

ROME, Oct. 19, (via Paris. — Pope Benedict, at the request of the British and Belgian Legations, has interceded with Emperor William on behalf of Baron de Hemptinne, the Countess de Belleville, Mlle. Thulier, and seven other French persons who have been condemned by the Germans to be shot.

Cardinal Hartmann, Archbishop of Cologne, has informed the pontiff that Emperor William has suspended the execution of the sentences against the prisoners in order that he may make a more detailed examination into their cases.

ATTACK NEAR LOOS COSTLY TO GERMANS

Philip Gibbs Describes Attempt Made by Teutons on Oct. 8 to Regain Lost Ground.

BY PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Oct. 17 (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle).—The most interesting news after the British advance around Loos has been General Sir John French's communique, announcing the repulse of the enemy's counterattack, with a great slaughter, on Oct. 8. The full story of this great repulse has yet to be told. From a personal knowledge I can write only of the counterattack as it was sustained by a British battalion.

Typical, no doubt, of the same action in other parts of the line, the average age in this particular battalion was young. There were a good many there who had already been tested by many hours of horrible experience. The test was to be greater now, but they were as steady as veterans crouched in the old German trenches.

They knew that a counterattack was at hand when the enemy's artillery began a concentrated bombardment upon their section and all down the line. That was on the morning of the 8th. It was a terrific ordeal. The trenches were not only strewn with shrapnel, but the German batteries flung out an enormous quantity of high explosives, which flung the earth in all directions. It seemed impossible to live under such an annihilating storm, yet, by luck not to be reckoned on, the number of casualties in the battalion were fewer than might have been guessed.

For a considerable time a German aeroplane remained over the British lines, flying at a great height and directing the artillery fire. This intensified at 12:30, and reached its full pitch at 2:30 in the afternoon. The young British soldiers endured the agony of those hours without losing the hope of revenge. It came quickly after that.

Shortly before 3:30 the enemy opened with a rifle and machine gun fire all along the line, so that a continual stream of bullets swept across the space between the opposing trenches, some fifty yards in breadth. That space was filled with the smoke of bursting shells and all the reek of battle, including poison gases and smokeballs.

But suddenly through this dense curtain there loomed up a line of black figures, and then another, and then two more. The German infantry was advancing four deep. They came on shoulder to shoulder, swiftly, but not so fast that the British machine guns and rifles were not ready for them.

The waiting men knew their chance had come at last. After all the heavy battering of guns, they fired in rapid volleys, and the machine guns plunged streams of lead upon those shadow figures in the smoke. Great numbers of German infantry fell at once, and after a further short advance, others lay down and small groups of them tried to crawl back in retirement. The British machine guns and rifles were concentrated upon these groups and swept the intervening ground so that few could escape.

Meanwhile, the enemy's artillery had established a very intense curtain of shrapnel and high explosives behind the British lines to prevent supports from coming up, while one of their aeroplanes flew no higher than 2,000 feet directing their guns. The British artillery replied in a formidable way, dominating the enemy at about 5 o'clock, when they slackened their fire.

The British in the trenches could do no more. Beyond them in the smoke lay lines of German dead and wounded from whose heaps there wriggled back only a few survivors. The British losses in this battalion were not negligible, but when the men were relieved they went back with the knowledge that they not only repulsed the German counterattack, but destroyed it.

All along the line the experience was similar, with only different details of endurance and revenge from trench to trench, justifying that sentence in the official communique, which gives the whole grim picture in the sentence:

"Great numbers of the enemy's dead are lying in front of our lines."

GERMANS CAPTURE AMERICAN.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—Norman Prince, a Harvard graduate, who was an aviator with the French Army, has been captured by the Germans, according to a cablegram received tonight by his father, Frederick H. Prince.

Prince abandoned a law practice in Chicago in January to volunteer his services with the Allies. He has been known as a daring polo player, automobilist, and aviator.

GERMAN WAR CRITIC WARNS COUNTRYMEN

Colonel Gadke Belittles Advance in Serbia and Admits Loss in West.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—A dispatch to The Daily Chronicle says that in his weekly war review in the Berlin Vorwärts, the Socialist organ, Colonel Gadke thinks the war has now reached its highest point.

His observations do not make very encouraging reading for those of his countrymen who believe the German arms are advancing from victory to victory and that the enemies of the Fatherland are in their last gasps.

Speaking of the Serbian campaign, he warns his readers to beware of overestimating the initial success obtained by von Mackensen, as it is only, he points out, a beginning. From the first, he says, it was, of course, apparent that the Serbians would not be able to withstand the German-Austrian drives across the rivers. Here it was a matter of superior artillery and higher technical skill, but it will be well to remember that Belgrade was once before in Austrian hands, and that an Austrian army came to grief on the Save. Gadke points out that the nature of the interior will certainly have a serious effect in reducing the preliminary speed of the advance, and that the further the German-Austrian armies penetrate, the more they will suffer from the inhospitable nature of the country, the pathless forests, the abrupt mountains, and the lack of roads and railways.

With regard to the war on the western front, Gadke is in opposition to all the military writers on the other German papers. He thinks it is wrong to say the recent attacks by the Allies had no success. To say so, he insists, is not to describe truthfully the situation. Both the German official statements and the reports of General Joffre clearly indicate the progress made by the Allies. It is clear, says Gadke, that progress has been made and that the German counter-attacks have not yet succeeded in regaining all that has been lost. He does not believe the German lines have been cut through, but is certain attempts to do so will be made again and again; and that the situation is hot without danger.

In the east he admits the Russians have gained ground in certain areas and that a sort of equilibrium has been established. His conclusion is that the Germans must prepare themselves for a long duration of the war and must make no speedy decision.

committee. The recall of Gen. Sir Ian Hamilton from the Dardanelles and the succession to command of a younger leader, General Munro, may be significant of a policy of bringing in new blood. Most of the Generals holding high commands are over sixty years of age, and there has been complaint that the army is clinging to the old peace system of promotion by seniority alone, while naval officers in high positions average more than ten years younger.

MINISTERS ARE SILENT.

Lloyd George Refuses to Reply to Leading Questions in Commons.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—Owing to the illness of Premier Asquith and the delicate negotiations which are proceeding between the Allies, the enlightenment which yesterday's meeting of the House of Commons was expected to throw on the Balkan operations, over which Sir Edward Carson is believed to have resigned from the Cabinet, and on the substitution of Major Gen. Monro for General Sir Ian Hamilton to command in the Dardanelles, was not forthcoming.

There were more than a hundred questions in the House on the orders of the day, dealing chiefly with Near Eastern affairs, the Dardanelles, and the method of raising necessary men for the army, and, while the Ministers answered many of them, in no case was the information which the public was anxiously awaiting supplied.

In Mr. Asquith's absence David Lloyd George, the Minister of Munitions, led in the House and steered off all propounders of what the Government considered awkward questions.

"It is impossible at present," was his reply to urgent requests for a statement regarding the situation in the Dardanelles.

The determination to avoid premature revelations was emphasized in the reply made by Lord Robert Cecil, Parliamentary Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, to the question regarding the Dardanelles campaign, of which Robert L. Outhwaite, Liberal member for Hanley, had given notice. The query was as to whether the Russian Government still attached the same importance to the Dardanelles operations as it did when the British Ambassador in Petrograd stated that the operations had bene undertaken at the request of Russia with the object of drawing a Turkish force from the Caucasus.

SAYS CARSON LOST PATIENCE.

Daily Chronicle Asserts He Wanted Conscription Bill Prepared.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary Correspondent says:

"Mr. Asquith is not so ill that he will be unable to keep in contact with affairs. Indeed, his friends expect that he will be fully restored to health in a week's time.

"His indisposition means, however, that no Cabinet decision such as the advocates of compulsory service desire can be taken for eight or nine days. The interval will be of public advantage in giving time for passions to cool and in allowing the ministers to envisage the subject from every standpoint.

"Sir Edward Carson's resignation was an outcome of his dissatisfaction at what he regarded as the needless delays of the Cabinet in arriving at a decision in favor of compulsory service. The fresh commitment in the Balkans was to his mind a conclusive argument for conscription. He wanted the Cabinet to authorize instanter the preparation of a compulsory service bill, so as to have it in readiness for production in the event of Lord Derby's plan failing to yield the requisite number of men. Mr. Asquith and the majority of the Cabinet were averse to a course of action which, in their judgment, would be prejudicial to the success of the Derby scheme, but Sir Edward, taking the line that one must provide for contingencies, would not wait.

"The Cabinet is not seriously weakened by his loss. In plain truth, this Government has suffered from the fact that labor prosecutions were authorized or conducted by an Attorney General with Sir Edward Carson's peculiar record in law observance as leader of the Ulster irreconcilables.

"Sir Edward is a man of strong character and genuinely patriotic after his own fashion, but the Times and the Morning Post in saluting him as a sort of savior of the nation at this crisis show that they are utterly ignorant of working class opinion.

"There is no truth whatever in the statement made that Sir Edward Carson's retirement was due to his determination that the Irish Unionists shall not be excluded from the measures necessary in the defense of the Empire. No such question has arisen. The Nationalist members do not intend to make any bargain with the Government about the exclusion of Ireland from a policy of conscription. The Irish members will oppose conscription on broad, general grounds. They have loyally supported the Government in the war, but they feel morally bound as good Democrats to resist a compulsory service bill."

HAMILTON ALREADY HOME?

Political Circles Assume the Dardanelles Fight Will Go On.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—The Daily News political correspondent says this morning:

"It is rumored that General Sir Ian Hamilton has already arrived in this country, the Government having decided on his recall and having appointed General Monro his successor.

"It is assumed in political circles that our resolve to continue the Dardanelles campaign is confirmed."

BRITISH REPULSE GERMAN BOMB ATTACKS

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Field Marshal Sir John French sent the following report tonight from his headquarters in France:

"Since my communication of Oct. 14 the artillery on both sides has been very active on our front south of La Bassée Canal. The enemy has made a number of bombing attacks, all of which have been repulsed.

"The continued reports in the German communiqués of the repulse of British attacks northeast of Vermelles have no foundation in fact. The positions where the fighting mentioned above has taken place would be more correctly described as southwest of Auchy Lez la Bassée, from which it is about 1,500 yards distant. It lies about 3,000 yards northeast of Vermelles.

"The new front now leaves our old line at a point above 1,200 yards southwest of the southern edge of Auchy Lez le Bassée and runs thence through the main trench of the Hohenzollern redoubt in an easterly direction, 400 yards south of the southern bulge of Fossé No. 8, to the southwestern corner of the quarries. We also hold the southeastern corner of the quarries, our trenches running thence southeast, parallel to and 400 yards from the southwestern edge of Cite St. Elie, to a point 500 yards west of the north edge of Hulluch.

RUSSIA AND ITALY IN WAR ON BULGARIA

Austro-Hungarian troops who had been sent over both sides of the mouth of the Kolubra River at midnight captured the town of Obrenovatz and the heights southeast of Obrenovatz.

The forces advancing from Belgrade southward, pursuing the enemy, have passed Ripanj.

An Austro-Hungarian column has stormed with the bayonet Gipsy Mountain, south of Grocka, and effected a junction with the German divisions which are successfully advancing on both sides of the lower Morava.

In the three days' fighting for the possession of Avala Mountain, (9 miles southeast of Belgrade,) and positions northwest of Grocka, our troops captured fifteen Serbian officers and 2,000 men.

The Bulgarians have taken the first fortified line from the enemy east of Pirot, and have advanced to the Vranya region.

Unofficial reports from Greece indicate that except in the extreme south, where they have the support of the Anglo-French troops landed at Saloniki, the Serbs are falling back to stronger natural positions. Istip and Kotchana, it is said, have already been evacuated.

BULGAR LOSSES VERY HEAVY.

Whole Battalions Reported Wiped Out in Strumitza Battle.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Heavy losses for the Bulgarians in the fighting which preceded the capture by the Allies of Strumitza are reported in a dispatch from Saloniki to Milan, as forwarded to the Havas News Agency. It is asserted that entire battalions of Bulgarians were annihilated by the Franco-Serbian forces.

British, as well as French troops, the dispatch says, took an important part in the engagements northwest of Doiran, near the Vardar River, and at Valanovo, in the northeastern sector. At the latter point the Bulgarians made a counterattack, but subsequently fled across the frontier, pursued by Serbians.

The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency, reports that the arrival at Saloniki was expected of the first train bearing French soldiers wounded in fighting with the Bulgarians.

ITALY'S NEW WAR FORCED BY THE PEOPLE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 19.—Italy today declared war on Bulgaria. This action had been fully expected because of the growing popular agitation in favor of participation in the Balkan war.

Petitions had been pouring in on the Government urging that Italians be allowed to fight with the Allies in defense of Serbia.

A number of young men urged Ricciotti Garibaldi to form a body of Garibaldian volunteers to fight in the Balkans for the same ideals for which the red shirts shed their blood on many a field, both in the European and American continents.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—The Havas correspondent at Rome telegraphs:

"The Italian Government, by order of the King, declared that a state of war existed between Italy and Bulgaria by reason of Bulgaria's having opened hostilities against Serbia, thus allying itself with the enemies of Italy and combating her allies."

An Italian squadron has left for the Near East under sealed orders, supposedly to participate in the blockade of the Bulgarian coast, according to a Brindisi dispatch received this evening, but which had been delayed in transmission.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The Italian Ambassador, Count Di Cellere, notified the State Department officially today that a state of war had been declared between Italy and Bulgaria. Another neutrality proclamation will be issued, and the United States probably will undertake to care for Italian interests in Bulgaria.

Ambassador Sharp, at Paris, cabled the State Department today official word of the French declaration of war on Bulgaria. The dispatch made no mention of who would represent French interests in Bulgaria. The United States is acting for Great Britain.

VRANYA GREETED FOES THEN SHOT AT THEM

SOFIA, Oct. 18, (via London, Oct. 19,) (Delayed.)—The following official communication from General Headquarters was issued today:

Our armies continued yesterday to advance on the whole front in Serbian territory. In the Morava Valley our troops captured Vranya, thus cutting the railway line from Uskup to Nish.

On entering Vranya our cavalry was at first welcomed with cries of "Zivia" (hurrah) by the populace, who had raised white flags. This was followed by a hail of bullets from every house.

Our troops, who are advancing from Egri Palanka on Stratzin, have captured a Serbian battalion.

In the Bregalnitza Valley we captured the town of Kotchana, from which we are advancing westward.

ADMIT RAILWAY IS CUT.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—A dispatch from Nish to the Temps, dated Oct. 17, says it has been announced officially by the Serbian War Office that the Bulgarians have occupied the territory between Vranya and Ristovatz, dominating the Saloniki-Nish railroad. Both these towns are on the railroad, about six miles apart, Ristovatz being south of Vranya. In consequence of this advance by the Bulgarians, the dispatch says, railway communication has been interrupted.

The message also says desperate fighting continues along the Bulgarian frontier in the valley of the Viassina.

Serbian troops south of Semendria, in the Danube front, have been obliged to retire, the correspondent adds, in consequence of the retreat of the forces defending the Belgrade district.

MILAN, Oct. 19.—The correspondent of the Secolo at Bucharest telegraphs that the Serbians are striving to occupy Vidin to prevent the Germans from establishing communication with the Bulgarians by the Lom-Palanka route. The Serbian army is seeking to envelop the Bulgarian troops operating in the direction of the Timok River.

SEES GERMAN TRIUMPH SURE.

Major Moraht Seeks to Show That Allies Can't Win in Near East.

BERLIN, Oct. 19, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—Reviewing the military situation in the Berliner Tageblatt, Major Moraht, the military critic, notes that while Germany is now really on the defensive in France and Russia, she is attacking in Serbia, where she will "shake hands with all of her friends and probably be opposed by the armies of all her enemies." Reviewing his article, the Overseas News Agency says:

"The Serbian attack on the Central Powers politically, and is advancing them toward final victory, Major Moraht says. The French and British offensive was undertaken with enormous forces in mere fury and obstinacy, while the efforts of Russia are only designed to regain for her territory which she has lost.

"The discussion between the Entente nations regarding their respective participation in the Balkan campaign is still uncompleted, Major Moraht points out, and regarding such participation he says that France is unable to spare troops from her home front, while her colonial troops are not suitable for service in a Serbian Winter campaign.

"Great Britain's shaken forces from the Dardanelles would not be able to cope in battle with the victorious German and Austro-Hungarian forces and the enthusiastic Bulgarian troops, he adds, while Italy wishes to make her own war, saving her soldiers and her gold."

MONASTIR AS NEW CAPITAL.

Diplomatic Corps on Their Way There from Nish.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 20.—According to The Morning Post's Athens correspondent the diplomatic corps left Tuesday for Monastir, in the extreme south of Serbia, to which city the national archives and the Serbian National Bank also are going immediately. The Central Serbian Government, the correspondent adds, remains in Nish.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—A train has arrived at Saloniki on its way to Monastir, in Southwestern Serbia, near the Greek border, carrying the books and money of the Serbian National Bank.

The train showed the marks of the rifle fire through which it had passed.

REPORTED BULGAR REVOLT.

Regiment Said to Have Been Cut to Pieces by Rest of Division.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—It is reported that a Bulgarian regiment refused to fight against the Serbs at Kadibogatz, near Kniagevatz, and killed its Colonel. The regiment, it is said, was surrounded and decimated by the rest of the division.

"IT CLEANS THE TEETH AND THE TOOTH-BRUSH TOO"

KOLYNOS Dental Cream

If You Had a Mouthful of Diamonds

You would probably take very good care of them.

When you clean your diamond ring with a brush, you are very careful what you use on that brush.

Why be less careful about your teeth, every one of which is worth more to your health and prosperity than MANY diamonds?

And why not recognize that the condition of the teeth cannot be good IF THE CONDITION OF THE GUMS IS BAD?

Kolynos Dental Cream is a complete tooth cleanser and beautifier—containing no grit or injurious substance.

BUT IT IS MUCH MORE. It destroys disease germs and aids to keep the gums firm and healthy.

It keeps the teeth, gums and tongue in a germ-minimized condition, conducive to health and beauty.

AND IT KEEPS THE TOOTH-BRUSH CLEAN.

A Scientist's View

Sir William Osler says: "More physical degeneracy can be traced to neglect of the teeth than to the abuse of alcohol."

His Human Carburetor

We recently circularized a number of New York motorists, calling attention to the fact that the mouth is the carburetor of the human system, and like the carburetor of an engine should be kept in a state of complete cleanliness.

One of the gentlemen to whom the circular was addressed has just sent us this reply:

"The sample tube of Kolynos duly received. Have been using Kolynos for cleaning my carburetor for several years with the highest satisfaction.

Very truly yours,
C. M. F."

Dental Suggestions

The fatty substance which the process of mastication leaves in the interstices of the teeth cannot always be reached by a tooth-brush. For this reason, Kolynos is made a solvent of fatty substances.

It is unnecessary to have bad teeth. Go to a dentist—let him put your teeth in order and follow his instructions as to how to keep them clean. Thus your efficiency will be increased.

The dentist uses Kolynos and recommends it, because it is an intelligently conceived dental cream, of genuine scientific value.

He has been furnished its formula and knows it has great germicidal power.

The Song of the Autumn Wind

Owners of motor cars, and those fortunates who have country as well as city homes, are watching Nature paint her beautiful Autumn landscape in the woods.

It is a melancholy beauty—like that of stricken Camille—for the year is dying.

The germs of decay are having their harvest—and with colder winds, rains and snows, the germs of disease will become more dangerous.

Keeping the mouth as nearly free of disease germs as possible unquestionably fortifies you against the attack of germ diseases.

"Safety First" For Motorists

Motorists, who are breathing germ-laden dust constantly, should brush their teeth and cleanse their mouths with Kolynos after every ride.

Kolynos is not a cure-all nor a prevent-all. It is simply a means of periodically cleansing and purifying the teeth, the mouth and the throat and preventing for a time the excessive multiplication of dangerous microbes.

GALLIPOLI OUTLOOK GLOOMY 7 WEEKS AGO

Allies' Grip on Peninsula Regarded as Weak by Associated Press Correspondent.

CALLS FLEET THE MAINSTAY

Says Turks Had 135,000 Men in the Trenches and 80,000 Reserves Close By.

The following letters from an Associated Press correspondent at the Dardanelles front are of interest in view of the assertion of Lord Milner in the House of Lords last week that the British campaign on the Gallipoli Peninsula had been a failure and the declination of the British Government to commit itself regarding continuation of this campaign. Although seven weeks have elapsed since these letters were written, there have been no changes of great importance since that time, so far as reported, on the Gallipoli front:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 1.—The position of the allied troops on the Anafarta-Ari Burnu front of the Gallipoli Peninsula can hardly be described as a promising one. Such at least was the impression gained by The Associated Press correspondent during an eight-day stay in the war arena in question.

The factors upon which this conclusion is based are a thorough inspection of the Turkish and allied trenches and artillery positions and the statements of Turkish officers and allied prisoners of war. What is perhaps of more importance is the result of four major military actions which occurred while the correspondent was on this front. They consisted of an attack by the Allies on a Turkish position north of Kodjatchemen Dagh on the afternoon of Aug. 20, and an assault on Turkish trenches in the same general locality on the same night, and two attacks on Anafarta on Aug. 26 and 27. In each instance the Allies were driven back with heavy losses. No advantages were gained by them, with the exception of the temporary occupation of a Turkish trench near Kutchuk Anafarta on Aug. 26.

Allies Had 11,000 Killed.

The losses of the Turks were by no means light in any of these operations, but the Allies, acting on the offensive, suffered heavily. Their losses for the four actions are estimated at 11,000 to 13,000 dead and double that number of wounded.

A description of the Ari Burnu-Anafarta territory may be of interest. When the correspondent visited this front the Turkish positions ran from the immediate north of Gaba Tepe along the base of Kodjatchemen Dagh, then turned slightly northeast toward and past Biyuk Anafarta, thence northwest past Kutchuk Anafarta, clearing that place to the west at a distance of about 1,100 yards, and continuing west in a semi-circular sweep toward Kiretch Tepe, or Chalk Hill. This elevation then formed the extreme Turkish right flank. Two hills south of Kiretch Tepe, on some maps indicated as part of the Kizlar Dagh, were in the hands of the British.

The ground held by the Allies was that part of the coast region which could be commanded by their naval artillery. Generally speaking, they held to the south of Kodjatchemen Dagh, the western slopes of the hills, within the line drawn above, of the Anafarta Valley, the west slope of a high ridge between the two Anafartas and the plain north of the Salt Lake. Near the eastern slope of Kiretch Tepe the allied trenches ran south again and finally crossed the northernmost of the two hills mentioned.

135,000 Turks in the Trenches.

Thus far the Allies have landed in the Anafarta region about 115,000 men, a large part of which force already has been used up. It is safe to say that they are today opposed by about 135,000 Turks, who are actually entrenched, with about 80,000 effectives in reserve.

Every advantage in terrain is held by the Turks, whose trenches are located on higher ground than those of the Allies. The Anafarta region may be compared to half of a huge saucer which has been broken, the line of breakage being formed by the shore of the Aegean Sea, and the bottom and rim being in the hands of the Allies and Turks respectively.

Until Aug. 16, when the Turks, under Lieut. Colonel Wilmers Bey, a German cavalry officer, retook Kiretch Tepe, the position of the Allies was better, as they were masters of at least a part of the Anafarta region. This advantage was lost on that day. A few days before the Turks, under Lieut. Col. Kannengieser, a German, reoccupied Kodjatchemen Dagh, while another Ottoman force, under Major Hunger, also a German, cleared off the allied troops from an important crest west of the Biyuk Anafarta Cemetery. With these positions lost, the Allies today hold themselves in the Aanafarta region by virtue of an immense artillery fire superiority. Without the support of some forty line ships, cruisers and torpedo boats, they would be "thrown into the sea," as Liman von Sanders, commander in chief of the Turkish Gallipoli Army, expressed it.

Turks Have Been Hard Pressed.

There have been moments, however, when the Turkish troops in the Anafarta district have been hard pressed. One such instance occurred on Aug. 26. The British fleet in the Aegean prepared by very severe bombardment for the ensuing infantry assault between the two Anafartas. When the rush came, the Turkish infantry was obliged to evacuate its advanced trenches. Retreating to the rear and communicating trenches, the Turks checked the advance of the British. Two days later the Turks reoccupied the lost position.

An attack made by the Allies on Aug. 26 and 27 in the direction of Kiretch Tepe ended in terrible slaughter of British troops, some 3,800 dead being counted on Aug. 28.

British prisoners assert that their position is a most trying one. Water is extremely scarce in the Anafarta region, and it is said only one well is in the hands of the British. The result is that water must be brought from the Island of Imbros, and even from Saloniki. The men receive a pint of tea in the morning and another at 5 o'clock. One-half pint of water at noon is the only allowance of this necessity, prisoners state, that is given.

Up to a week ago the food of the British soldiers consisted of six army biscuits and a preserved meat ration, some candy and jam being added. Poor health is the result of this diet. The correspondent talked to an English prisoner of the Hants Ninth Territorials, who, unable to obtain medical assistance, had become so weak from dysentery that his comrades had to abandon him when the Turks took the trench in which he was stationed. It is said there are many similar cases. The correspondent saw five of them. It was explained by these men that the British Sanitary Service is so overtaxed that it cannot give attention to every case of sickness brought to its notice.

Dust Inflames Invaders' Eyes.

To other handicaps of the allied troops must be added the great heat and ever-present dust. Of some 130 prisoners the correspondent saw, fully one-half suffered from inflammation of the eyes.

It cannot be said that the troops recently brought to the peninsula are first-class material. Many of the men are too young to endure the hardships of such a climate. Trench digging, under the prevailing conditions, is torture to their still undeveloped bodies. The exertions incident to this work, the heat, and the lack of water interfere seriously with the functions of their immature bodies, leading to painful disorders.

The prisoners of war with whom the correspondent talked had been in the service from four to eleven months. Some of them expressed dissatisfaction with their officers. The correspondent witnessed the total annihilation of a company which had penetrated a Turkish trench, but was destroyed because its flank was left uncovered. Whether this was due to the impulsiveness of the men or to the negligence of others could not be learned.

Situation at Sedd-el-Bahr.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 2.—When The Associated Press correspondent left the Gallipoli Peninsula after an eight-day stay on the front, the allied troops at Sedd-el-Bahr, on the tip of the peninsula, had been inactive for more than three weeks. Their position was no more favorable than that of their comrades in the Anafarta region.

Field Marshal Liman von Sanders, the German officer in command of the Turkish forces, gave his idea of the general situation as follows:

"I am too old to be an optimist, but I believe—I am absolutely confident—that unless something extraordinary occurs, we shall hold the Allies where they are."

The Field Marshal is 65 years old.

Thinks Advance too Costly.

So far as concerns the allied forces at Sedd-el-Bahr, it apparently has been demonstrated that it is next to impossible for them to advance, with operations conducted within the range of reasonable and permissible sacrifices of men. In other words, it is still possible to dislodge the Turks, but to do so would cause too great a loss to the Allies. On that front, as at Anafarta, the Turks have used every means to better their positions. Though both fields of action are small, the Turks have dug hundreds of kilometers of fire line and communicating trenches.

El Jid Tepe, in the Sedd-el-Bahr region, has been the objective of the Allies. Heavy guns stationed on its summit, they argued, could easily silence the forts at Tchanak Kale and Kilid Bahr. A survey of the ground, however, raises a serious question whether this theory is correct. The Turks, however, took no chances, and defended the elevation successfully.

The landing at Ari Burnu, in the northern zone, had a twofold purpose. It was the time to threaten the rear of the Turkish forces at Sedd-el-Bahr, and also to place the Kodjatchemen Dagh at the disposal of the heavy allied batteries.

Failed to Hold Important Positions.

From the Kodjatchemen Dagh the works at Kilid Bahr and Tchanak Kale could have been bombarded effectively, as could have been the Kilia and Akbach Bays, now serving as supply bases for the Turkish troops. Kodjatchemen Dagh was occupied by the British, but lost again. Kiretch Tepe was to serve as a flank position against possible Turkish attacks on the allied lines in and south of the Anafarta Plain. It, too, was retaken by the Turks.

From a strictly military point of view, political considerations disregarded, the Allies on the peninsula are in a less favorable condition today than they were on April 26, when the first landing took place.

The Turks in the Anafarta region for the greater part are Anatolian peasants, sturdy, tough, inured to every hardship of war, and not plagued by the nerves of their higher strung antagonists. Many of them are clad in rags, not a few are armed with single shot rifles, and most of them wear slippers instead of shoes. Their food, though plain, is substantial and wholesome, and their water supply is ample.

TO ADD 185 SHIPS TO AMERICAN NAVY

the Bureau of Construction and Repair. The total cost of each of the other types of vessels recommended is as follows: Battle cruiser, $17,500,000; scout cruiser, $5,000,000; destroyer, $1,860,000; fleet submarine, $1,500,000; coast submarine, $650,000; gunboat, $700,000; hospital ship, $2,450,000; fuel ship, $1,855,250; repair ship, $2,000,000.

"In addition to the $8,000,000 to increase the reserve of munitions, I have recommended in the regular appropriations an increase of $1,178,980 for ordnance, in which I have included $480,000 for torpedo defense nets for battleships; and I have recommended also an increase of $286,000 for buildings for the storage of guns and munitions. The reserve on hand now fully occupies the present storage facilities, and it has been found necessary to have this increased space for storage to take care of the additional munitions which I have recommended.

Encouraging the Naval Militia.

"In addition to the regular new construction, I am asking for a separate appropriation of $250,000 for the purchase and repair of ships for the Naval Militia of Illinois and Minnesota. In both of these States the Naval Militia is well organized, and its efficiency depends in each State upon securing a proper ship for their cruising and practicing. After consultation with the Governors and officers of the Naval Militia in these States, I have made recommendations which it is believed will give these two States ships of a suitable character. I have in prospect the larger utilization of the older class of battleships for the Naval Militia organizations of the States on the seacoast.

"I have also recommended an increase in the appropriation for naval militia as a whole of $90,737.35. The naval militia has made great strides this year, and it is the policy of the department to do everything in its power to increase the efficiency of the officers and men therein enrolled, who would make an excellent reserve in time of need.

"In order to provide a sufficient number of men to man the large number of ships of the navy which will be commissioned in the near future, I have recommended an increase of 7,500 sailors, 2,500 apprentice seamen, and 1,500 marines, or 11,500 men in all. This number, it is estimated, will enable us to keep in full commission all battleships under fifteen years of age, all destroyers and submarines under twelve years old, one-half the number of cruisers, all the gunboats, and the necessary auxiliaries for the fleet, as well as to provide adequate reserve complements for the remaining vessels of military value and for the shore stations, all of which accords with recommendations of the General Board.

"The great majority of enlisted men must, as apprentice seamen, pass through the Naval Training Stations, where they are taught the rudiments of education and undergo preliminary training, lasting from four to six months, to prepare them for duties aboard ship. It has become necessary, therefore, owing to the larger number of men in the service, to increase the number of apprentice seamen in order to provide the flow of new men required to fill vacancies in the ranks as they occur.

Additional Marine Officers.

"The increase in the marines is based on a 20 per cent. increase of enlisted men of the navy, and is required to provide for the usual marine complements of ships under construction, as well as for advance base organizations for operations with the fleet. To officer these additional men, it is recommended that there be appointed one Brigadier General, to command the advance base regiments; two Colonels, two Lieutenant Colonels, six Majors, one Colonel, an Assistant Quartermaster, fourteen Captains, fourteen First Lieutenants, thirteen Second Lieutenants, fifteen warrant officers, six Quartermaster's clerks, one Paymaster's clerk, or fifty-four commissioned and twenty-two warrant officers. This increase in officers is in accordance with the established ratio between officers and men.

"There should also be an increase in the number of line officers to officer the ships soon to be commissioned, but as the Naval Academy is the only source of supply, the increase recommended is in the Midshipmen. Under the existing laws governing the appointment of Midshipmen, the Naval Academy will not be able to graduate Midshipmen in numbers sufficient to officer the additional ships contemplated in the new program, and recommendations will be made to increase the number of Midshipmen at the academy by not less than 250.

"The European war has shown the necessity for a skilled flying corps, whose members need not be experienced naval officers or educated as such, in view of which a special flying corps, to which expert civilian flyers may be appointed, has been recommended for the naval organization. This would establish a field for service for the increasing number of competent aviators willing to join such an arm of the service, who cannot, and could not, hope, under prevailing conditions, to do so unless they either enlisted in the navy proper or graduated from the Naval Academy."

General characteristics of the battle cruisers planned contemplate ships nearly 800 feet long, between 90 and 100 feet in beam, and with six turbine-driven propellers, to make a minimum speed of thirty-five knots an hour. Even the new fleet of scout cruisers will not equal the battle cruisers in speed. The former will be designed to maintain for long periods a speed of twenty-five knots, endurance rather than excessive speed being the object sought. All of the new destroyers will make over thirty knots an hour, and one of the six for which contracts were let yesterday will make over thirty-two knots.

URGES ARMY ECONOMIES.

Defense Society Would Abolish Useless Posts and Reform Enlistment.

Over the signature of Captain Laurance Angel, U. S. A., retired, who is a graduate of the Army Staff College and also of the Army School of the Line, the National Defense Society issued a statement yesterday in reference to the proposed army reorganization plan approved by Secretary Garrison and President Wilson, and which is to be submitted to Congress at its coming session.

"Washington dispatches," says Captain Angel, "assert that the plans of the General Staff for an increased army would cost in the first year of operation $400,000,000. The American Defense Society is anxious to learn if this huge sum includes the maintenance of our superfluous and useless army posts, or whether the abolition of many of these posts might not reduce the sum advocated within reasonable limits."

Captain Angel cites the cases of Madison Barracks, at Sackett's Harbor, and the post of Oswego, both of which were originally established to hold the Indians in check, and which today are manned by about 500 men each, yet each of which requires "most of the facilities in the way of transportation and the like which would be necessary for a force ten times that size." Within a hundred-mile radius of those two New York posts, Captain Angel adds, there are other posts at Plattsburg, Niagara, Buffalo, and Fort Ethan Allen, the latter in Vermont.

"One army post," says Captain Angel, "could be established at Albany, for example, or any other central point, and maintained for much less money than the five present army posts cost the Government, with all of the 3,800 men of these scattered posts under one command. Instead of having a few companies of men drilling together and learning little or nothing, one would have approximately three regiments for field exercises and drill.

"The recent proposal of Mr. James Hay to pay National Guardsmen $50 a year should be carefully weighed and thoroughly discussed by military experts before any such scheme is adopted. This plan of paying National Guardsmen has been extensively tried out in other countries, and wherever it has been tried it has been abandoned. A system of building up what is, to use the President's phrase, 'a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms,' has been successfully worked out in Switzerland, where, without appreciable burden upon the people, every man of military age in emergency can, within twenty-four hours, report for duty as a trained soldier. Some such system as that of Switzerland or Australia, with such modifications as may be necessary for our own country, should be worked out by capable military authorities for our own needs.

SAY TRIEST CHARGES ARE NOT SUBSTANTIATED

State Department Investigators Report Evidence Does Not Support Accusations Against Youth.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—It became known today that agents of the United States Government have investigated the case of Kenneth G. Triest, held in London as a spy, and failed to find any evidence which would substantiate the charge.

Most of the alleged incriminating documents supporting the charges were letters written by the young man to friends and relatives in this country and intercepted by the British authorities. It was found that certain incidents mentioned in the letters never occurred.

Gustav W. Triest, father of the youth, failed today to keep an appointment with officials of the State Department. He was to have discussed the case of his son, whose trial is set for Nov. 1.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Kenneth G. Triest, the Princeton freshman, will soon go on trial here on a charge of espionage brought some months ago, after he enlisted in the British Navy. Young Treist would have been tried long ago but for a request by the State Department at Washington, through the American Embassy, for a delay to enable the boy's relatives in New York to present evidence tending to show that the youth was not responsible. The British officials, wishing to give the prisoner every possible chance, granted a delay until the boy's relatives come here to testify for him.

The relatives of Triest are expected here before long, when his trial will be held in camera. Information imparted to the American Embassy is that young Triest ran away from home, joining the British Navy merely as a lark, and that whatever he did was an outburst of an uncontrolled mind and not through a vicious spirit of enmity toward Great Britain.

It has been learned that just before his arrest Triest wrote a letter to his father, saying that he had joined the British Navy, but before the letter arrived the father got word through the State Department that his boy had been arrested.

ALL WE UNDERTAKE

All we undertake to do we do, and frequently we do more, as when, for example, we anticipate the completion date, or develop additional economies during the course of construction.

But putting aside the possibility of anticipated completion and additional economies, the assurance of rapid and economical results which we can give to an Owner to begin with, are of themselves sufficiently attractive and unusual to give the Thompson-Starrett service preference over others.

MORE GERMANS FLEE FROM INTERNED SHIPS

Two Officers of Eitel Friedrich Now Are Missing, Along with Eclipse Fugitives.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Read Admiral Beatty, Commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard, today notified Secretary Daniels that Dr. Kruger Kroneck and Lieutenant Koch, officers of the interned German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich, had been missing since Sunday. Admiral Beatty said that these two officers had been permitted to leave the warship on approved leave, or parole, and should have returned to the ship on Sunday last. They had not returned, he reported, and were two days overdue.

Admiral Beatty said that the absence of these two officers was reported to him yesterday morning by the commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, with the statement that the two men were seen in Norfolk and Newport News on Sunday.

With the disappearance of these two officers there are now eight officers missing from the two interned German ships at Norfolk—the Eitel and the Wilhelm. The other six disappeared in the sloop Eclipse after they had received permission to go on a sailing trip in the Lower Chesapeake Bay.

The absence of the six warrant officers from the Wilhelm was not reported to the Navy Department until Thursday, Oct. 14. Orders were at once given by Acting Secretary of the Navy Rosevelt that no more leaves of absence should be granted until the six missing warrant officers of the Kronprinz Wilhelm were satisfactorily accounted for or returned to their vessel.

The two officers who are now missing, it is understood, received permission to be absent until last Sunday, prior to the receipt of the orders from the Navy Department, under which no more leaves of absence were to be granted. Secretary Daniels has called upon Rear Admiral Beatty for a report of all the circumstances connected with the disappearance of these German officers.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 19.—In shipping circles it is asserted that the men who disappeared on the Eclipse boarded the Swedish steamship Texas, which cleared from Newport News on Sunday, Oct. 10. It is the belief that the yacht was sunk in order to hide their trail. The fugitives thus obtained a ten-day start on the trip across the Atlantic.

It is alleged that pro-Germans for some time have been arranging for the escape of the interned Germans on outgoing Swedish ships. Local Federal officials received this information several weeks ago and notified Washington, suggesting that the report be investigated.

APARTMENTS FOR SITE OF GEN. SICKLES' HOME

Modern Twelve-Story Building to Go Up at Fifth Avenue and Ninth Street.

The home of the late General Daniel E. Sickles at the northeast corner of Ninth Street and Fifth Avenue was sold yesterday by the Bowery Savings Bank to William Lustgarten & Co., builders, as a site for a twelve-story apartment house. This picturesque old house and the two adjoining dwellings, one on Ninth Street and one on Fifth Avenue, form a plot 79 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street. All three will be demolished when the leases expire in 1916. For years 23 Fifth Avenue was occupied by General Sickles, and in the house in Ninth Street General Sickles's second wife, who was estranged from him, lived. It was not until shortly before General Sickles's death that a reconciliation took place. In the meantime the General's financial troubles had grown so that he was threatened with foreclosure by the Bowery Savings Bank, which held a mortgage of $118,000. Taxes, interest, and liens against the property added $16,000 more. Mrs. Sickles paid a number of claims, but the property was finally taken over by the bank under foreclosure.

The property has an assessed valuation of about $166,000. The demolition of these old buildings foreshadows what may prove to be the solution of "the Washington Square problem," and its redemption to high-grade residence uses.

STRAUS IS STRONG FOR PREPAREDNESS

PLEADS FOR WAR VICTIMS

Asks Every American to Send Amount of Income Tax to Europe's Suffering.

Nathan Straus last night urged a thorough military and naval program as the best guarantee that America would not become involved in any more wars. Mr. Straus was a speaker, with Henry A. Wise Wood, a member of the Naval Advisory Board and Chairman of the Committee on National Preparedness, and L. Hollingsworth Wood, Secretary of the League to Limit Armaments, at the second convention of the Laymen's Efficiency League at Synod Hall, 110th Street and Amsterdam Avenue. H. A. W. Wood spoke for the advocates of armament, L. H. Wood for the pacifists, and Mr. Straus as "a neutral and an opponent of war."

Mr. Straus offered a suggestion on which, he said, he had spent the most profound thought. It was that every man rich enough to pay an income tax should give to the war sufferers in Europe an amount equal to his income tax.

"To send those poor people $60,000,000 would be what I call the best of Christianity and Judaism and all other religions," he said.

Mr. Straus had never before expressed publicly his views on preparedness, and as he had made his position clear he was warmly applauded.

Glad to Speak for Peace.

"I am glad to stand in the Synod Hall of this city's great cathedral to speak for peace," he said. "I am glad tot stand here as a Jew and do reverence to the personality and the teachings of that great Jew whom all the world recognized as the Prince of Peace.

"Let us remember that the doctrine of peace was first taught in a world in which every man's hand was against every other man. Peace then was an impossible idea. Yet what do we find today? Do you settle your differences with your neighbor with your fists, or with the sword, or with a gun? Has not peaceful equity among men been established by law? Is it not a rare thing for men to fight? Certainly this much progress has been made. Peaceful equity has been substituted for personal combat between individual men. The idea of peace, once an impossible conception, has been woven into the customs of humanity so far as individuals are concerned.

"But men acting collectively, in national groups, are far from being as civilized as they are in their individual lives. And so we are still the war. And so we have the most monstrous of all wars, in spite of thirty-five centuries of Jewish teachings, and in spite of nineteen centuries of Christian teachings. Shall we say, therefore, that while we may have peace among individual men, we cannot have peace among nations? I refuse to admit this. I believe that out of the terrible and consuming turmoil of the present European war will come that peace among nations that has been a human ideal only in recent years.

Contenders Don't Want Peace.

"I have no patience with the idea that any of the contenders in the present war want peace. They wanted war, and they got it, and it has proven far more terrible than any of them ever imagined. Blood guiltiness is upon all of them. They have willfully engaged in a huge riot, and they are paying the price.

"And there was no power on earth to stop them. Not one, nor all of the other nations could say to Germany and to England, 'You shall not fight,' and so their bitter commercial rivalries are being vented in war.

"How different it would have been if America and the other great neutral nations could have said to Kaiser and to King: 'Think of the terrible misfortune into which you are plunging your country—its citizens, for whose welfare and happiness you as a ruler are responsible. Think of the dreadful consequences and of the doubtful benefit paid for with the precious blood of the hundred thousands.'

"For in the last analysis is there anything at all in this war but miserable, contemptible brawl between the two biggest powers! And is there any reason at all for this war except that there was no concert or community among nations sufficiently powerful to prevent it!

"Now, the power to do this thing—the power to prevent war—can be achieved only by the most thorough preparedness on the part of the nations that want peace and order in the world. This, I maintain, is the overwhelming reason why America should have a powerful navy and a strong army, and the thorough equipment essential to the efficient use of this power.

"We need preparedness—not to fight battles, but to prevent battles being fought. We need preparedness, not to defend this nation against foes, but to compel and guarantee world peace. And America alone of all the nations is in the position to make such use of power as will curb and control the bickering, jealous nations that keep this world in such turmoil.

"I deny emphatically that preparedness leads to war. I assert with deep conviction that thorough preparedness on the part of America will be the best guarantee that the world can have that there will be no more wars.

"It was Cain, the murderer, who asked cynically, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' America, the big young brother of the nations, has been made in the progress of the world's development the keeper of the peace of the world, for there is no other nation so strong in its resources and so unselfish and so free from international entanglements as to be able to execute this rôle. It is therefore, to my mind, a duty that we owe not only to our own people, but to all the world, to be so thoroughly well prepared as to be not only invincible, but able to say to any nation that presumes to disturb the peace of the world, 'Take your quarrel to the court of the nations, the Permanent Court of Arbitration.' And to say this, and yet escape being made foolish, we must have the power, the preparedness, to summon the offender before the high court, if he presumes to affect, not to heed, the order to keep the peace.

Make America Strong.

"You ask, 'What shall patriotic men do?' My answer is, make America so strong in preparedness that it will be able to guarantee the peace of the world. This may be an ambitious idea, but America has every right to be so blessedly ambitious. What a father would do to protect his children, a government should do to protect the people. It is the duty of our Government, concentrated on the welfare of the United States, to make such preparations and authorize such expenditures as will save us from the experience, the horrors inflicted upon the nations of Europe.

"If the Government has its duty, the individual citizen also has its duty. This is my suggestion: Let Americans, blessed with peace and safety, spend in relieving the unfortunates of Europe at least a part of what war would cost us individually if the blessings of peace were removed.

"Let every man rich enough to pay an income tax give to the war sufferers an amount equal to his income tax. Very quickly would our income tax be doubled, trebled, and quadrupled if war should come upon us. Let us show our gratitude, not by eagerly striving for profit, but by proving sympathy. For each voluntarily to tax himself, for the well-to-do of this nation to contribute a fund of $50,000,000 or more in the year to the unhappy sufferers of the nations at war would be to give practical proof that we appreciate the peace blessing. I advocate that proof.

"To believe in peace and that it can be permanent; to work for peace and to strive to keep it when at last we get it. That is our duty. To prepare this nation vigorously, fully, against war, so that no nation may think of attacking us—that is our duty. And, blessed as we are among the nations, in peace, in prosperity, in safety, let us give generously to the less fortunate, and prove ourselves worthy of peace and its blessings. That is, above all, our duty."

Mr. Wise Wood urged that the recommendations of the General Staff and the Naval Board be carried out in full. He advocated a large navy to enforce the Monroe Doctrine, and said that after the present war Germany may look to South America, and we should be prepared.

"There is a moral pestilence abroad, a pestilence we thought the physicians of diplomacy had eradicated forever. But we nok see that they hadn't; that, instead, it has suddenly broken out afresh, to sweep Europe with such virulence as the world never has seen. What shall we do? Permit this pestilence to flow over our coasts and devastate our land as it has Europe? Or shall we establish a quarantine and place ourselves in position to repel it at our borders?" he said.

"At the moment perhaps our jeopardy is not great, but who may say that after the present conflict is over there shall not remain a dangerous, war-taught Germany, possessed of a vast sea power, capitalized in a hoarded fleet, furiously emerge a Germany governed by the determination to recover at any cost a shattered prestige through the successful conquest of a domain free of her late enemies?

"If such a Germany shall emerge with ourselves and the republics to the south of us unprepared to meet it upon clearly superior terms, who can doubt the nature of the conflict in which together we shall have to engage?"

Calls Armament No Shield.

L. Hollingsworth Wood, advocating disarmament, said that preparedness was not adequate because it did not go deep enough into human life.

"Europe, prepared as best they might," he said, "proves my thesis that armament cannot secure. We owe enormous debts to Europe for the pictures given us of conditions under militarism—of Louvain, of the Lusitania, of Turkey, and of the Armenians.

"Let us believe that the world has arrived at a stage for setting up an international government to force the administration of the rights of nations. Let us demand that appropriations be limited so that they are sufficient only for police duty. Let us demand that for every dollar we spend for armament we spend two dollars for the promotion of international relations."

EXTOLS SEVENTH REGIMENT.

Colonel Lydecker Speaks at Nineteenth Army Corps Dinner.

That the Seventh Regiment of the New York National Guard sent more Federal officers to the front in the civil war than did West Point was asserted by Colonel Charles E. Lydecker of the regiment at the annual dinner of the Society of the Nineteenth Army Corps held last night. The dinner marked the fifty-first anniversary of the battle of Cedar Creek, at which battle the Nineteenth Corps was hotly engaged.

Colonel Lydecker, responding to the toast to the militia of New York, touched on the question of the relation of the militia to preparedness, which he said should be borne in mind by every one of the 15,000,000 men of fighting age in this country.

"We have an organization in this State nearer to that of the United States forces because the number of militiamen, 15,500, is practically an army corps, and is therefore a complete little army under one commander, the Governor," he said. "What has hindered our sister States is the fact that to make up anything like a complete corps they have to unite with other States, and this means two or three different commanders. Secretary Garrison's plan is arranged to do away with this difficulty and give the nation 4,000,000 men under one organization."

Major George Haven Putnam, President of the Society, spoke on the dead leaders of the Nineteenth Army Corps, and there were speakers representing the regular army and navy of the civil war period. About seventy-five guests attended the dinner.

COMPROMISE SALARY CUTS.

Mayor Half Way Loses Fight to Lower Pay of Old City Employes.

Mayor Mitchel and Controller Prendergast, as minority members of the Board of Estimate Budget Committee, accepted yesterday a number of compromises in the matter of reducing salaries of city employes as recommended by the Sub-Budget Committee. Ten men who have been employed in the office of County Clerk William F. Schneider for fifteen years were down for a reduction from $1,500 to $1,200 each. President McAneny and Borough Presidents Mathewson and Pounds objected to the reduction, and the Mayor and the Controller finally compromised on a reduction to $1,380.

The salary of John H. Wrede, cashier of the County Clerk's office, who has been in the city's service twenty-one years and who is 62 years old, was reduced from $2,600 to $2,100. The subcommittee had recommended a reduction in the salary of Edward J. Stapleton, law clerk of the County Clerk's office, from $3,500 to $2,800. He has been in the city's service thirty-six years, and President McAneny and Presidents Pounds and Mathewson refused to vote for the reduction. The salary will remain at $3,500.

The sub-committee took up the Police Department budget for 1916 and recommended that it be reduced from $18,018,263.19 to $17,670,761.13. Most of the saving was made possible by deciding that the requisition of Commissioner Wood for 250 new policemen next year be not allowed. The salary of Executive Clerk Charles Kloss was recommended cut from $2,100 to $1,800 and that of Chief Clerk William H. Kipp from $5,000 to $3,500. Eight deputy chief clerks also came in for a recommended reduction in salaries.

TRADE BALANCE RISES.

Total Last Week, $43,912,598, Highest Mark in Months.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The foreign trade balance in favor of the United States jumped up several millions last week, reaching the highest mark for several months, $43,912,598. The volume of exports for the week ended Saturday reported from the thirteen principal ports was $73,684,653 and of imports $29,782,055. Collections of duties amounted to $3,478,385.

The exports from New York for the week were $44,867,858 and the imports $19,861,037, with collections of duty amounting to $2,650,319. Exports increased at Galveston to $5,122,000, at Baltimore to $4,905,000, and at Detroit to $3,310,000, mainly on cotton and grain. The shipments of cotton reached 146,661 bales, making the total since the beginning of August 958,145 bales.

The imports and exports of copper were unusually large during the week, the former amounting to 4,634,000 pounds and the latter to 4,335,622 pounds. The two large items of export were 1,412,234 pounds to Italy and 2,543,102 pounds to England. There were imported from Peru 2,888,372 pounds of pigs and bars, from Chile 745,745 pounds, and from Panama 438,199 pounds of scrap. Canada shipped in 422,749 pounds of ore and 87,700 pounds of scrap.

VOTE FOR WIRELESS STRIKE.

Union Operators Reported to Favor Quitting if Pay Is Not Raised.

The organized wireless operators of the Atlantic Coast have voted at the rate of five to one in favor of a general strike unless their demands are granted, according to the announcement made yesterday by Secretary Schnatzinetz of Wireless Division No. 58 of the Commercial Telegraphers.

"The demand is for an increase in wages which will raise the scale to $30 to $75 a month," he said. "We will not submit any demands until the strike vote is all in."

Week's Death List Larger.

There was an increase of 102 deaths in New York City last week over the corresponding week of last year, according to the weekly report of the Health Department. The death rate per thousand was 11.56 this year and 11.07 last year. The heavier mortality this year was due to an increase in heart disease, pulmonary tuberculosis, and nephritis. The death rate for the first forty-two weeks of 1915 fell off slightly, as compared with the death rate for the same weeks of 1914.

drafted the city's civil service rules. They were adopted and have been the rules of the commission with few changes since.

For the three years following Mr. McAneny studied law in the office of Edward M. Shepard, and for the next three succeeding years he was President of the City Club. He was elected President of the Borough of Manhattan in 1909 and President of the Board of Aldermen, his present position, in 1913. In the Summer of that year he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for Mayor on the Fusion ticket.

Should a Democrat be elected next year as President of the Board of Aldermen, the Fusion members of the Board of Estimate would not lose the majority control, as the vote would still be 11 to 5 in favor of the Fusion members.

TAX BOARD MAKES AN 'EXEMPT ZONE'

No One East of Second Avenue Is Likely to be Assessed on Personalty.

LAWSON PURDY TESTIFIES

Suggests Various Substitutes to Mills Committee, and, Like Others, Thinks Well of an Income Tax.

Lawson Purdy, President of the Tax Board, told the Mills Legislative Committee on Taxation at its session in the Woolworth Building yesterday some of the Tax Board's sources of information in compiling its enormous personal tax assessment for 1916. He frankly admitted that the present personal property tax is a failure, but said that every opportunity is being given to test it thoroughly.

Concerning the appearance of new names on the personal assessment rolls for next year, Mr. Purdy said that the Tax Board's examiners keep a close watch on the filing of wills for probate, not only in New York, but in many up-State counties; that they utilize the names in the City Directory and telephone books, and, for corporations in particular, the filing of certificates of incorporation with the Secretary of State at Albany. He denied emphatically that the inflation of personal tax figures in New York City this year was intended to discredit the personal tax law.

"As to taxable persons, we obtain information in various ways," said Mr. Purdy. "We take the telephone book and the street directory, and we have men who cut them up into districts and alphabetical divisions, and then we begin our assessments of the districts. If you happen to live east of Second Avenue you will most likely escape the personal property tax. This is a secret of my department, but I will tell you gentlemen about it. We have what we call the 'exempt zone,' which is east of Second Avenue. The people there are not likely to be assessed, and I admit we are not doing our duty in not trying to collect taxes in that locality.

Ghoulish Source of Information.

"The general scheme of taxing personal property now is to get from various sources names of persons who may be assessed. First we search titles and assess persons for a larger amount than the estate, so that the executor will come to us and swear as to the intrinsic value of the estate."

The witness said he knew it was a wrong practice to tax the executors or legatees of an estate.

"It may look absurd," he said, "but what can we do? We do not know otherwise if the legatees have possession of the stock. This is one of the most ghoulish sources of our information. As to individuals, we get information in various ways, such as from articles of co-partnership. We assess on the basis of the capital stock of the firm. But we must use the street directory and the telephone book, the other people. We get certain information from the County Clerk's office. The corporation papers not filed there we get from the Secretary of State. Then we assess them 20 per cent. on their capital stock. A person may evade the personal assessment, but every once in a while we catch them unawares, and then we apply our assessment."

Referring to the source of other and secret information, the witness said it was private but highly reliable, and the information was given on condition that its source would not be divulged. As a matter of fact, he said, the information came too late to allow the best use of it to be made.

Purdy Suggests Substitutes.

As a tax expert of national reputation, Mr. Purdy was asked what he would substitute for the personal property tax which he said he believed was bad for the community, unfair, and tending to create a danger in uncollectible taxes. He mentioned these substitutes:

Higher taxation of high-powered automobiles as compared with low-powered cars, as the former are harder on roads; instead of $1,800,000 now collected in automobile taxes, he believed that $4,000,000 might be obtained; the question of taxing cars on weight should be discussed. Graduations in the inheritance taxes should be narrowed, but the rates not increased and double taxation avoided. There should be a secured debt tax, meaning a tax on bond issues, with equitable provisions for dealers in bonds. Bonds of foreign corporations should be taxed here the first time transferred; domestic corporation bonds at time of issue and upon every sale. Such a tax ought, he said, to return $4,000,000 to the State.

Permission for cities to impose an occupation tax for revenue for local use. Tax interest and dividends paid by corporations, foreign and domestic, on capital invested in the State. Insist upon annual direct State tax of at least one mill, to make the ordinary citizen feel the "bite" of the State expenditures and possible extravagances. Any excess in State revenue to be returned to localities, according to assessed value of real estate. This would circumvent tax-dodging by corporations that have a nominal "home" office in some obscure community where the assessor is complaisant, and would benefit communities having high assessed realty valuations.

Mr. Purdy said he favored an income tax, with a tax on salaries from $2,000 upward. At the same time, he said, he would have persons with an income of $1,500 make a declaration, although they would not be taxed. He said he would approve of an income tax only as a substitute for the personal property tax.

HUSSEY TO BE REINSTATED.

Former Police Inspector Wins Case Before the Court of Appeals.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 19.—The appeal of Police Commissioner Woods from an order of the Appellate Division, First Department, annulling his determination in dismissing Police Inspector James C. Hussey, was fruitless, for the Court of Appeals handed down a decision today affirming the order of the lower court, which directed the reinstatement of the policeman.

Hussey was convicted with Inspector Sweeney of conspiracy to obstruct the administration of justice in attempting to get witnessed out of the jurisdiction of the court, to protect Patrolman Fox, charged with being a graft collector. Hussey was found guilty and served a short term on Blackwell's Island, but the Appellate Division reversed the conviction.

Upon his release from prison Hussey was reinstated to the Police Department, but Commissioner Woods preferred charges against him and he was found guilty on trial before a Deputy Commissioner and dismissed. It was alleged he took a bribe of $75 a month from James Dougherty, proprietor of a Harlem Hotel. James Wren, a plain clothes man, had been collecting from Dougherty when Inspector Thompson was in charge of the precinct, and testified that he continued to make the collections by authority of Hussey.

A TEN-STAR PHOTOPLAY.

"How Molly Made Good" is the name of a novel, ingenious, and entertaining movie which was privately exhibited at the Broadway Theatre yesterday morning and will be released by the Kulee Company to an eager public a week or so from now. Its novelty is the impressive procession of stage notables who shared in its preparation. Henrietta Crosman, Robert Edeson, Julia Dean, Henry Kolker, Leo Ditrichstein, Julian Eltinge, May Robson, Cyril Scott, Lulu Glaser, Charles J. Ross, and Mabel Fenton all took part.

The plan was to find a scenario that would show them in their respective homes amid their families, live stock, flowers, automobiles, and other signs of prosperity. Burns Mantle produced the scenario, and the connecting story turns upon an Irish girl, just initiated as a reporter and assigned as a test to a chain interview that must be completed before a designated day and hour. Thus is added the excitement of a race which involves rides in vehicles of every description, aeroplane flights, train wrecks, fights with pickpockets, fights with dogs, and one splendidly spectacular drive through a Summer downpour.

Of course, Park Row is invaded for atmosphere. The villainess is a lady reporter who addresses her Sunday editor as "Old Dear," and generally earns the imprisonment in a New Jersey lock-up which is her ultimate reward. Molly, who is played by Marguerite Gale, is accredited to "a morning newspaper." Her reward, by the way, is $50, a job, and the "associate editor," who is young and reasonably handsome.

WHITE RATS' RALLY.

Begin Campaign to Better Conditions for Vaudeville Actors.

Between four and five hundred men and women, the majority of them vaudeville players, gathered in the clubrooms of the White Rats after theatre time last night to inaugurate a campaign to better the conditions of the profession. Fred Niblo, past Big Chief of the organization, opened the meeting and introduced Harry Mountford, international organizer of the White Rats.

Mr. Mountford outlined the situation and opened the campaign for more members with a rousing talk. Mr. Mountford occupied a similar position four years ago, when the objections of the vaudeville heads forced him out of the club. Since then the White Rats have been losing influence, and the present movement has been begun to place the club back on its former footing. Efforts will be made to stop the cutting of salaries, which Mr. Mountford said he had predicted four years ago was about to happen, and the cancelling of contracts without notice.

Fritzi Scheff Upsets Alhambra Bill.

The artistic temperament caused an upheaval yesterday in the Alhambra Theatre. Fritzi Scheff is the headliner there this week, and Harry Fox and Yansci Dolly were also included on the bill. The names of all three were in tungstens on the sign in front of the theatre, but the temperamental Miss Scheff objected, and had the names of Mr. Fox and Miss Dolly removed. When they missed their names they decided to bid farewell to the Alhambra till some time when Miss Scheff will be absent. Ernest Ball has been substituted for the missing number.

SHIP MEN ANXIOUS OVER SEAMEN'S ACT

A SHIPPING TIEUP FEARED

The La Follette seamen's act becomes effective on Nov. 4, and from that date no seaman may be engaged unless he has the certificate demanded by the new law. In addition to the able seamen each American vessel must carry three boat handlers for each lifeboat, who hold certificates to show that they are competent and understand how to clear a boat, launch it, lower away, and row and steer. These men, the act states, can be taken from the engine room, stewards', or deck departments so long as they pass the examination.

So far no instructions have been received here from the Secretary of Commerce as to how and where these men are to be examined and by whom. Marine Superintendents of the American steamship companies in New York have written to Washington to find out what is to be done, but have received no information except vaguely that the Coast Guard Service will look after it.

Several retired Captains and mates have written to the Department of Commerce applying for positions as examiners and have been informed that the work will be done by officers now in the Government service. This may mean that naval officers at the Brooklyn Navy Yard will be called upon at the last moment to examine the men. Captain John F. Wild, Chief of the New York Coast Guard Service, said yesterday that he had received no instructions in the matter.

United States Shipping Commissioner Patrick Quinn at the Barge Office said yesterday that he had been issuing certificates to all seamen paid off here within the last two months giving a record of their sea service to help them obtain La Follette certificates. Men who have served three years at sea in the deck department of a steam or sailing vessel will only have to pass a physical examination to get certificates as able seamen. Any man who has served twelve months at sea on the Great Lakes on any vessel of 100 or more tons must pass a physical examination and stand 75 in a possible 100 in an examination on these matters.

Lights and fog signals.
Engine room signals for starting and stopping steamers.
Passing signals for steam vessels.
Knotting, bending, splicing, and hitching.
Pulling an oar, and all duties connected with lowering and getting away a lifeboat.
Handling boats at sea.

Captain Joyce Charlton of the Local Steamship Inspection Board said yesterday that his office would issue the certificates, but he did not know what arrangements had been made for examinations. He added that the questions drawn up by the Department of Commerce were rather difficult for everyday seamen. The term "trip of the boat," mentioned under the heading of question H, he had never heard of, and was puzzled to know what is meant.

The time is growing short and the steamship companies are becoming anxious because they will not be able to send ships to sea after Nov. 4 unless they can get certified men. A steamer like the American liner Finland will require about twenty-four able seamen on deck and thirty-six boat handlers.

The officers of American steamers trading from New York have been busy since April drilling members of crew to pass the examination as boat handlers. In addition 75 per cent. of the men must understand the language of the officers of their department.

$5,000 ROFRANO REWARD.

Aldermen Grant Mayor's Request to Make Search More Attractive.

The Aldermen yesterday authorized the Controller to issue $5,000 in special revenue bonds, requested by the Mayor several weeks ago, for information leading to the arrest of Michael A. Rofrano, the former Deputy Street Cleaning Commissioner, indicted on a charge of murder.

When the request of the Mayor first came up Alderman Curran asked for unanimous consent for its adoption. This was defeated by objections from Aldermen Quinn and Jacobson. The matter came up again the following week, but it was impossible to get the required sixty votes. Yesterday it was passed by a vote of sixty-two in its favor, Alderman Quinn alone voting in the negative.

The Mayor will withdraw the $500 reward originally issued and issue a new proclamation offering a reward of $5,000.

CHARLES S. MELLEN TAKES STAND TODAY

IS GOVERNMENT WITNESS

Counsel for Prosecution Tells Jury Public Was Robbed by Defendant Directors.

Charles S. Mellen, President of the New Haven Railroad during its period of expansion, will take the stand this morning in the Federal District Court before Judge Hunt to testify for the Government against William Rockefeller, Lewis Cass Ledyard, and nine past and present members of the New Haven Board of Directors, on trial for conspiracy to monopolize New England traffic. He is expected to tell the inside history of the fight to control railroad, steamship, and trolley lines on which the charge of violating the Sherman law has been brought against his former associates. He will probably be under examination for several days.

Another witness will be Warren D. Chase of Hartford, Conn., who was one of Edward D. Robbins's handy men. A subpoena was served on him a few days ago and his name was called in court yesterday. He was not present and he will be called for again this morning. The other witnesses expected to be examined, Arthur Clark, Secretary of the New Haven, and Arthur Russell, valuation counsel of the company, are required merely for formal testimony in connection with documents.

The calling for Mr. Chase came as R. L. Batts of counsel for the Government closed at 3 o'clock his lengthy opening address to the jury. He had been speaking for more than a day and a half, and, when he was through, said it was the first opening speech he had ever made, and added that in Texas, where he generally practiced, opening statements are seldom made.

Mr. Batts Charges Deceit.

Yesterday Mr. Batts discussed the profit arising from the purchase for the New Haven of 20,000 Boston & Maine shares by Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Boston. It appeared, Mr. Batts said, that although the New Haven had announced it would divest itself of its Boston & Maine shares, and although it had sold 109,948 of them to the Billard Company, at the same time it was acquiring through Kidder, Peabody & Co. about 20,000 more shares. These, according to the Government, were purchased at about 120 and sold to the Billard Company at 140, thereby making a profit of about $400,000. Later the Billard Company sold them again to the New Haven, making a profit in turn of $200,000. Mr. Batts promised the Government would show what became of the $600,000 profit made by the sale of the stock here by the bankers.

The first trolley lines the New Haven acquired, Mr. Batts said, were the Stamford and Meriden companies. The result was so satisfactory that it proceeded to acquire the street railway system of Hartford, paying $296 a share for the stock and $2,850 for the 1,000 bonds, a sum much in excess of the true market value, he said. This price, he thought, was paid in order to insure the monopoly, not with any view of the true investment value.

Speaking then of the $20,000,000 given for the Rhode Island trolleys, Mr. Batts asserted that it was paid just as high-speed electric cars were to be put on, which, with steamboat connection, might have proved a serious competitor of the New Haven lines.

"So well was it understood," he said, "that the price had no regard to earning capacity and was paid merely to prevent the public getting a cheap, convenient service, that $1,000,000 was set aside to pay deficits in operation and unearned dividends."

He said $20,000,000 was paid for lines worth only $2,000,000.

Then Mr. Batts passed to the steamship lines which the New Haven had absorbed. Pointing with his cane at the wall map he said:

"See what were the conditions of the early nineties. There were many lines—the Boston & Albany, the New Haven, the New York & New England. All were in competition that was certain to be fruitful to the public. Then consider August, 1914, when the Government was investigating, and see how this city was absolutely in the grasp of this railroad. Springfield, New Haven, and Providence all present similar comparisons, and all these were due to what was known as the Corsair agreement."

Alleges B. & M. Intimidation.

Then he sketched the control which the New Haven exercised over the Joy Line by the alleged secret purchase of the capital stock in December, 1905, through the New England Navigation Company, and through it he charged it drove out of business the Enterprise Transportation Company. Yet, he said, the New Haven had the opportunity to sell for $20,000,000 its steamship lines to Charles W. Morse, although they had cost it only $6,000,000. He also said the Maine Steamship Company, which he connected with the dealings between the New Haven and the Boston & Maine, was acquired by the New Haven as a club to use against the Boston & Maine.

In discussing the methods used by the New Haven in securing the 109,948 shares of the Boston & Maine, which it afterward sold to the Billard Company, Mr. Batts alleged that a Governor of Massachusetts, before he would assent to legislation that would enable the New Haven to control the Boston & Maine, stipulated that he should have the right to nominate the President of the road. The bargain was not kept, Mr. Batts said, as the New Haven forced the selection of Mr. Mellen.

Mr. Batts then touched on the exchange between the New York Central and the New Haven of their control over the Rutland and the New York, Ontario & Western. The result of it was, he said, that the competition of the Boston & Albany was entirely eliminated, and that since 1911 the New Haven had contributed to make up the deficiency in the earnings of the Boston & Albany. The exchange of the Rutland and the Ontario & Western lines, Mr. Batts asserted, was made without the consent of the Public Service Commission of New York.

There yet remained one independent line in New England, said Mr. Batts, the Grand Trunk Railway Company, and he alleged it was not the fault of the New Haven that it was independent.

Takes Rap at Mellen.

The last matter which Mr. Batts took up in his speech was the purchase by the New Haven of the New York, Westchester & Boston Railroad Company. Concerning it he said:

"Not only did the Directors do things wholly improper, but the Government will show they encouraged others to do questionable things.

"Mr. Mellen did business with men he had never seen, men whom he studiously avoided. He said he had need of money for certain purposes. He was, he declared, having trouble with people in a certain street in New York. It may have been Fourteenth Street or some street like that. I am a stranger here and not quite familiar with your streets.

"So he gave stock of the New Haven which was worth 150 for shares of the Westchester at the rate of one to three, or paid in equivalent sums in cash. As it was advisable that Mr. Mellen should not know to whom he paid the money, he gave checks drawn by Mellen, signed by Mellen, and indorsed by Mellen."

Mr. Batts suggested that it would be convenient if he did not take all Mr. Mellen's evidence at once, but that after he had carried his testimony to the end of a certain period of time he should be excused, to be recalled later.

Judge Hunt denied pro forma the motion of Thomas D. Thacher of counsel for the defense to quash the indictments. The motion will be renewed and argued as soon as the Government has put in its evidence.

The court adjourned until 10:30 this morning.

ENDS 3,500-MILE JOURNEY.

Canadian Northern's First Through Train Reaches Vancouver.

Special to The New York Times.

ON BOARD CANADIAN NORTHERN'S FIRST TRANSCONTINENTAL TRAIN, VANCOUVER, Oct. 19.—The Parliamentary Special train which is opening the newest Canadian railway line to the Pacific rolled into Vancouver station just before 1 o'clock this morning, completing its 3,500-mile journey across the continent almost on schedule time. Its time from Montreal on Tuesday evening, six days and a few hours, is no indication, however, of the time that regular passenger trains will take to make the trip when the regular service opens in November, for almost a third of the period consumed in the journey has been taken up in receiving the congratulations of happy Canadian citizens, inspecting new Canadian industries and prospective settlements, and in general felicitations over an auspicious event.

The train rolled into Vancouver a full quarter of a mile long, the addition of a welcoming party sent by the Premier of British Columbia in a private car, making a total of sixteen heavy cars. To take it over the Westminster Bridge into Vancouver, where the Canadian Northern at present uses the Great Northern's terminal and tracks from Port Mann, pending the completion of its own 150-acre terminal now in process of construction, it was found desirable to divide it into two sections. The bridge is over a mile long, and quarter-mile trains were not contemplated in its construction.

From Kamloops on the western slope of the Rockies, passed on Sunday night, the special sped at an even pace of twenty-five to thirty miles an hour along the newly built track along the north bank of the North Thompson River to its junction with the Fraser, thence descending the south side of the Fraser Cañon and paralleling the Canadian Pacific line on the north bank into Vancouver.

This is the most picturesque part of the whole journey. All day long the train wound around the curves of the cañon through a gorgeous setting of evergreens and autumn foliage, the silver streak of the mighty river far below and the green-clad walls of the mountain slopes behind. Occasionally a stop was made to take a photograph or to take a longer view of some particularly beautiful spot.

Sir William Mackenzie sat in his private car at the tail end of the train, happy as a boy, watching the winding line of steel track unroll before him, keenly appreciative of the engineering skill that had surmounted a difficulty here or solved a problem there, pointing out to the friends who surrounded him the fine points of construction already accomplished and the chances he saw for later improvements. It is no small thing to build a transcontinental railroad. He has been engaged in the task since 1902, and in the fifteen years between his company has built nearly a mile and a half of track a day. The newly completed links now opened amount altogether to 1,700 miles. Now, with the goal in sight, Sir William was a happy man.

Tonight the newspaper men on the train sent him a message of congratulation on the completion of his life work, but there were no speeches. Sir William does not like "fuss." One thing he said in the course of the afternoon reveals his view of what has been accomplished.

"The biggest thing and the best we have done," he mused, "is that we have put 300 new Canadian towns and villages on the map."

Today the party is to sail to Victoria, the capital of British Columbia, and is to be received by Premier McBride. Tomorrow the Mayor and civic associations of Vancouver will entertain the visitors. At night the return journey will begin.

TAFT WOULD REDUCE PRESIDENT'S POWER

Favors Limiting Appointments to Cabinet Officers and Secretaries.

A limitation upon the power of the President to make local federal appointments and upon the federal courts to distribute patronage in the form of receiverships and other offices was strongly advocated last night by ex-President Taft in his lecture, the third in a series on the Presidency, at Columbia.

He would take all local offices out of the hands of the President and put them into the classified service, leaving to the Executive only Cabinet officers and a political under-secretary to each department head.

Federal judges should be saved from themselves, in the opinion of Mr. Taft. Receivers for railroads, when needed, should be appointed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, subject to the approval of the court.

Referring to the desirability of putting the 10,000 Presidential appointees into the classified service, Mr. Taft cited the report of a commission that made an investigation in the time of his administration. This commission found that if these offices were classified the chief offices might be abolished and the work be done by the present assistants, whose salaries could be reduced 20 per cent. In this way the work of the Government would be more effectively done by the assistants, who are experts.

As a further argument for continuity in office, Mr. Taft said:

"Consider the entirely unnecessary helplessness of our Government in the administration of our foreign affairs, in which there is a greater necessity for continuity of policy than in any other department, when men having no practical knowledge of the previous foreign policy of the Government, its safe traditions or of diplomatic custom, are substituted for competent officials. When such changes are made we put ourselves at a great disadvantage in dealing with the departments of foreign affairs of other countries, and this disadvantage is accentuated and increased when competent representatives abroad in our diplomatic service are removed and men of no experience replace them."

G. W. PERKINS TO VOTE "NO."

Moose Leader Says Constitution Should Be Defeated.

George W. Perkins announced last night that he intended to vote against the proposed State Constitution. He said:

"Referring to the inquiries that are being made of me as to my attitude toward the new Constitution, this is to say that I have been making a careful examination of the Constitution, that I might vote as intelligently as possible. As a result of this study, I have definitely decided to vote against it. My reasons for this action are not general. They are specific, and will be made public in a statement which I am preparing and will issue shortly."

STRAUS PICKS JUSTICES.

Says Election of Taylor and Platt Would Aid Westchester.

A letter from Oscar S. Straus to John J. Ackerman, Chairman of the Westchester County Committee of the National Progressive Party, in which he indorsed the candidacy of John C. R. Taylor of Middletown, Orange County, and William P. Platt of White Plains for Supreme Court Justices of the Ninth Judicial District, was made public yesterday. The letter said in part:

I am pleased to know that the Progressive Party have nominated former Senator Taylor and Judge Platt for the two Supreme Court positions, as they are by character, attainment, and public services eminently fitted and qualified. In saying this I do not wish to be understood as casting any reflection upon Mr. Young and Mr. Seeger, the candidates of the Republican Party, as I have no personal acquaintance with them. However well qualified Messrs. Young and Seeger may be, they are evidently the victims of a vicious system which is control by power which it is the high aim of the Progressives and of all untrammeled citizens to root out of our political system, namely, that irresponsible "invisible power" which seeks to control, and unfortunately too often controls, political machinery of the nation.

Mr. Straus said that he was not a voter in the counties comprised in the Ninth Judicial District, as his legal residence is in New York City, and although he has property and is building a country residence in Westchester County, he said his interest in the matter is not local, but general, as a citizen of the State of New York.

Yesterday's figures bring the total of persons assessed who have been examined since the books were opened on Oct. 1 to 2,178. Their total tentative assessment amounted to $172,863,500. Of the number, 354 have been held for a final assessment of $2,439,191.

CARRANZA PARTY NOW RECOGNIZED

Colombia and Nicaragua Act with Seven States of Pan-American Conference.

FLETCHER FOR AMBASSADOR

Envoy, Now in Chile, Practically Decided Upon—Arredondo to Represent Carranza.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Venustiano Carranza was formally recognized today as the Chief Executive of the Republic of Mexico by the Governments of the United States, Brazil, Chile, Argentina, Bolivia, Uruguay, Guatemala, Colombia and Nicaragua.

Diplomatic representatives of the first six Latin-American countries, selected in the order of their rank here, were parties to the Pan-American Conference on Mexican Affairs, but the action of Colombia and Nicaragua indicates that all the other republics of the Western Hemisphere will follow the lead of their sister nations in extending recognition.

Each of the Governments sent a letter to Eliseo Arredondo, personal representative here of Carranza. All were couched in the same form, and that of the United States added a formal expression of an intention soon to accredit an Ambassador to Mexico.

Henry Prather Fletcher, at present American Ambassador to Chile, practically has been decided upon as the next Ambassador to Mexico. Although a Republican in politics, he was elevated from the rank of Minister to Ambassador by President Wilson after a long and successful record in the diplomatic service.

Secretary Lansing's letter was as follows:

Eliseo Arredondo, Esq.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19, 1915.

My dear Mr. Arredondo—It is my pleasure to inform you that the President of the United States takes this opportunity of extending recognition to the de facto government of Mexico of which General Venustiano Carranza is the Chief Executive.

The Government of the United States will be pleased to receive formally in Washington a diplomatic representative of the de facto government as soon as it shall please General Carranza to designate and appoint such representative, and, reciprocally, the Government of the United States will accredit to the de facto government a diplomatic representative as soon as the President has had opportunity to designate such representative. I should appreciate it if you could find it possible to communicate this information to General Carranza at your earliest convenience.

Very sincerely yours,
ROBERT LANSING,
Secretary of State.

Several diplomats, among them the Argentine Ambassador, the Bolivian and Guatemalan Ministers, and John R. Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson in Mexico, called at the Mexican Embassy during the afternoon and many felicitations came by telegraph or messenger. Mr. Arredondo issued tonight the following formal statement:

"Recognition of the government of Mr. Carranza is a triumph of Pan-American policy, and without doubt will bring about very soon the re-establishment of peace and normal conditions in Mexico. For this, her sister republics and their worthy representatives here deserve sincere and fraternal felicitation as this act of justice has been done for one of the republics which has been and shall continue to be an integral part of the international American concert.

"Foreigners have and will continue to have the protection to which they are entitled by international law and existing treaties in accordance with international amity. Foreign capital will be welcomed, and very soon a decree of amnesty which Mr. Carranza is preparing will be issued that will permit the Mexicans whose presence in Mexico will not constitute a vital menace to the peace and consolidation of the Government to return from their exile, which has caused them to suffer on account of the civil war.

"Railroad and telegraph communication is being re-established as rapidly as possible. The world generally, however, must be a little patient. Reconstruction cannot come in a day. I believe the extension of recognition in itself will have a good effect throughout Mexico, giving the people confidence in the new Government, tending to restore normal conditions. The United States has shown itself throughout the last three years, since the overthrow of Madero, the constant friend of the revolution and in sympathy with its liberal principles. We today celebrate not only this, but a triumph of Pan-American policy."

Mr. Arredondo also gave out a dispatch he had received from General Carranza, stating that no Carranza troops had crossed into Guatemala, as reported, and that strict orders had been given to avoid any complications on the Guatemalan border.

Celebrated in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 19.—The news that the government of General Venustiano Carranza had been recognized by the American Republics was received here with scenes of general rejoicing. The extra editions of the newspapers containing the news were eagerly bought by the promenaders, and the tidings spread rapidly through the city. The bells in the cathedral were rung, and there were fireworks, the blowing of whistles, and scenes of general animation.

No official celebration of the recognition of General Carranza has yet been planned, as General Gonsales, the post commander, is absent in the City of Toluca on a tour of inspection.

CARRANZA AT TORREON.

Large Military Review to be Held There for Him.

Special to The New York Times.

TORREON, Oct. 19.—General Carranza today paid his first visit to the State of Durango. At Gomez Palacio, where the line from Coahuila makes a bend touching that State, hundreds thronged the station to shake hands with the First Chief.

After a short stay he proceeded to Torreon, where a large military review will be held on Thursday. General Serrano Castro has joined the party. Obregon will proceed north from Torreon.

SAN PEDRO, Coahuila, Oct. 18.—General Carranza has reached San Pedro de Las Colonias, the boyhood home of Francisco I. Madero, where his welcome was notable. School children carrying large silk banners greeted him at the station.

This district has been the scene of fierce fighting from the days of the first revolution aginst Diaz, being captured by Madero and Villa and finally in September by Obregon. The heaviness of the fighting is seen in the large number of dead horses in the fields along the track, and trains destroyed by the retreating Villa army. The track from Paredon to San Pedro has been torn up and all stations have been destroyed in the fighting.

DROP CASE AGAINST TAGGART

Prosecutor Says Evidence Is Insufficient to Convict Politician.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 19.—The case against Thomas Taggart, Democratic National Committeeman for Indiana, charged with election conspiracy, was dismissed by Special Judge W. H. Eichhorn in Criminal Court today on the motion of Prosecutor A. J. Rucker. The cases of the more than 100 other men who were indicted with Taggart and Mayor Joseph E. Bell were put over to Dec. 1. Mayor Bell was acquitted by a jury last Wednesday, after a trial lasting more than five weeks.

Prosecutor Rucker, in moving to dismiss the case against Taggart, stated that the testimony of witnesses in the Bell case affecting Taggart was much weaker than the testimony they gave before the Grand Jury. In view of this change of testimony, Rucker said he did not believe the evidence sufficient to convict Taggart.

TELL OF FINANCING A 'FAIRY GODMOTHER'

Many Young Men Contributed to the $4,000 a Telephone Boy Gave to "Mrs. Flagler."

OIL MAN NEVER KNEW HER

His Private Secretary Produces Records from 26 Broadway in Court —No Defense May Be Made.

Testimony describing the ease with which an elderly woman with gray hair, sparkling blue eyes and a sweet manner is alleged to have obtained the savings of more than a dozen young men was presented to a jury before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions yesterday on the second day of the trial of Mrs. Zora Emma Johnson for grand larceny in the first degree. All of the victims loaned their capital in addition to more which they borrowed from other persons to Frank Mahoney, the telephone boy who alleges he has been fleeced of nearly $4,000 through the woman's pretense that she was the widow of Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil man.

Mahoney told them of his "fairy godmother," who was coming into an inheritance of $15,000,000 within a few weeks, and of her promise to make him her secretary at $20,000 per year. He pictured with frantic enthusiasm the blaze of prosperity into which he would lead all of his friends if they would stick by him and aid him. They thought, as they testified on the stand yesterday, that it was too good to be true, but nevertheless they surrendered to the telephone boy their money in bank and in pocket, feeling certain that a woman of the white hair and noble qualities described to them by Mahoney could not possibly be a swindler.

City Employes were Dupes.

Michael J. Shanahan, a clerk in the Corporation Counsel's office, who was one of Mahoney's credulous friends testified yesterday to giving $1,330 in sixteen days. Finally he gave Mahoney all the cash he had in his pocket, amounting to $30, and then he was through. Mahoney then turned to his brother-in-law, William J. Warner, who testified that he gave the boy $2,000 in all, $1,150 of which he himself had to borrow from two friends. James J. McMahon and George H. Eberle, both clerks in the Civil Service Commission, also told of the substantial loans which they made to Mahoney.

With the exception of Shanahan, none of them ever saw the "fairy godmother." Shanhan insisted upon being shown something for his money and Mahoney thereupon arranged a meeting at which he introduced his friend to "Mrs. Flagler." Shanahan, in testifying about this meeting, said yesterday that Mrs. Flagler impressed him very favorably. He said she invited him and Mahoney into a limousine and took them to a Childs restaurant, where she discussed with them in detail her $15,000,000 estate.

"I asked Mrs. Flagler what assurances she could give us that she was the widow of Henry M. Flagler," Shanahan testified, "and she replied that she could show us her marriage certificate. I then told her it was a very serious business for young fellows like us to lend out our money and it would be only fair to let us know where she kept all the stocks and bonds which composed her estate. She answered that her lawyer knew where they were. She told me I didn't have to worry about the $1,200 which I had loaned to Mahoney, because she would see to it that I got $50,000 in return when her estate was settled."

Henry J. Lochmuller, an employe of the New York Central Railroad, testified that Mrs. Johnson's daughter introduced him to her mother, who took an immediate liking to him. Several days later, according to his testimony, Mrs. Johnson came to him and requested a loan of $200, saying that her private secretary had deserted her, taking with him $7,000 of her money. Lochmuller gave her the $200, and received in return a check for $300 drawn on a bank in Washington, which later came back to him marked "No funds."

Mr. Flagler Never Saw Her.

Assistant District Attorney Minton presented evidence showing that the defendant was not the widow of Henry M. Flagler, but the wife of a man named Johnson, who lived in Washington.

Jasper C. Salter, private secretary to Henry M. Flagler for twenty-five years, testified yesterday that on the very day the woman said she was married to the Standard Oil man in Washington, Flagler was in his office in New York. He produced the letter files of the Standard Oil office, at 26 Broadway, to confirm his statement. Slater said he never saw Mrs. Zorah M. Johnson, and denied that she had ever been in the company of Flagler either in Washington or in New York. He produced records showing that none of Mr. Flagler's railroad holdings or other securities had been transferred to the woman.

Assistant District Attorney Minton rested the case for the people, and Abe Levy, for Mrs. Johnson, moved for the dismissal of the indictment. His motion was denied. Mr. Levy then said he would allow the case to go to the jury today without interposing a defense.

George H. Roberts, former Postmaster of Brooklyn, who died at his home, 20 Cambridge Place, Brooklyn, January last, left a net estate of $578,630. Under the terms of Mr. Roberts' will the estate is shared equally by his son, George Roberts, and his daughter, Rosamund Roberts.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 19.—Exercises in connection with the induction of Dr. John Henry MacCracken as President of Lafayette College began this afternoon, with representatives of nearly 200 universities and colleges in the United States and Canada present. Men prominent in all walks of life and hundreds of the alumni of Lafayette College are here for the event.

The program was begun this afternoon with a conference participated in by nineteen alumni of Lafayette College who are engaged in educational work. Dr. J. George Becht, Executive Secretary of the Pennsylvania State Board of Education, presided. The topic for discussion was "Educational Problems of Lafayette College."

This evening from 6:30 to 8 o'clock a reception was given to the delegates, alumni, and guests at the Hotel Karldon. The students, headed by the college band and each man carrying a lighted torch, paraded from the campus to the hotel, and after a noisy greeting to the visitors returned to the college, where they held a smoker.

The inaugural dinner was given tonight. Edward J. Fox of the Board of Trustees was toastmaster, and the invocation was delivered by Dr. Robert Barber Youngman of Lafayette. The speakers were President John Grier Hibben of Princeton University, Oswald Garrison Villard of The New York Evening Post, Principal George Morris Philips of the Westchester Normal School, President Harry B. Hutchins of the University of Michigan, President Ethelbert Dudley Warfield of Wilson College, Vice President Natt A. Emery of High University, Chancellor Samuel Black McCormick of the University of Pittsburgh, and Chancellor Charles Alexander Richmond of Union University.

Tomorrow's program will include the presentation of delegates, the academic procession, the inaugural exercises, and the conferring of nineteen honorary degree diplomas.

Doctor of Letters—Governor Martin Grove Brumbaugh, Ernest Gottlieb Sihler, Professor of Latin in New York University, and Ethelbert Dudley Warfield, Chambersburg, eighth President of Lafayette College, now President of Wilson College.

A luncheon will follow the presentation of the degrees, and the program will close with a football game between Lafayette and Delaware Colleges.

VANDERBILT AIDS AERO FUND

Gives $1,000 Toward Buying Planes for National Guard.

William K. Vanderbilt yesterday sent a check for $1,000 to the National Aeroplane Fund, which is to be applied toward the development of aviation corps for the National Guard of this State.

This makes a total of $12,250 now available for the New York National Guard, $10,000 of which was the gift of a prominent woman here, and the other $1,250 of a man interested in the movement. The total of the National Aeroplane Fund is now $45,688, and in addition to this, seven aeroplanes have been donated.

Major Gen. O'Ryan recently wrote the Aero Club asking it to aid him in securing the enlistment of young men suitable for aeronautic service. At his request the Aero Club has appointed a committee to co-operate in organizing an aviation section for the National Guard, consisting of Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club; W. Redmond Cross and Henry Woodhouse, Governors of the club, and R. C. Bolling, a member, all of whom will meet next week in the offices of the Adjutant General.

NEW OPERA WOMEN ARE ALL BEAUTIES

Gatti-Casazza Praises the New Singers of Metropolitan—Season Opens Nov. 15.

"SAMSON ET DELILA" FIRST

Impresario Surprised When He Drops Into a Luxurious Office in Place of Plain One He Left.

General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza put in his first day of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday. He arrived in the morning and was greeted in the outside offices by the members of the house staff. As usual on the first day, he found that his time was largely taken up in receiving visits of artists and persons connected in various ways with the opera house, and the Italian colony, and with being interviewed by newspaper men. He found time, however, to motor with Mme. Gatti-Casazza to see the house she had occupied this Summer at Great Neck, L. I., and to inspect the apartment she has leased for them for the Winter, breaking their precedent of living in hotels while here.

The season will open on Nov. 15, with a performance of Saint-Saen's "Samson et Delila," given in French, in which the principal rôles will be sung by Mme. Matzenauer and Messrs. Caruso, Amato, and Rothier. Mr. Polacco will conduct. This will be the first performance of this work at the Metropolitan in many seasons. The scenery and costumes were made in Milan this Summer, and the settings were described by Mr. Gatti-Casazza as thoroughly modern, but not futuristic.

"Prince Igor" will be sung early in December with a cast including Mme. Alda and Messrs. Didur, Amato, Botta and De Segurola, with Mr. Polacco conducting. In January will be given the new Spanish opera, "Goyescas," by Enrique Granados, who will be here for the premiere. The new Italian conductor, Gaetano Bavagnoli, will have charge of this production. Mlle. Bori will have the principal rôle. The general manager departed from his usual custom in giving high praise in advance for this work.

When Maria Barrientos, the Spanish coloratura soprano, arrives here in January, preparations will be made for revivals of Bizet's "Les Pecheurs de Perles" and of "Lucia." A revival of Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" will also be made with Mmes. Hempel and Barrientos. It is also possible that "Rigoletto" will be revived.

In regard to the German répertoire, Mr. Gatti-Casazza said the new conductor, Artur Bodanzky, would be so busy "restudying" with the company the Wagner operas according to his ideas that the date for the first performance of the semi-novelty, "The Taming of the Shrew," by Hermann Goetz, could not be determined on immediately.

He was reminded that Mr. Bodanzky had said he was in favor of giving Wagner operas with "cuts" and asked whether he supported his conductor in that view. He replied that he did, that unexpurgated performances of Wagner were not appropriate except at such places as Baireuth, where audiences gave up their time solely to hearing the music dramas.

"Wagner was a great genius and a great man," he said "and since he was a man he had human failings, one of the most common of which is to say too much."

When asked what he thought of the reports current here during the Summer that German opera would not be performed, he said: "A German made the modern newspaper possible. When you tell me you are ready to suppress newspapers because of war feeling, I will think about suppressing German opera."

Mr. Gatti-Casazza, in speaking about the new singers, said his object in selecting them was to freshen the company and get in new blood.

"One thing you will notice," he said, "is that all the new women members of the company are beautiful. That is important, because the public brings its eyes to a theatre as well as its ears."

There was a special event connected with the impresario's arrival at the opera house yesterday, although he did not know it. Almost everyone was in the secret, and this is why, when he started for his private office, he was followed by most of those whose rank entitled them to the privilege, while the faces of smaller functionaries and office boys peeked out of the dark places in the corridor as he went along.

The secret was this—that during the Summer the hitherto plain, workaday office of the general manager had been transformed. Paper of a delicate mauve and silken texture covered the walls, while a rug of the same shade made the floor a place to be trod upon lightly. Settees and chairs done in the same color scheme, whose wood was first cousin to bird's-eye maple, stood about the room and there was a desk with a glass top, while overhead was a hanging lamp of fine design in the newest "indirect" type.

Upon this setting of luxury Mr. Gatti-Casazza opened the door while the more discreet of his staff trembled, for Gatti is from the north of Italy, which knows sterner delights than the thrill of soft carpets and silken hangings.

He walked into the room and you could have heard a pin drop—even on the mauve rug of that room. Then to the astonishment of his staff he sat down to his desk, called to his secretary and started to work just as if it were the morning after the last day he had worked there. It was apparent he had not once noticed there was anything different!

About half an hour later, however, there came a shout from his room. When they came in they found him gazing about at his neo-Lusitania setting. It would be exaggerating to say that anger showed on his face, for there are but one or two occasions in a season when his imperturbability is shaken, but his first question showed the way his mind was working.

"How much did this cost?" he asked.

Somebody fearfully ventured the information, and then ensued one of those lulls before the storm. But the storm did not break. Gatti evidently divined what was in their minds, that it had been done to please him and honor his return, and he once more resumed his accustomed calm.

"Well," he said, casting about for something pleasant to say, "it has certainly made the office lighter." Then the incident was closed.

A CONCERT FOR TWO PIANOS.

Miss Milinowski and Mr. Cumpson Play in Aeolian Hall.

The playing of duets for two performers on two pianofortes is not a form of musical art that greatly flourishes in public, for reasons conected with the difficulty of avoiding monotony of effect and the comparative poverty of the literature. Concertgoers will remember several performances of such music by Harold Randolph and Ernest Hutcheson, and last season a notable one by Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch. Two young players new to this public gave a concert of duets for two pianofortes yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall—Miss Marta Milinowski and Harry Cumpson. Two at least of their numbers were unfamiliar—Christian Sinding's variations, Op. 2, and Sergei Rachmaninoff's Fantasie, Op. 5. They played also Mozart's graceful sonata, Saint-Saëns's Scherzo, Op. 27, an arrangement for two pianos of five waltzes from Brahms's set, Op. 39, originally written for two players on one instrument. The two players are not notable for force or fire. They have evidently tried to cultivate an accurate ensemble which is indispensable for the enjoyment of such music as they are devoted to, though accuracy sometimes failed them when they had done with the perfectly orderly and equally balanced pages of Mozart. A little more spirit, vivacity, and grace might have been consorted in the performance of the sonata, and a little more vigor and power in that of Sinding's musically interesting and individual variations.

FAIR PRICES AT JOLINE SALE.

Burns Note Brings $280—Bright's Letter to Greeley Sells for $28.

A copy of "William Harrison Ainsworth and his Friends" by S. M. Ellis, extra-illustrated by the insertion of 165 autograph letters of Ainsworth and other literary material, went to George D. Smith for $610.

A fine letter of Charles I. of Great Britain to Louis XIII., written in French, was knocked down to Mr. Smith for $130. The same bidder obtained documents signed by Charles I. and Charles II. for respectively $14.50 and $11.

The original manuscript of six stanzas from Lord Byron's "Oscar of Alva" ("Hours of Idleness") was bought by Mr. Smith for $105.

A letter by John Bright to Horace Greeley on the re-election of Abraham Lincoln was bought by Mr. Smith for $28. He also paid $40 for a letter of Elizabeth Barnett Browning and $18 for a letter of Robert Browning.

Miss Belle da Costa Greene, librarian for J. P. Morgan, gave $30 for a letter of the Countess Teresa Gamba Guiccioli referring to Lord Byron.

The sale will be continued this afternoon.

Start Catholic Fund Nov. 1.

The Knights of Columbus will begin their campaign Nov. 1 to raise a $500,000 building fund. This silver pitcher is a fitting symbol of the Reed & Barton stores because though old it is forever young. It is prominently displayed in the corner window of our 5th Avenue store and as you pass, it will pay you to stop and gratify your eye with its lovely lines.

The Reed & Barton name is so famous for quality that we sometimes fear a reputation for high prices may accompany it. Such is not the case. One pays here fairly for genuine material, artistically wrought, but one does not pay for our reputation.

If you will look about our store with no importunity to buy, you will be convinced of this.

Use RYZON exactly as you have used any good baking powder—no more. Some good cooks tell us they get better results by using a little less of RYZON because it is a powder of higher efficiency.

The RYZON label calls for level teaspoonfuls, because "heaping" and "rounded" are very uncertain quantities. Careful cooks everywhere are adopting the more exact method, and the best cookbooks nowadays call for level spoonfuls.

But if you prefer to use the "heaping" spoonful, then measure RYZON just as you have always measured baking powder and use the same quantity. You will find your baking to have a new lightness—better than ever.

Your grocer has RYZON in quarter, half and pound tins, 10c, 18c and 35c. Sold with money-back guarantee of satisfaction to you.

WRECKERS ATTACK HAVEMEYER HOUSE

Old-Time Show Place on Madison Avenue Is to Make Way for an Office Building.

J. P. MORGAN TO OPPOSE IT

Title Company Holds That the Land Was Sold by the Murray Heirs Without Restrictions.

House wreckers began yesterday tearing down the old Havemeyer residence on the southwest corner of Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street. It is the finest home in the Murray Hill section, which the trade invasion has brought to the doom of destruction since the demolition, several years ago, of the Stewart mansion on the site now occupied by the Columbia Trust Company's building, at the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street.

The heirs of the late Theodore A. Havemeyer sold the property about a year ago for $000,000 to August Heckscher, who has had plans prepared for erecting on the plot a sixteen-story office building. A sign on the house states that it will be ready for occupancy by May 1, 1916.

Soon after Mr. Heckscher bought the property and announced his intention of putting up a large commercial structure, suit was instituted by J. P. Morgan and other Murray Hill residents against Mr. Heckscher on the ground that the property was within the restricted Murray Hill residential zone, and an injunction was asked restraining the erection of a business building. Edmund L. Baylies, counsel for the members of the Murray Hill Association, who instituted the suit, asked Supreme Court Justice Newburger about a week ago to set the case down for trial on Nov. 15, in view of the property interests involved. The Court declined to advance the case out of its regular calendar order, and the suit will probably not be tried until next year.

Clark T. Chambers, who sold the property to Mr. Heckscher, said yesterday that the demolition of the house indicated that Mr. Heckscher felt justified in going ahead with his operation, as his title, against all restrictions, had been insured by the Lawyers Title and Trust Company.

The boundary of the old Murray Hill restriction runs northwesterly in a diagonal line from Madison Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, taking in the houses on the west side of the avenue, between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Streets. The heirs of the Havemeyer estate, up to a few months before the sale, had believed that the plot was included in the restricted zone, but on searching the title the lawyers for the estate discovered that the Thirty-eighth Street corner had been sold by the Murray heirs in 1843, four years before the placing of the restrictive clause upon the greater part of the old Murray farms. On that basis the title company insured the title against all limitations for business, and when the suit is tried the question of the intent of the heirs to include that corner in the restricted zone will be brought up.

Theodore A. Havemeyer purchased the property in 1866, and in 1872 he transferred it to his wife, who died in Switzerland more than a year ago. Mr. Havemeyer, who was one of the heads of the American Sugar Refining Company, died in 1897. Several years before his death he enlarged the original house, building a ballroom, which was adorned with old English oak paneling and carved woodwork at an expense of $40,000. The house also contained an Italian marble staircase, and two artistic grill doors adorned the entrance. These doors, it is said by the Rheinfrank Company, which is tearing down the house, have been sold to the owner of a large country home in Connecticut.

The tall iron fence with its artistic gates and a large stone crest over the front door have been retained by the heirs, but everything else in the house will go to the wreckers. When the iron fence was put up more than a quarter of a century ago, it was regarded as the finest thing of its kind in the city. For years the residence, set well back from the street with old trees bordering the entrance drive, was one of the show places of the city. Its last occupant was Clarence H. Mackay, who leased the house for a few years.

NEW TIMES SQUARE STATION

Name Adopted Officially for Stop in the Broadway Subway.

The Public Service Commission decided yesterday that the name of the station on the new Broadway subway from Forty-second to Fortieth Street should be Times Square.

This will be in harmony with the name of the parallel station in Seventh Avenue, the new Steinway tunnel station, which will be in front of the Hotel Knickerbocker, and the present subway station. They will connect with each other at the Times Building, and the great traffic centre thus formed will be known as Times Square.

Dr. Hillis's Case Postponed.

The argument on the motion to vacate an order for the examination of Frank L. Ferguson in the proceedings brought against him by the Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, which was to have been heard yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Kelly in Brooklyn, was adjourned until next Wednesday. Counsel for Dr. Hillis asked for time to complete affidavits. R. W. Kellogg, for Mr. Ferguson, stipulated that he should be given opportunity to examine the affidavits before coming into court, and it was so ordered by Justice Kelly.

LOUDEN REINDICTED; NEW ACCUSER FOUND

Lockport Man Alleges Attempt to Swindle Mother—Second Bigamy Charge.

A second indictment charging bigamy was returned against "Count" Max Lynar Louden yesterday in order to make him answerable for the marriage contracted in this city with Lalia Florence Jansen, also known as Allendorf, his present wife, who has shown no disposition to prosecute him. She did not testify before the Grand Jury, but the City Clerk produced records showing that the "Count" had married her on Aug. 29, 1911, as Albert Marcel, Count de Passy.

The indictment states that he was then the husband of Rose O'Brien and Mrs. Fred Arnold, the women who accused the "Count" to agents of the Department of Justice while they were investigating his past on the suspicion that he was a German spy. The Grand Jury is now expected to return several more indictments against the "Count."

W. H. Moran, formerly of Lockport, N. Y., went to the Tombs yesterday and identified Louden as the man who had attempted to swindle his mother, Mrs. Alice Lafflin, out of $5,000 last Summer. Moran said Louden had won the confidence of Mrs. Lafflin and induced her to invest in a "self-starting lantern" for which he had a patent. She gave him, according to the son, two notes aggregating $5,000. Later the police of Lockport, according to Mr. Moran, found that Louden had neither an invention nor a patent such as he had described, and he was locked up on a charge of grand larceny.

Assistant District Attorney Embree was told that Louden was indicted, but while in jail convinced his wife, who was then Rose O'Brien, that he was the victim of a political conspiracy. He told her if he had any money with which to get out his naturalization papers he could be released. She gave him $85.

Louden, it is alleged, induced a Deputy Sheriff to escort him to New York to see Princess la Parlaghy. The Deputy Sheriff, according to Mr. Moran, was so much impressed with the Princess and her suite at the Hotel Plaza that, although she failed to supply the bail, he himself gave $5 000 bonds for Louden.

Rose O'Brien then charged Louden with having obtained $85 from her under false pretenses, and the "Count" was arrested at the Hotel Plaza and taken back to Lockport. He was indicted, but according to Assistant District Attorney Embree, nothing was done to press the charge.

Most of the information received by Mr. Embree on these matters was corroborated by Mr. Moran, who demanded that Louden give him an order to release Mrs. Lafflin's notes, which, with other papers belonging to the "Count," are held by the Surrogate at Lockport. Louden gave Mr. Moran the order he requested.

DR. ADOLPH KESSLER DEAD.

Veteran Physician Who Was a Member of the Committee of 70.

Dr. Adolph Kessler, formerly widely known as a physician and a member of the Committee of Seventy that brought about the overthrow of "Boss" Tweed in this city, died yesterday at his home, 2 East Seventy-eighth Street, in his eighty-third year.

He was born in Germany and received his degree in medicine in Berlin. In 1865 Dr. Kessler came to this country and settled in Mobile, Ala. During the civil war he was an abolitionist and was forced to flee for his life, and came North, where he was placed in charge of the United States Military Hospital in Baltimore. After the war he came here and commenced to practice.

Dr. Kessler was a former member of the Board of Coroners, on which he was associated with Richard Croker, and during Mayor Van Wyck's administration was Assistant Sanitary Superintendent of the Bronx Board of Health. Twelve years ago he retired.

He is survived by two daughters and a son, George A. Kessler, head of George A. Kessler & Co., champagne importers, of 20 Beaver Street.

NURSES ELECT OFFICERS.

State League Meets Preparatory to Association Meeting.

Preparatory to the fourteenth annual meeting of the New York State Nurses' Association, which convenes at the McAlpin today, the New York State League for Nursing Education, composed of heads of training schools for nurses and superintendents of hospitals, met yesterday, elected officers, and heard addresses. The officers were: President, Miss Julia Littlefield, Homeopathic Hospital, Albany; Vice President, Miss A. M. Hilliard, State Inspector of training schools; Secretary, Miss Louise Arnold, Samaritan Hospital, Troy; Treasurer, Miss Emma Smith, Rochester General Hospital.

CHARLTON'S TRIAL DELAYED

Postponement Is Taken Until Oct. 22 Because of His Counsel's Illness.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COMO, Oct. 19.—When the trial of Porter Charlton was resumed today the prisoner was again assisted in reading his autobiography, which was a repetition of the statement made by him when he was first brought to Como. The mental experts again repeated their deductions from examinations of the prisoner.

At the beginning of the afternoon session Charlton declared that he could not stand the nervous strain, and asked permission to retire for a few minutes, which the court allowed. When the trial was resumed the defense asked for a postponement until Oct. 22, owing to the illness of Miceli Picardi, chief counsel for Charlton. The request was granted.

G. W. Luther's Estate $377,000.

SEVEN MEN HELD AS BOGUS LAWYERS

Bewildered When They Are Brought Close to Legal Processes in Court.

DETECTIVES SEEK OTHERS

Detectives of the staff of Inspector Faurot were making the rounds of the city last night in serch of bogus lawyers, for many warrants are out for these alleged illegal practitioners. Several arrests are expected this morning.

Seven were arrested yesterday afternoon. Five were arraigned in the Centre Street Court and two at Essex Market. The agents of the Bureau of Industries and Immigration of the State Industrial Commission and agents of the New York County Lawyers' Association appeared as the complaining witnesses. The bureau was represented by Mrs. Marian K. Clark, Chief Investigator, and Miles O'Brien, Jr., and the Lawyers' Association by George R. Adams.

Throughout the proceedings the supposedly unlicensed barristers had a bewildered look as they watched lawyers and Judges sorting over the papers with red and gilt seals which were bringing them into the clutches of the law. They were held in $300 bail for hearings on Friday afternoon.

The complaints against them were based on Section 270 of the Penal Code, which forbids any but a duly licensed lawyer from practicing.

The patrol wagon brought to the Centre Street Court the following alleged violators of the code: Morris Asofsky, 204 East Broadway; Morris Bleestein, 149 East Broadway; Harry Caner, 34 Rutgers Street; Aaron H. Jaffe, 179 East Broadway, and Hyman Wlodaver, 149 East Broadway.

The most versatile of the company seemed to be Jaffe, who was willing to obtain for all Russians the postponement of military service and proclaimed in advertisements that he was connected with all the best lawyers of Russia. All his legal papers were to be written on a Russian typewriter, and he was willing to use all "lawful means" to help his clients. He gave notice also that his advice was free and that it was only when he was drawing up legal papers that he received any fees.

Samuel M. Auerbach, the field investigator of the State bureau, said there were hundreds of the illegal practitioners under surveillance and that there would be arrests for several weeks to come, until the principal and most notorious offenders were driven out of business. There will probably be brought into the Essex Market Court today several of the men who have extensive offices and are said to have a practice as large as that of some of the most successful attorneys in the city.

In Special Sessions yesterday Simon Steingut, widely known as "the Mayor of Avenue A," was found guilty of unlawfully practicing law. The evidence against him was obtained by Mrs. Frances Benzecry, a detective in the employment of various societies. He was sentenced to thirty days in the City Prison, with the alternative of paying a fine of $250.

Steingut's friends rallied to his aid. It was said at the Tombs last night that his fine had been paid and that he had been released. The fine was paid under protest and he will appeal.

Louis Krause of 19 West 117th Street, a former Deputy State Superintendent of Elections, and Herman H. Blinder of 533 East 139th Street were held in $1,000 each in the Centre Street Court on the charge of acknowledging false signatures on Frank Moss petitions.

Edward J. Dooling, a Commissioner of Deeds, was arrested yesterday on the charge of falsely acknowledging the name of Charles S. Chapman to a Frank Moss petition.

CORNELL MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Opening Shows No Reduction In Students Because of War.

The Cornell University Medical College, at First Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street, has entered upon its eighteenth year with an enrollment of 172, which shows no diminution because of the war. Opening exercises attended by the student body were held yesterday in the amphitheatre, at which Dr. John Hartwell, President, presided.

Arthur F. Kraetzer, representing the senior class, explained the student activities and tendered the aid of the upper classmen to incoming students. Dean W. M. Polk spoke of the advances of modern medicine. He said that fifty years ago there was practically only one course open to the graduate in medicine, viz., practice, whereas now there are many lines, such as public health and sanitation, the army and navy, research and teaching, as well as medical missionary work, which is regarded as one of the highest of callings.

YOUNG MAN VANISHES ON EVE OF HIS WEDDING

Miss Edith Todd of Brooklyn, Who Was to be a Bride Today, Seeks Fiance.

A telegram received last night by Mrs. Mary French at her home, 582 Franklin Avenue, Brooklyn, from her niece, Miss Edith Todd, with whom she lives, disclosed the fact that for nine days no news had been received of Harvey J. Herman of Westville, Conn., whom Miss Todd was to marry today.

Herman had had a rather remarkable career, of which the climax was his disappearance from the home of his foster-father, G. M. Griswold, President of the G. M. Griswold Company, makers of dies and tools in New Haven, Conn.

When a lad Herman was adopted by Mr. Griswold and educated as his son. He first attracted the manufacturer's attention as a bright newspaper boy in the streets of New Haven, and twenty years ago was taken to live at the Griswold home in Westville, a suburb of New Haven. It was from this house that he disappeared a week ago last Sunday. It was supposed that he had gone to New Haven for the day, but when he had failed to appear on Monday the Connecticut and New York police were notified and a general alarm was sent out.

Soon after the news of the disappearance of her fiancé was received by Miss Todd she left New York for New Haven to aid in the search for him. Up to last night she had not notified her aunt of the progress of the investigations, and Mrs. French had not felt any anxiety over the case. But as the wedding day approached and it became evident that her romance had developed into a mystery, Miss Todd, prostrated by grief, was impelled to notify her aunt that misfortune had overtaken her.

Mrs. French said last night that the cause of Herman's disappearance could not be explained. It was well known, she said, that he did not gamble, nor could money affairs have had anything to do with his vanishing. The only conjecture to be made was that he was the victim of foul play, and on that theory the police were working.

Both Miss Todd and Herman are about 30 years old. He was the Assistant Secretary of the G. M. Griswold Company. Miss Todd was a stenographer in a New York Office.

When asked whether Herman and Miss Todd were to be married in New York or New Haven, Mrs. French said that she was in ignorance of the plans which had been made.

TREASURY AGENTS CURBED.

Their Inquisitorial Powers Limited by New Regulations.

The most drastic "shake-up" in the history of the special agents' corps connected with the Treasury Department will take place Nov. 1, when this bureau of Government customs investigators will be transferred to the Customs Division of the department. For many years the special agents have enjoyed practically plenary powers. During the administration of Leslie M. Shaw as Secretary of the Treasury the agents were called "personal representatives" of the Secretary.

As such, the agents were empowered to walk into importers' offices and demand books and other data whenever irregularities in importations were suspected. They were also authorized to investigate the conduct of business in the offices of Collectors and Appraisers at all ports.

The merger of the agents' force with the Customs Division means that Frank H. Halstead, the chief of this division, will have direct supervision after next month. The plan to be made effective Nov. 1 provides that thereafter all work relating to the examination of the books, papers, and accounts of Collectors and other officers of the customs, as well as the prevention and detection of fraud on the customs revenue, including the direction and supervision of special agents, customs agents, special Inspectors, and special Commissioners, as provided for by Revised Statutes, Sections 2,649-2,651, will be performed under the direction of Mr. Halstead.

CHURCH GETS BOY SOLOIST.

Grace Episcopal Engages Young Son of a Pittsburgh Fireman.

William Brennen, 14 years old, for the last two years the principal boy soloist of Trinity Episcopal Church, in Pittsburgh, Penn., came to New York yesterday to join the choir of Grace Church, at Broadway and Tenth Street.

James Helfenstein, organist of Grace Church, neard of the lad from Stuart MacLean, choirmaster of the Pittsburgh church. Last Thursday, at the request of Mr. Helfenstein, the boy came here and sang in Grace Church with Mr. MacLean at the organ. Brennen made such an impression that the authorities at Grace Church at once entered into an agreement with the father, M. V. Brennen, a city fireman in Pittsburgh, under which the boy will live at the Grace Church Choir School and sing at the church.

According to a dispatch from Pittsburgh, a contract has been signed under which the church pays $1,000 a year for the boy's services.

SOCIETY UNITES SONS OF CIVIL WAR'S FOES

Descendants of Veterans of North and South Favor Preparedness.

LINCOLN'S GRANDSON IN

George Gordon Battle and Colonel Henry H. Andrew Among Incorporators of Organization.

A new patriotic society, the membership of which is limited to the sons and descendants of Union and Confederate veterans of the civil war, has recently been organized and incorporation papers will shortly be filed with the Secretary of State at Albany. The announcement was made last night by Henry H. Andrew, a son of the war Governor of Massachusetts, and by George Gordon Battle, son of a Confederate veteran, both of whom are among the incorporators of the new organization.

For several months past the men behind the organization of the society have been busy at work mapping out a scheme that will bring into one common society the men whose forbears fought in the great struggle between the North and South. The plan is now complete and the details will shortly be made public and branch societies established in all parts of the country. To Colonel Andrew, more than to any other man, is due the success that has attended the movement, which has every indication of becoming nation-wide in scope.

Among the other incorporators are ex-United States District Attorney Wise, the son of a Confederate officer; ex-Governor Edward G. Smith of Vermont, who is now President of the Sherman National Bank; Colonel John L. G. Lee of Maryland, and Hobart R. Upjohn.

"The society is one into the membership of which we hope to bring the hundreds of thousands of men whose fathers fought in the great civil war," said Colonel Andrew last night, "and I am glad to be in a position to say that the success of the society seems assured. It is an organization which will take in the whole country, and all those men who are eligible for membership in the Union Society of the Civil War, the sons of Confederate Veterans, the hereditary members of the Loyal Legion, and other patriotic Northern and Southern civil war societies are eligible for membership in the new organization, which will make a common brotherhood of the men on both sides of Mason and Dixon's line.

"The best men in the country have given their approval to the undertaking and among our first members is a grandson of Abraham Lincoln, and the descendants of some of the most famous of the Southern soldiers.

"We believe this society will fill a long felt want and will complete the absolute harmony of the peoples of all sections of our country. The society will be American to the core, and its field of usefulness for that reason, if nothing more, is a large one. There are several hundred thousand men who are eligible to membership, and we hope to get most of them into the organization before many months have passed."

One of the reasons for the forming of the society, it was said last night, by another of the men interested in the movement, is to further national preparedness in a sane and sensible way.

"The society," said this man, "will unite the men of both sides of the great civil war in sentiment, and will wipe out any old antagonistic feeling that may still exist in any section of the country. It is a brotherhood that will efface all factional differences due to the war, and will make the sons and grandsons of the men who wore the blue and of those who wore the gray, one so far as the defense of the Union is concerned."

The society, it was said, will take an active part in the campaign to give the country an army and navy adequate in size and efficiency for its proper defense.

When is a Bargain Not a Bargain?

When you buy a big looking roll of toilet paper only to find there is little paper in it. The roll was loosely wound to look big or the paper was coarse and thick—lots of room, very little paper.

The only sure quantity basis on which to buy toilet paper is the counted standard—the number of sheets to the roll. See that it is printed on the wrapper.

Scottissue Toilet Paper

Has 1000 sheets to the roll—10c

Of course, quality must always come first. But unless quantity goes along with it, you don't get your money's worth. ScotTissue is as "soft as old linen," very absorbent and snowy white.

Your Watch Is Your Time Table

$23,000,000 IN GOLD HERE FROM LONDON

England Sends 1,000 Boxes of Sovereigns, the Biggest Shipment Yet.

ROUTE IS KEPT SECRET

Brings Total Gold Received from Britain for War Bills to $81,000,000.

One thousand boxes of English sovereigns, worth between $23,000,000 and $24,000,000, arrived at the American Express Company's depot at the Grand Central terminal in seven steel cars, guarded by forty riflemen, yesterday morning, and were taken to the United States Assay Office in twenty-three guarded vans.

Officials of the express company refused to tell the route taken by the cars. According to one dispatch, the gold was shipped by the Bank of England to Halifax and then sent to Ottawa before being shipped to this city. All of the previous large shipments of gold have been sent directly to this city after their arrival at Halifax. The English coins will be melted into bars and sent to the Philadelphia Mint to be turned into United States coin.

Yesterday's shipment was larger by $4,000,000 than any of those previously received. It is estimated that the gold received yesterday brings the total of gold imports received in this country from all sources since the beginning of this year to $221,000,000. Recently gold has been sent steadily from Australian ports to San Francisco and small streams of gold have been entering other ports. It is understood that arrangements have been made to continue the shipment of gold from Australia until February.

No announcements have been made as to the amount of gold which is to be shipped directly from the Bank of England to be deposited here with J. P. Morgan & Co. for the purchase of supplies for the Allies. According to financial experts here and in London, the $500,000,000 loan obtained by the Allies in this country will not support the exchange rate sufficiently to permit the cessation of the flow of gold from England to this country. It was said yesterday that more gold would be received here from England before the end of the week, but representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co. and of the American Express Company refused to confirm the report. Because of the risk entailed in shipping large amounts of gold, both the bankers and express officials have maintained the utmost secrecy about the shipments until their arrival here.

No securities arrived yesterday. In the previous shipments the value of the securities has each time been considerably greater than that of the gold. It was reported that separate shipments of securities were being made.

The value of the three previous shipments totaled $129,140,000, of which about $58,000,000 was in gold, so that the total gold received by way of Halifax in all four shipments is between $81,000,000 and $82,000,000.

CARTER GLASS IN HOSPITAL.

Overwork Responsible for Congressman's Nervous Breakdown.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 19.—Representative Carter Glass of Virginia, Chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, was admitted to the Johns Hopkins Hospital tonight to undergo treatment for a nervous breakdown, brought on by overwork.

Dr. Lewellys F. Barker, his attending physician, believes that Mr. Glass will quickly recover and will be ready to resume his duties at the next session.

Representative Glass came to Baltimore last week and underwent an examination at the hospital. He returned to his home in Lynchburg for a few days to complete some business transactions. His son, Powell P. Glass, will be married Thursday in Georgia.

Mr. Glass became a member of the Fifty-seventh Congress and has served in Congress ever since.

ODELL SUES THE CITY ON McNALLY WORK

Ex-Governor, As Receiver, Says $1,500,000 Is Due for Aqueduct Building.

Ex-Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., as receiver of the Thomas B. McNally Contracting Company, began suit against the city in the Supreme Court yesterday, for $1,490,974 alleged to be due on Contract 2 in the Peekskill division of the new aqueduct. The contract was let to the McNally Company for about $4,220,000.

McNally, an obscure Pittsburgh contractor, came to this city in 1907 and picked up what appeared to be one of the fattest contracts along the aqueduct. After McNally got the contract it was discovered that his company consisted of only himself, his wife, and clerk. He had no capital to speak of. The conract provided that the work be completed within forty-five months, but several extensions were given McNally because of the many difficulties he encountered. His money gave out a year after the work was begun. He could not raise money to buy lumber for shoring purposes. Then he called upon William E. Paine, President of the Georgia-Florida Lumber Company, who made a copitract with him, whereby Mr. Paine was to lend McNally $200,000 in exchange for all of the stock of the McNally Company. The $200,000 was turned over, as well as an extra $90,000, and the money was sunk in the mountain tunnels on the west side of the Hudson. Again McNally called for aid, but Mr. Paine refused, and he went back to Pittsburgh looking for cash. He failed, and after much litigation Mr. Odell and Mr. Paine were named as receivers of the company.

The receivers issued $350,000 worth of certificates to get enough money to resume work on the contract. Then glacial shelfs and quicksand were encountered, and a tremendous loss faced the company. Mr. Paine refused to put any more money into the venture, and quit as co-receiver, leaving Mr. Odell to finish the work himself. Suits were constantly begun against him by creditors. He was also criticised for the manner in which he did the work, and was once accused of violating the labor laws.

In his complaint Mr. Odell says that the contract is now completed, and approved by the Chief Engineer of the Water Board. His bill for the balance due was sent to the Controller, he says, on Sept. 10, but has not been paid. He also explains that the exact amount of the contract McNally received was $4,223,574, and that all of it has been paid except $497,747. The balance of his claim is for additional work and the cost of deviations from the original contract.

CHARGES A MAN CANED HER.

Mrs. Louis Conti Says Frank Taussig Struck Her in Her Auto.

Mrs. Louis Conti of 166 West Seventy-second Street appeared as complainant in the West Side Court before Magistrate House yesterday against Frank Taussig of 10 West Ninety-fifth Street, who was charged with disorderly conduct. Taussig, who is in business with his father at 111 Wall Street, was held in $500 for examination on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Conti's story was that she, her sister, and a woman friend had driven up to the Conti home and were waiting in the machine for the chauffeur to return with some change, when Taussig chanced along and sought to enter the car.

Mrs. Conti said Taussig became abusive, talked about renting the machine, and then insinuated that no respectable woman would be out at night without an escort. Mrs. Conti's response was that he was no gentleman. She said he then struck her a violent blow on the arm, rasing a long welt. Mrs. Conti's sister ran and got Patrolman Koenig of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, who arrested Taussig.

Investigates Harvard Registration.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 19.—District Attorney Corcoran today began a Grand Jury investigation into all registrations by Harvard students for the State election on Nov. 2, with special reference to their oaths before the City Registers, that they were self-supporting. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts, in an opinion two years ago, applying to students' registrations, held that in order to vote a person must show that he was self-supporting and that he had resided in the city or town in which he was registered on the preceding May 1.

MORMONS BARRED LAUDER

Prejudiced by Malicious Story, the Agent Asserts—Hammerstein to be Next Witness.

Difficulties of fighting the Vaudeville Trust were told yesterday in the Federal District Court before Judge Learned Hand by William Morris, the booking agent. He was testifying in the suit for $300,000 brought by Clifford C. Fischer against the United Booking Offices, H. B. Marinelli, Limited; Paul Keith, F. F. Proctor, and others.

Mr. Morris said that in 1909 he brought Harry Lauder here, and had to guarantee him twenty weeks, either in his own or other theatres. Consequently, he had to book Lauder in halls and other places of the sort, as he could not obtain sufficient theatres. At Detroit, Vancouver, and Seattle Lauder appeared in armories, and in Salt Lake City he was to have played in the Mormon Temple. That date was canceled, and Meyerfield, one of the alleged trust, afterward boasted that he caused the cancellation by telling the Mormons that Lauder had an objectionable female impersonator with him.

Valeska Suratt was one of the performers who had failed the witness mysteriously after he had promised to pay her $2,000 a week and extensively advertised her early in 1910. Then there was Annette Kellermann, the diver. The Sunday before she was to appear, the witness saw her at her home, and E. F. Albee and Maurice Goodwin, representing the trust, entered and tried to persuade her not to play. They told her that William Morris, Incorporated, did not pay, the witness said.

At first Miss Kellermann was frightened and tried to run away, but at last announced she would live up to her contract. At the theatre she fainted and fell into her tank.

"Did you ever fail to pay an artist the full price!" asked Max D. Steuer, counsel for the plaintiff.

"We paid every dollar," was the answer. The two Sullivans, big and little, were associated with William Morris, Incorporated.

Mr. Morris said he managed to lease the Columbia Theatre in Washington in 1909 from the agents of Klaw & Erlanger without revealing his identity. When it was discovered, the manager tried to cancel, but Secretary Loeb protested and the bargain was kept.

Under cross-examination, Mr. Morris said he had brought Harry Lauder here eight times and managed his tours seven times. On the average these tours netted him $50,000 each or more.

Counsel endeavored to show that Mr. Morris had been a failure as a business man, and it appeared that William Morris, Incorporated, was broke at the time Martin Beck was negotiating for the Morris string of theatres. The New York Roof Garden, the witness urged, made money, but he could not tell whether the Boston Music Hall was a success or failure.

The trial will continue this morning. Oscar Hammerstein will be the next witness it is expected.

Governor Whitman in the City.

Governor and Mrs. Whitman, accompanied by the Governor's new Military Secretary, Captain Lorillard Spencer, arrived in this city at 8 o'clock last evening, and went to the Hotel St. Regis. They attended the performance of "The Unchastened Woman" at the Thirty-ninth Street Theatre, where they entertained Sylvester Brierton, a friend. It is expected the Governor will remain in the city until tomorrow.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, OCT. 20, 1915.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT.

I take pleasure in announcing that Mr. George McAneny has accepted my invitation to become associated with me in the general management of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and will come to THE TIMES as soon as he can satisfactorily transfer to other hands his duties as President of the Board of Aldermen and member of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the City of New York, and devote himself wholly to THE TIMES after Jan. 1 next.

ADOLPH S. OCHS,
Publisher THE NEW YORK TIMES.
Oct. 19, 1915.

I am greatly pleased that I have succeeded in securing Mr. George McAneny to assist in the executive management of THE NEW YORK TIMES. For the administrative and executive duties he will undertake with THE NEW YORK TIMES I know no one who would better meet the requirements. His able administration, for several years, of the great affairs of the City of New York which have been intrusted to him, has justly won for him national fame as a man of high ideals of public service with the courage and ability to practice them and put them in successful operation. He is in hearty sympathy with the aims and purposes of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and his patriotism, ripe experience, and ability will find ample scope for their exercise in his new duties, and his opportunity for public service will be broadened.

I hold it to be no fault that THE TIMES calls Mr. McAneny from an important office in the City Government to take a place of high responsibility in THE TIMES management and councils. It has always been the wish and purpose of THE TIMES to serve the public as best it might, to give always better service to the people of the City, State, and Nation.

THE NEW YORK TIMES has become a great institution and is rapidly growing in importance and public character. Many well-informed men consider THE NEW YORK TIMES the foremost newspaper in the world. Certain it is that its field, and consequently its influence, is expanding, and it requires the ablest men that can be secured—men of broad sympathies, free of narrow prejudices, open-minded, with a pride of country and devoted to its welfare; men who have an intelligent and wholesome appreciation of the responsibility of the press and a sense of its duty to promote and support good government and encourage good citizenship; and its obligation to its readers and the public to be honest, fair, and impartial and make of itself a welcome daily visitor in the homes of self-respecting families; in short, by mind and heart to maintain the best traditions of American journalism.

When I acquired the control and management of THE NEW YORK TIMES in 1896 its gross annual income was about $500,000. It is now nearly $5,000,000 and rapidly increasing. It has over 1,000 people on the weekly pay-roll. The circulation of THE TIMES is now over 330,000 every day in the week, and we confidently expect 500,000 in a comparatively short time. And this increasing circulation is by no means confined to the great metropolitan district of New York City. The circulation of THE TIMES is rapidly growing throughout the United States.

Great changes are developing in the character and publication of daily newspapers. There is a growing tendency to concentration of readers and advertisers, for that makes for better service and a greater sense of responsibility. Thus THE TIMES establishment is requiring more captains, or rather a sub-division of captain duties. As we sail many uncharted seas I owe it to those who sail with me to get the best talent possible to officer the ship and compose the advisory board, and in every way possible strengthen the organization.

THE NEW YORK TIMES is a great newspaper, but not so great as it should be, can be, and will be. That it may in a measure realize our expectations and that it may endure, I have asked Mr. McAneny to join me in its management and become an integral part of the organization.

ADOLPH S. OCHS.

New York, Oct. 19, 1915.

A STATEMENT BY MR. McANENY.

As THE NEW YORK TIMES will announce tomorrow, I have accepted Mr. Ochs's invitation to enter the service of that paper as his associate in its management.

I shall not, however, resign my city office until after the end of the term of the present Board of Aldermen, in January, and not, of course, until proper disposition has been made in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the measures before the several committees of which I am Chairman.

After six years of service at the City Hall, I shall leave it, naturally, with regret; but it is to be my good fortune to exchange one field of public service for another, and my opportunities for aiding the cause of good government will not be abridged.

I shall give up, too, with a feeling of real loss, my daily association with Mayor Mitchel and my other colleagues in the administration. Upon their rare ability and integrity a new order of city government has been building, and it has been a constant privilege to work with them.

GEORGE McANENY.

New York, Oct. 19, 1915.

CARRANZA'S OPPORTUNITY.

CARRANZA has triumphed to the extent of gaining the formal recognition of the United States and the South and Central American republics as the actual ruler of Mexico. Foreign recognition will not be withheld. European Governments will assume that the Government at Washington is best qualified to judge in all matters relating to its nearest neighbor, especially as the Monroe Doctrine imposes upon us the duty of protecting the weaker Governments of this continent from foreign interference. As CARRANZA desired recognition, he is to be congratulated. Of course, as he is a man of education who has had considerable experience in civil government, he must appreciate the formidable character of the task which now confronts him. No statesman in our time has ever had such an opportunity to make his name blessed and his fame endure. All that is needed is to build up a wise and tolerant Government, with a just system of taxation and an honest administration of justice, and to meet, peso for peso, the heavy obligations his country had already incurred before the era of revolution and destruction, and the immeasurably larger ones since incurred.

Mexico has been called the richest country in the world. Its potentialities are enormous. In its fertile soil, in which all the crops of the temperate and torrid zones can be raised, its wonderful mines of silver and coal, its virgin forests of woods of great commercial value, it possesses riches enough to pay all the debts civil war has placed upon it within a very short time. But only administrative ability of a very high order can put into operation the industrial and commercial machinery which has been getting rusty since the era of Mexican prosperity under DIAZ, and has lately been idle. Fifteen millions of people, most of them densely ignorant, need to be helped to feed and clothe themselves and to be taught the benefits of self-government and education.

In the very beginning the new ruler must secure large loans from foreign financiers. CARRANZA'S efforts to overcome the stupendous obstacles which confront him will be viewed in other countries without prejudice and with hope for at least partial success. President WILSON must have reason to believe that CARRANZA will take up the work with an intelligent comprehension of its difficulties and an earnest desire to succeed. If he succeeds only to the extent of pacifying the whole country and setting all the people working to pay their debts, he will have begun a new chapter in Mexican history which may contain the promise of a glorious future. Certainly all the Mexicans but a very few outlaws are heartily tired of civil war.

DEMOCRATIC WAR.

If there were a man in England big enough to dictate ultimate measures, to reject the counsels of the multitude, to stake the empire on the hazard that the people for its sake would stand all the things they say they will not stand, including conscription—if there were that man in England, a great necessity might be expected to raise him up; but the English would not know what to do with him. It is doubtful if they could utilize his strength or genius. He would probably wreck the Cabinet from the inside, or overturn it from without, and then there would be another Cabinet, as a compromise. The British Government, as any popular government must, exists by compromise, and although that is the kind of government all of us prefer to live with, it is obviously not the kind you should choose to fight with.

There is bitter, petty, and acrimonious disagreement in England as to how the war should be managed. Among those not charged with its conduct there is a conviction that never was anything worse handled, and each of several political groups is self-persuaded that nothing can possibly come right until its pet theory of procedure has been adopted. Compromise works badly. The coalition Government was a compromise, intended to placate all opinion, and yet within five months it is apparently about to go smash on the question of conscription. Its predecessor went aground in a fog of authority over naval affairs, technically a row between Admiral Lord FISHER and Mr. WINSTON CHURCHILL.

The coalition Ministry sought to compromise with Ireland by making a place for Sir EDWARD CARSON, who only a few months before had armed his Ulster following to rise against Great Britain and resist home rule. This temperamental rebel, so recently defiant of law and authority, was made Attorney General. Now suddenly he resigns from the Ministry and a storm is imminent. JOHN REDMOND, leader of the Irish Nationalist Party, who refused a place in the coalition Ministry, on the evening of the same day said:

> In the present position of affairs no man can tell the moment when the gravest political issues may arise. The existence of the present coalition Cabinet is precarious. It is threatened by internal as well as by external dangers. There can be no doubt about it that at the present moment a rich and powerful conspiracy is menacing its very existence. This conspiracy is made up of men who are ready to sacrifice national unity in the face of the enemy in order to further their own predilections, theories, and convictions. Any day we may be faced with reconstruction or with proposals which will end instantly the political truce and rend the British public into contending factions.

Somebody shouted: "How about CARSON'S army?" That was a reference to the fact that CARSON'S following of Ulstermen, so recently on the point of revolt against British authority, flung themselves headlong into the war for England, while REDMOND'S following of Nationalists had been notoriously indifferent, and were indignant at the thought of conscription. To this sally Mr. REDMOND replied that the people were in honor bound to send support to the gallant men who had gone into danger, adding:

> We can do so if proper and businesslike methods are adopted. But it won't do to attempt a bully drive.

That is, JOHN REDMOND is against conscription. He is for "proper" and "businesslike" methods. Sir EDWARD CARSON presumably is for conscription throughout the British Isles. He might have resigned from the Government as a protest against its timidity about conscription, or against a decision to adopt that measure of blood levy in England, and not in Ireland, because REDMOND'S people were unwilling. As in Ireland so in England. Those who favor conscription think nothing else will save the household. Those who are against it think a Britain that needs to be saved in that way is already lost. It is a mixture of prejudice, tradition, irresponsibility, hysteria, panic, and stupidity. Capital blames labor, labor blames capital, everybody blames the Ministry, and the Ministry is incohesive.

And so a popular Government misruns a great war. That there is really a public man in England willing to sacrifice his country to further private "predilections," as REDMOND said, is almost unimaginable. That there are many men like that simply cannot be supposed. That Mr. REDMOND can believe it only shows to what pettiness men descend in bickering, higgling, and quarreling. The simplest presumptions of human conduct are forgotten. Each hostile group outside of the Government believes the Ministry would sacrifice the destiny of England to the vanity and pig-headedness of its personnel; members of the Government think any of these outside groups or one of a number of individuals would offer the British Empire on the altar of selfish ambition. The psychology is very simple. All of them want to save England, but each in a different way, and the result is political pandemonium. In order to allay the din a Ministry has to compromise with the noisiest elements. That produces inefficiency.

Make allowance for the fact that we are closer to England's window than to that of any other belligerent, and that the language in which the quarrel takes place is our own, and the comparison is yet painful. It reminds us of how we should probably conduct a war in the eye of the American multitude, very free with its advice and intolerant of errors. War is, as we see more and more, an autocratic business. When this war is over the German people will demand an accounting for it as a whole; in the meantime, the War Lord runs it, responsible only to himself for blunders, of which there have been many. There is an Austro-German staff. German authority rules it absolutely. On the side of the Allies there is no co-ordinating authority. There is even no allied staff. Each country makes war on its own judgment in its own way, and this independence has to be paid for in terms of military efficiency.

THE NEW CONTINENTALS.

Secretary GARRISON has chosen a fortunate name for his new reserve army of citizen soldiers, to be recruited from all the States but to be always under the direct control of the War Department. WASHINGTON commanded the first Continental Army, the only one hitherto entitled to that name, and thus designated to distinguish it from the Colonial militia, the various other bodies of State troops serving in the Revolutionary War, and the unattached riflemen and rangers.

> In their ragged regimentals,
> Stood the old Continentals,
> Yielding not!

The first Federal army was the chief reliance of the nation's first Commander in Chief. It was the precursor of the regular army of today. The new Continental Army will constitute the first permanent reserve force of the United States. It will be, in effect, a vast military school, in which young men who do not intend to devote their whole lives to military service can be trained, without impairment of their value in civil employments, in the arts of modern warfare sufficiently to fit them for the defense of their country when defense is needed. The plan as now outlined is susceptible of many changes. The specified time of yearly service may be modified or the camping periods may be reduced to one month each instead of two, with other practice work in each year, so arranged as not to interfere with the citizen soldier's daily employment. But the conception of the plan is admirable, and it can be effectively carried out whenever we have a War Secretary and a Chief of Staff who have the will to overcome the petty obstacles which politics and the interference of fanatics may attempt to place in its way. In a citizenry trained there can be no danger of militarism, and in time our new system should become as effective as the much-discussed military system of Switzerland, and without a hint of conscription either. The name of the force was assuredly well chosen. The new Continentals should become as popular as the National Guard, though the members of the new reserve can never hope, without actual war experience, to become quite as efficient in a military sense as the members of the organized militia, who render practically continuous service in the period of enlistment and will hereafter form a reserve of their own, which should be invaluable in case war is ever forced upon us.

ARTHUR GREAVES.

ARTHUR GREAVES, for fifteen years city editor of THE TIMES, had a native gift for the newspaper calling which was developed in a high degree by training and long experience. The desire to know and the ability to tell what was going on in the world made him a good newspaper man. He had a keen interest in the doings of men, in the social and business activities of the community, in the life and affairs of the great city. He had a politician's memory for the names of men, and he was thoroughly familiar with the politics of the city and of the country, with the career and records of the leaders and the candidates, with the forces that political strife brings into play. To his agreeable presence, his charm of manner, and his ability to make and keep friendships he owed a very large acquaintance, which was of the greatest use to him in his professional work.

His training in the department of news gathering and news writing was very broad, he knew all the processes and every detail, and he had notable capacity in the organization and management of a news staff. He had done notable work for THE TIMES at many National Conventions, where his ability to direct and co-ordinate the work of the staff of men he controlled enabled him to compile the complete story of each day's proceedings in which every part had its due proportion and nothing of essential importance was missing. His service to THE TIMES was of a value not easily measured, and the esteem and affection with which he was regarded by his associates of the staff were as deep, genuine, and lasting as is the sorrow his death brings to them. He was called away in the very fullness of his powers, the end coming early yesterday morning after a brief respite from work due to an illness from which he and his family and his friends had expected an early recovery.

THE AUTHOR OF "TWO YEARS BEFORE THE MAST."

RICHARD HENRY DANA, Jr., was born in August, 1815, but the formal celebration of his centenary, under the direction of the Cambridge Historical Association, comes today. A Cambridge boy, son and namesake of the poet and editor of The North American Review, a weakness of the eyes, fortunate for his fame, forced him to leave Harvard College in 1834. It must be saddening to the parents and guardians of soft Campanian undergraduates of these days to know that DANA, a member of one of the most distinguished of "Colonial" families, had an allowance—and that only for emergencies—of 25 cents a term, and always walked into and out of Boston. It was in August that he doffed "the frock coat, silk cap, and kid gloves" of the Cantabrigian for salt water togs and set sail on the brig Pilgrim, 86 feet and an inch or two long, if we remember, for the voyage around the Horn that was to make him immortal. Is there any better sea story, and this a true one, than "Two Years Before the Mast"? Of DANA and another American, HERMAN MELVILLE, forgotten or neglected in his last years, but since restored to something like his rightful place, CLARK RUSSELL and the other writers of "sailor tales to sailor tunes" have been warmly appreciative.

DANA tells a straight story, with no romance or fiubdub. He tells it both as a sailor and as an educated man, who at that period of his life, at least, was a man of broad and cordial sympathies, who associated impartially with men of many races, who saw the good points of Kanakas and mulattoes as well as the beauty and grace of the Spanish señoritas of old California, whose "seamanship was perfect" according to one of his messmates, who did his work for every ounce of strength and will in him, whether he was studying Spanish, picking up Kanaka, pulling a rope, or curing hides. His book is full of fine, finished portraits and telling sketches. GEORGE HARRIS, for instance, the uneducated sailor man with so powerful an intellect and retentive a memory that DANA had to be mighty careful in discussing things with him; a man who knew the lunar stars and could calculate with his eye and mind just how many hides a ship would hold, who had but his old sea chest of slops to show for weary years of hard service in all parts of the world, who gave up rum—and DANA, who hated it, says rum is heartening for the moment, though any sailor would prefer hot chocolate or coffee if he could get it on shipboard—without pledge after deliberation on his unprofitable career. And Captain THOMPSON of the Pilgrim, whose brutality and cruelty were thought to be caused by his consciousness of his incompetence as a navigator and his men's knowledge of it. Read the famous flogging of JOHN and PETE—it was PETE, wasn't it?—the two Swede sailors. "Don't call "on JESUS CHRIST! He can't help "you. Call on FRANK THOMPSON!" He flogged, he said, because he liked to. Read his speech to his men. It is a masterpiece. There speaks the swaggering, arrogant, almost megalomaniac, omnipotence of the old merchantman master. By contrast, DANA shows us Captain FAUCON of the Indiaman Alert, quoting to him the Virgilian TITYRUS sprawled under the spreading beechtree. A dignified, a venerable figure, FAUCON, which passed from sight only a little over twenty years ago. Then there is the gigantic Russian, NICHOLAS, man of war's man, privateersman, pirate, who had been lucky enough to escape hanging.

The falling overboard scene was read to Mr. GEORGE BANCROFT by SAMUEL ROGERS as a specimen of prose essentially more poetic than most modern poetry. But the merit, of "Two Years Before the Mast" is its faithfulness to fact, its truth. DANA was tremendously angry with the Captains; all his life, indeed, injustice and oppression were intolerable to him. At the Boston bar in the fifties he was just as ardent in the defense of fugitive slaves, and with no other fee than a dangerous assault, as he was for sailors' rights. Writing, however, he doesn't mix subjective and objective. You see with precision, with a sort of sculptured outline, the event. You seem to be present and hear the very words, the sound of the blows. St. Elmo's fire burns your eyes. You are in the fo'c'sl, the galley. Italian sailors are singing barcaroles. The enchantments of Santa Barbara and San Pedro are at your feet.

There is much butter ladled out over Mr. JOSEPH CONRAD. Compare his highly cultivated, exotic English, with all its stops and flourishes, to the plain, naked style of DANA. You might almost say the book is in words of one and two syllables. For that reason the oculists use parts of it as an eye test. There is no trace of the apoplectic purple of some of the moderns. A fine, manly, generous work, in sound, simple English. To read it is to "feel the brine salt on the lips and the large air again."

DANA'S professional and public career was in point of exterior success unequal to his merits. He was a learned and an able lawyer, in common, admiralty, church, and international law. As a United States District Attorney he did much to establish the prize law of the United States in the civil war. He was the colleague or opponent of RUFUS CHOATE in some notable cases. But his lofty professional standards impeded him and he never earned much money. A Free Soiler, an early Republican, a civil service reformer, the spokesman of reform Republicanism at the National Republican Convention of 1876, he held no great office. Democratic intrigue stimulated by General BUTLER prevented his confirmation as Minister to the Court of St. James's. But what are such "rewards" now? He had no luck in that way. For the copyright of "Two Years Before the Mast" even the good offices of Mr. BRYANT could get him but $250. It has been read by two generations. It is being read by the third. It is one of the very few "universal" American books.

That was a gracious honor paid to Mr. BRYAN at Terrace Garden Monday night. The band played "The Star-Spangled Banner" in tribute to his native, "Die Wacht am Rhein" in tribute to his adopted, country.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Criticism Hardly Deserved.

When Father CURRY of the Church of St. James, in Oliver Street, has anything to say about doings and conditions on the East Side, those who hear him are aware that he speaks from personal knowledge and they listen with the respect earned by his character and the recognized excellence of his intentions. Sometimes, however, Father CURRY seems inclined to hold his parishioners and their much assorted neighbors to paths considerably narrower, as well as considerably straighter, than either their customs or their inclinations, as fixed by the local standards of propriety, have trained them to follow. Then he is wont to see sérious impropriety in conduct that others would view with calmness, or even with approval, as relatively if not absolutely meritorious.

His attack on the evening dances in the public schools probably illustrates this tendency on the good priest's part. One notices that he gives prominent place in his arraignment of these functions to the charge that he has himself been personated by a masquerading school dancer. That was at worst in bad taste rather than criminal or wicked, and it may have been without real disrespect or evil intent. It depended on the spirit in which it was done. Anyway, it happened two years ago and Father CURRY in fairness admits that he has not heard of such travesties since.

His accusation that known disreputables have occasionally attended the public school dances would have more weight than it does if he did not base it on the assertion that such persons had been recognized and removed to whatever substitute for outer darkness the hour and place provided. That black sheep would enter the terpsichorean folds now and then was inevitable, and the most important, if not the only important, circumstance connected with their appearance is that their stay was short.

If Father CURRY is opposed to the rather promiscuous dancing which these assemblages in the public schools necessarily will be, he has a right to his opinion, but others have a right to a different one, and the others make a strong argument when they say that the participants in the school dances are much better behaved as guarded in the schools than they would be in the ordinary, purely commercialized, dance halls to which many of them would resort in search of exercise and amusement if the school rooms were closed to them.

Wrecked, but Not Literally.

So many days have now elapsed since the evasion of the German sailors from the ships interned at Norfolk that hopes as to the innocence of their starting out and the accidental delaying of their return must be abandoned, even by the most charitable. They have not been stranded on some desolate and incommunicable sandbank down or up the coast, whence they are eagerly, but slowly, making their way back with profuse and sincere excuses for overstaying their leave. And there is hardly a chance that they were lost at sea while cruising about with no intention of violating their paroles.

It is evident that, deliberately and after careful preparation, they set out for a destination which they will reach, if at all, men forsworn and with honor lost. Their claim to consideration as "officers and gentlemen" has disappeared, for they have committed an offense incompatible with it.

The deception of the enemy or downright lying to him weighs not at all, in ordinary circumstances, on the military conscience, and is not expected to do so by any except the most rigid and unpractical of moralists. Even with an enemy, however, the captured officer, if also gentleman, keeps his word at any cost when he accepts a conditioned liberty. To make the case of these representatives of the German Navy worse—as bad as possible from the standpoint of honor—they have betrayed, not enemies, but neutrals; from whom they had received kindnesses and privileges far in excess of the legal protection of which they were in such desperate need when they brought their worn ships within the Capes.

Our authorities leaned backward in their desire to stand straight, and to avoid the suspicion of sharing—or showing—the prevailing sentiment of the country toward these self-invited guests they incurred deserved criticism by treating them with an excessive friendliness and confidence. They have the reward which some, not without excuse, will say they might have expected from fellow-nationals of those who bestowed a sinister immortality to the phrase, "a scrap of paper."

Plausible rumor has it that these ignorers of their "word of honor" are heading for Cuba. They must be bound for there or Mexico, but what it will profit them to be in either country it is hard to see. They cannot expect a really warm welcome anywhere.

What Was All That Fuss About?

While listening to the many expressions of satisfaction that have followed the revoking or suspension of the order that sent second cabin passengers to Ellis Island for examination and inquisition, there may arise in the minds of at least a few hearers of the joyous chorus an interesting question.

If passage through the Ellis Island mill was so painful to the second cabin folk that their subjection to it roused a general indignation streaked with horror, how are the feelings of the steerage people affected by that same experience? For presumably the arrivals by steerage have feelings much like those of other human beings, and no more taste for herdings and proddings.

That the nation's gateways are more carefully guarded than they should be it is not the intention here to suggest. As far from the purpose would it be even to hint that the out-and-out "immigrants" should be let in more freely than at present, or that Ellis Island is an obnoxious or unnecessary institution. But why—why should anybody except the steamship owners and agents have made a special moan over the recent innovation, as if it were an outrage that lowered the dignity of the nation?

To have the price of a second cabin ticket, or of a first cabin one, for that matter, is no conclusive proof of "desirability," and if Ellis Island is what it should be—what all the available evidence shows it is—a brief sojourn there is an inconvenience rather than a hardship, and almost anybody could live through it without having his hair or hers turn gray.

Roller Skating in the City Streets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

And where shall we walk? Increasingly are the sidewalks infested with hoodlum urchins, who on roller skates and with swaying arms claim and take the right of way, irrespective of women and children, the feeble and the lame. One indorses heartily the recent letter regarding the restriction in London on the cries of the newsboys. Here in New York, with the constant motor horn, we have now the almost unbearable rattle of these skaters, who in addition to sidewalks often use the avenues, bobbing in and out, to the bewilderment of chauffeurs and the danger of those desiring to cross the street.

Is there no redress? A. T. E.

IN THE SUBWAY.

She sits across from me; how beautiful
Those scented furs, protecting, yet revealing
The full white throat; (I draw my collar higher,
To hide the scrawny meagerness of mine.)
Such dainty gloves — such fashionable shoes;
Mine are so worn, so shabby. Then, her hat,
Just at the proper angle; plain, but rich,
Showing the rippling hair. Her maid, I know,
Gave it a hundred strokes to gain that gloss.
I was too tired
To even wash my face before I slept;
Those twenty ads. I answered yesterday
Took all my strength. Somehow, it makes me wonder—
Was she found
More worthy, that so much was given her?
I toil and drudge; I make one penny do
The work of five—but there!
There! What's the use?
She fills her place; I, mine. I am too weary
To puzzle over it. This is my station;
I wonder, now, if I will get this job?

FLORENCE VAN CLEVE.

RUSSIA'S FABULOUS UNTOUCHED WEALTH.

It Is in Agriculture, It Is in the Hearts of the People, but It Is Also in Holy Hoards of Gold and Jewels.

BY IVAN NARODNY.

New York, Oct. 12, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent issue of The New York Evening Journal, Mr. William Bayard Hale attempts to draw a picture of Russia, and argues that she has lost to Germany one-eleventh of the area of European Russia and one-fifth of her population. First of all, he begins his arguments with European Russia, as if the Caucasus, Siberia, Turkestan, &c., were mere colonies. He writes: "About one-sixth of Russia's railways are held by Germany, the mileage in Poland being 3,172 versts and 4,970 in six of the fifty provinces occupied in European Russia." Then he goes on. In discussing statistically Russian industry, &c., Mr. Hale bases his arguments on the Russian Year Book published in London and on American Consular reports. Since his figures are incorrect, his arguments are absolutely wrong and his premises unjust. I feel it my duty, first as a functionary of the Russian Chamber of Commerce, and second as a Russian journalist and author, to explain the matter.

To speak only of European Russia is similar to speaking of the United States this side of the Rocky Mountains. The Caucasus, which is territorially as large as France, is a vital part of Russia, as are Central Asia, Siberia, and Finland. The area of Russia is 7,135,012 square miles, and all over this territory rules one and the same law. European Russia is by no means different from the Caucasus, Siberia, Turkestan, and Finland. The area of the Polish provinces captured by the Germans is only approximately 49,000 square miles, or one-forty-secondth part of the empire. The whole Russian population, from which the soldiers are drawn, is 159,344,100 souls, while the population of the Polish provinces is 12,129,200 people, or one-thirteenth of the whole population. Where Mr. Hale gets a population of Poland of 26,263,300 people is to me a mystery. My statistics are based on the original big Russian work, "Narodnoe Hozaistwo," published by the Ministry of Finance annually. First of all, all the figures of the American Consuls in Russia are onesided and ten years old, and then, the English Year Book uses figures of the last century.

The mileage of the Russian railways was, in 1914, when the war was declared, 63,693, of which 44,613 miles belonged to the Government, while 19,080 miles were owned by private corporations. If Russia has lost in the Polish provinces, as Mr. Hale estimates, 3,172 versts, that would make only one-twentieth of the Russian railways, but by no means one-sixth, as he argues. According to Mr. Hale, Russia has lost, with Poland, one-ninth of the country's total flax-producing fields, which yielded, in 1912, 3,546,000 poods. Mr. Hale does not say that Russia's total flax yield in 1912 was 32,000,000 poods, in which the Provinces of Kovno, Vilna, Coriand, and Grodno are only included, and the total of these provinces was not 3,000,000 poods, but 870,000 poods. Thus inconsistent are Mr. Hale's statistics of the Russian loss of industry in Poland.

It is true that Lods, Vilna, Warsaw, and Czenstachov were great cotton trade towns of Russia, yet the great Russian textile industry is concentrated in Jaroslaw, Moscow, Petrograd, and Narva. The Polish textile mills were owned and operated either by Germans or German Jews. Russia had little benefit of them. Russia never intended to be a big textile country. The best flax-spinning mills are all situated in the Volga River districts, and some in the Russian Baltic provinces. As to the potatoes, they were used mostly for vodka distilleries, and since Russia has abolished the vodka, potatoes would be used only for feeding the cattle.

The great Russian wealth is in agriculture, in sugar, cattle raising, dairy, wool, wheat, oil, minerals, fruit, furs, and other industries, which are absolutely untouched by the war. The Little Russia, the Caucasus, the Volga districts, the Baltic provinces, particularly Livonia, Esthonia, and Ingermaniand, are the inexhaustible nature and industrial treasuries of the country. The South of Russia, Yekaterinoslav, Rostoff, Kieff, Briansk, Tula, Saratoff, and Odessa are the great metal-producing centres. The wealth of the Caucasus alone is billions of dollars. Siberia is but scratched on the surface.

To speak of Russian poverty, as Mr. Hale does, is a sign of ignorance. That Russia is misgoverned by a bureaucratic régime has no bearing upon the national wealth and power, just as the American political corruption has no bearing upon the economic power of the country and nation. It is simply absurd to argue that Russia is bankrupt when you see riches in her every corner. All the centres of Russian banking and economic wealth have remained untouched by the war. When the war broke out the Russian Imperial Bank had 1,688,000,000 rubles in gold against 1,665,000,000 rubles of paper money in circulation. The reserve money of the private banks was 6,233,000,000 rubles, of which 4,432,000,000 rubles were in Petrograd, 1,050,000,000 in Moscow, and 749,000,000 rubles in the provinces. Fully 70,000,000 rubles were kept in the Polish provinces. When the Russian army retired before the Germans the private banks were transferred with 50,000,000 rubles to the interior of Russia, while approximately 5,000,000 were taken away by the rich population which escaped before the Germans arrived.

The value of the jewels and gold kept in Russian monasteries and ancient cathedrals is unknown. The late Count Witte estimated that the Troitze-Sergeyeva Monastery alone had more than 100,000,000 rubles worth of gold in barrels in its carefully guarded vaults. There are hundreds of rich monasteries in Russia the wealth of which is known only to the clergy. The Russian forests and fields are full of natural riches, and the country, as a whole, has been affected only on the surface. If Turkey can keep on fighting, Russia has ninety-nine times more chances. The present Russian Government is to be blamed for the past reverses, but the nation and the country are still full of vital vigor and can fight even if England and France should not pay the bills. The Americans have no idea of the power and wealth of real Russia and judge the Russian people after their chinovniks. As little as one could judge the United States after her politicians, just as little could one judge Russia after her bureaucratic class.

EVERY NATION'S SOUL.

That Was What Belgium Defended, Mr. McClellan Notwithstanding.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Oct. 17 George B. McClellan's amazing article of Oct. 10 on Belgium under German rule was examined and condemned by Mr. Whitely of the Central Committee of the Belgian Relief Fund.

Without undertaking a comparison of the facts alleged and the conclusion reached in the two statements, I ask for some consideration of Mr. McClellan's view as to what today the people of Belgium ought to do. I submit that it should rouse here not only disgust but a certain amount of apprehension.

Briefly, Mr. McClellan thinks that the Belgians should yield to their "conquerors." He would have them go to work for their "conquerors," and turn friends. He would even have the American Committee for Relief in Belgium make itself into a political machine for furthering the German conquest. Does he suppose that that committee was created for such a purpose? Were the millions of dollars subscribed from all over the world outside of Germany given not to help the Belgians bear honorably the humiliation and hardships of captivity, but merely to make things easy for them until they could be persuaded virtually to adopt the invader's cause?

Belgium's defense of herself against Germany has won from the world at large, outside of Germany, the honors paid to the very highest heroism. The principle she defended, and still defends, is every nation's soul. Her failure to defend it would have been a shock to civilization second only to the attack upon her. Yet now Mr. McClellan, having associated himself with the German propaganda, calls on her to declare that her splendid sacrifice was in vain, or wrong. He urges the still unconquered Belgium to surrender.

What a doctrine to be preached by an American! A man in favor of it may be expected to preach later that we of the United States must also give in, in case Germany's hand is raised against us. An American of that kind is more dangerous to this country than any German German-American.

Deteriorating Affidavits.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Are the funds of the German Embassy running low? When it was thought necessary to show that the Lusitania was an armored cruiser the public was furnished with an affidavit by a person who apparently had some sort of position in this community, humble though it was. He subsequently admitted that he perjured himself and is now doing time. No doubt this whole experience was a disagreeable one for him, but it is not an unreasonable presumption that he received some substantial quid pro quo. Now when a charge is to be made against the Baralong the affidavits come from New Orleans and are made by mulsteers, colored, presumably, except perhaps the foreman. To any one who has had much experience with affidavits these do not seem to grade up with the first lot, but it's quite likely that they cost less. E. H. L.

The City Bird Cage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the controversy about Mr. McClellan's article on Germany one of your correspondents, "E. G.," deems it necessary to emphasize the correctness of his statements by giving the German word for "common jail" with "Stadtvogelgefaengnis." I dare say this gentleman has only second-hand knowledge of German names, because what he writes would mean in English "city bird cage." Just imagine how ridiculous that is instead of "Stadtvogtei-Gefaengnis," which is an antiquated names and means "city jail." Why "E. G." has not given us the German equivalent for "internment camp for destitute women" I do not know, but I wish he would tell us. OTTO W. FUHRMANN.

EVOLUTION ALSO KILLS.

It Must Be Both Destructive and Creative to Maintain an Equilibrium

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been much interested in the replies to the question, "Is Nature Perfect?" and would be grateful for the courtesy of a little space to ask those who have answered this query: "What do you mean by 'nature' and by 'perfect'?" It seems to me that the discussion is very academic, though interesting, and that the whole discussion really turns on the meaning of a word. My experience is that almost all argument has its roots in a general misunderstanding of the case or the manner in which it is presented. Some students have a very cramped idea of nature; others have a broader view. But these latter are less numerous and have not been heard from in the present instance. I would like to be considered with these, for I use the word "nature" to mean the whole universe, the immensity of space, the eternity of time, the changelessness of matter, and the entirety of existence. To me evolution is not merely a constructive thing, but also a destructive activity, and the usefulness of evolution is that it maintains an equilibrium in the universe. I think those persons who understand evolution to mean development upward only misunderstand the man who coined the word. I have talked to a number of Darwinians on this subject, and as Dr. Arnold Edward Ortmann of the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh, said: "Evolution is always engaged in killing, killing, killing. This is a great fact in evolution."

And to me it seems sufficient proof of the perfection of this larger nature that the same sun comes smiling up for us in the same place each morning and drops down into the same spot each night, day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year, eternity after eternity, with very little change. Nature is perfect. She endures. And nature is the one great fact in the universe. ALDEN WARD.

A Misplaced Beating.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to Strumnitza in a news item of this morning, you state that Strumnitza was the scene of a Bulgarian victory over the Greeks in the second Balkan war. I was a member of the regiment that actually occupied Strumnitza, and took a prominent part in all the battles in and around the town. I assure you that not only weren't the Greeks defeated but they beat the Bulgarians so badly that they fled in disorder.

In fact, the only setback the Greeks suffered in that war was, toward the close of the conflict, in Mahomia, at the extreme right of the Greek Army, when the Bulgarians attacked the sixth division with overwhelming numbers. But the gallant stand of that division and the prompt arrival of reinforcements turned the seemingly Greek defeat into a Bulgarian rout. It was Emma McChesney, the winning and indomitable heroine of the short stories for which Edna Ferber is best known, has reached the stage at last. The stage is that of the Lyceum Theatre, where a dramatization of those stories, concocted by Miss Ferber in collaboration with George V. Hobart, and called "Our Mrs. McChesney," was presented to New York for the first time last evening.

This play is decidedly loose and ungainly, but it has been brightly written and in its all important rôle, the performance of Ethel Barrymore is a rare delight. A big company and a good one support her in this latest endeavor, and all told, an entertainment is provided in which many will find much to please.

It was late last Spring that the news went forth of Miss Barrymore's intention to play in the stage version of Miss Ferber's very popular stories. If the news was a bit of a shock it was less in the apprehensive anticipation of her appearance in a probably rough-and-ready American comedy than in the realization that she did not at all suggest Miss Ferber's traveling saleswoman. In the sandy, slangy heroine of those stories one could see something of the Rose Stahl that played "The Chorus Lady" and something perhaps of the Henrietta Crosman who played "Mistress Nell," but nothing at all of Ethel Barrymore. And the point of these reminiscences is that Miss Barrymore has created a new Emma McChesney, one who with easy triumph puts all memories to rout. To meet this new Mrs. McChesney is a most agreeable experience.

Of course Miss Barrymore's art is capable and worthy of much finer and more ambitious undertakings. Recent seasons have proved that beyond all dispute. But she can do these lighter tasks extremely well, and proved it again last evening.

She is looking exceedingly handsome, and her voice seemed lovlier. There are those—poor wretches—who say they do not enjoy Miss Barrymore's voice, but there are some of us who find it works magic with the homeliest prose, and who think, when it is filled just to the brim with unshed tears, it is pleasanter in the ear than any other American sound. It adds a new charm to those little heart-warming touches of humanity that so enrich Miss Ferber's best work, and makes supremely affecting the moment when Emma, finding that, after all, it was not her son who had stolen the firm's money, goes to him with outstretched arms and a singing heart.

The play begins its rather straggling course in a dismal hotel at Sandusky, Ohio. You meet Emma, tired and discouraged and determined at last to leave the T. A. Buck Featherloom Petticoat Company for a blandishing rival. She is sick of the road, sick of the prospect of hungarian goulash and a flirtatious drummer at dinner, sick for a home all planned in her dreams from the plumbing to the piano. Then comes the discovery that her son has committed a forgery and married an actoress from a passing show. It means that she must stick at her job till the boy is safe, and she sticks, though there are moments when it looks as though the firm were going to smash because of its faith in Emma's latest style creation, and though the happy ending does not come till, amid the clatter of arriving furniture at the blissful young folks' flat, Emma McChesney and T. J. Buck form a new partnership for good and all.

The framing of this stage story has been done with indifferent skill and the bright and abundant humor contributed unmistakably by Miss Ferber does not quite conceal the rickety structure. There is precious little suspense, and it is always dropped rather hastily as if the authors were in deathly fear of interrupting the laughter. But there is plenty of this, the response to the hundred and one invitations in what is after all a Cohanesque American business comedy with a feminine touch.

All this is set forth by a quite multitudinous company. Some of the work is very good. Nearly all of it is good enough. There should be special mention of William Boyd, that easy and very competent actor who made so favorable an impression in these parts last Spring when Miss Anglin was at the same theatre. Donald Gallaher, who always strengthens a company, is good as young McChesney, and the only complaint is that he is a rather too young McChesney.

He looks the college boy disposed to a runaway marriage less than he does a lad who might by strenuous effort enter Andover next Fall. Lola Fisher is quite engaging as the chorus girl bride, and Thomas Reynolds adds a capital bit to the first act. So does Hugh Dillman. A Romaine Callender, Anita Rothe and W. H. St. James are suffered to act off key.

These are only a few out of many. But the play is Miss Barrymore's. Her appearance in it, though its material far from measures her powers, is a fresh reminder that America has few actresses so good. It would be preposterous to ask for one more delightful.

Brice-Wyndham Betrothal Broken.

Announcement was made yesterday that the engagement of Miss Olive Wyndham, the actress, and Walter Kirkpatrick Brice had been broken by mutual consent.

Their engagement was announced last July. Miss Wyndham is a sister of Miss Janet Beecher and made her debut on the New York stage in 1902 in "Alice and Men," appearing since then in a score of plays.

Mr. Brice, who is a lawyer, is a son of the late United States Senator Calvin S. Brice of Ohio, and is a brother of John F. Brice of 693 Fifth Avenue, with whom he makes his home. His sister, Miss Helen Brice, is well known in society.

American Players in the Paragon.

The Paragon Film, Inc., is the name of a new moving picture producing company that will open a studio in course of construction at Fort Lee about Dec. 1. Maurice Tourneur, a French director who came to this country about a year ago, is acting head of the organization, his position being the dual one of Vice President and General Manager. The company will make twenty-four five-reel pictures and two or three larger ones annually. Several other French directors will be associated with M. Tourneur, but the actors will be American, as he considers them superior to foreign film players.

PRESIDENT MAY WED DURING THE HOLIDAYS

California Sends Gold to Make the Ring—Mrs. Galt Adds to Trousseau.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—The announcement of the date of the wedding of President Wilson and Mrs. Norman Galt is expected this week. The President and Mrs. Galt, it is understood, have about reached a decision. It is said to be probable that the wedding will take place during the Christmas holidays, although it may be earlier.

Miss Margaret Wilson the President's only unmarried daughter, who finished a short concert tour in Cleveland, Ohio, today, will arrive at the White House tomorrow or Thursday. Soon afterward the first of a series of musicales to be given by her will be held at the White House.

California tomorrow will show her good-will toward President Wilson in a gift of a nugget of gold for the wedding ring. At the same time the President will be invited to visit the San Francisco Exposition on his wedding journey. A delegation of Californians arrived here today, headed by Mrs. Gailliard Stoney, Secretary of the Woman's Board of the exposition. Arrangements were made for their reception at the White House in the morning.

Mrs. Stoney will present to the President the invitation from the exposition authorities. A petition signed by 300,000 school children and leading citizens of California, urging him to be their guest, will be presented by Altha McQueeney, an 11-year-old girl.

Dorothy Starr, 10 years old, daughter of the owner of the oldest gold mine in the State, will present the gold nugget which came from this mine and will ask the President to have the wedding ring made from it. The party brought a mass of orange blossoms, and these also will be presented to the President.

Mrs. Galt joined the President and Miss Bones at the family dinner at the White House this evening. While the state dining room is used each evening this is the only one of the first-floor apartments that appears to find favor with the Presidential household, as at present constituted, the large oval library on the second floor being the family drawing room.

The Red parlor formerly used for this purpose is now as strictly formal and official as the great East Room itself. The furniture is the same as in the time of Mrs. Taft and the first season of the Wilson Administration, but the books, flowers, and signed photographs, giving the home-like atmosphere of those days, are missing.

With the coming of a new mistress one very important change can confidently be expected in the rehanging of the portraits in the entrance hall. Since the White House was remodeled twelve years ago the custom has been to have the portrait of the President on the west wall, with that of his immediate predecessor opposite. This precedent, however, was not followed when President Wilson's portrait was painted. It was hung very much in shadow in the Red Corridor, at the foot of the grand stairway, leaving the Roosevelt and Taft portraits in the entrance hall. The time has now come, friends of the President say, when the latter's canvas should take its proper place—which will place Colonel Roosevelt's portrait in the corridor.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 19.—The fondness of Mrs. Norman Galt for the orchids which President Wilson sends her every day is reflected in an exquisite evening frock which is the latest contribution of Baltimore to her trousseau. The gown is of orchid-colored tulle over a foundation of orchid-colored silk. It depends for its charm entirely upon its wonderful shade and upon the lines of the filmy bouffant draperies, for no trimming is used except a single band of blue fox fur across one shoulder. There is no sign of sleeve drapery. It is cut quite low above the nigh girdle of orchid-colored silk, from which the tulle hangs full about the feet.

One of the accessories of Mrs. Galt's trousseau is an evening cloak of turquoise blue velvet, with collars and cuffs of blue fox fur. Although the cloak hangs free of the figure from the shoulders, the fullness is slightly confined at the waist by a belt of turquoise blue velvet embroidered in metallic threads of Oriental shades.

Mrs. Galt has purchased practically all of her hats in Baltimore. There is a small black velvet turban trimmed with a band of beaver and a touch of green designed to match her going away suit of green duvetyn, banded in beaver. A large hat of Bordeaux velvet with a shepherd's brim was purchased here to match an afternoon frock of the same shade. There is also a wide all-black hat drooping slightly at one side and trimmed with a soft plume. Several other hats for afternoon and evening wear also have been purchased here.

Tom Dobson's Song Recital.

Tom Dobson, a tenor singer who cultivates in public a strong imitation of the drawing-room style, gave a recital yesterday afternoon in the Punch and Judy Theatre, surroundings that are well adapted to the general character of his entertainment. His singing yesterday was on the order of that which was heard at a similar recital last season, though his voice was not in quite so good condition as then. Mr. Dobson has a pleasing manner and a style not without artistic qualities, and his singing is found sympathetic by many. Yesterday he sang in French, German, and English. Among his songs were several of his own composition, and John Alden Carpenter's amusing set entitled "Improving Songs for Anxious Children."

tion, to depart on the 10:50 o'clock train for Hartford, Conn., where Mr. Greaves will be buried in the family plot. Dr. Green will conduct services at the grave.

From among the many friends of Mr. Greaves these have been selected as honorary pallbearers, and will meet in the Greaves home at 9 o'clock: Isaac D. White, John Hettrick, Louis Selbold, Thomas Healy, Luther B. Little, Edward Rascovar, and Charles Steckler, and these members of the staff of THE TIMES: Dr. Van Buren Thorne, W. Axel Warn, Henry Lowenthal, L. C. Speers, and T. W. Williams.

The loss of Mr. Greaves, which was too sudden to be fully realized at once, was felt deeply yesterday by everyone who had known him, and of those who had worked under him in the fifteen years that he was at the head of the city staff of THE TIMES, there were few to whom there did not come recollections of innumerable small incidents that justified Mr. Greaves's reputation, not only as one of the most efficient of city editors, but one of the most human and kindly as well.

His good humor was unfailing, his knowledge of men keen, and his methods of dealing with situations which might have embarrassed almost any one else, were effective and his own. One newspaper man in this city can vouch for this. Mr. Greaves sent him out of the office, assigned to get the facts of an accident or some other news event. The man did not report that day nor the next. In fact it was two years before he saw a board of again.

Then he entered the office one day, determined to make his explanation and apologies and a request for reinstatement in his old post. Mr. Greaves was out when he arrived but returned presently to see his former reporter seated at a desk awaiting him. Before the penitent could speak Mr. Greaves called out:

"What the deuce are you doing here on your day off?"

And that closed the incident. The man was back at work the following day, and he was never called on for an explanation, which Mr. Greaves could imagine as accurately as if he had heard it in detail. He knew his man.

Mr. Greaves had been a "newspaper man" almost from childhood, for he began by selling papers in Hartford, and was always proud to tell about his old route. His parents had brought him to this country from Cardiff, Wales, where his father had been a chemist and apothecary, when Mr. Greaves was only three years old. The older Greaves had done a business in fitting out ships with medicine chests and saw a great future in this country. His wife's family invested a large sum in drugs, loaded them on another ship, and started with them for this country shortly afterward. The ship was lost and with it the family capital.

The elder Greaves took his family to Chicago, where they were burned out in the big Chicago fire, and thereupon removed to Hartford, where the elder Greaves established a drug store. His parents wanted to send Arthur to Harvard, but the boy realized they could not afford it and of his own accord began the study of shorthand.

When he was thirteen years old he visited Boston and saw on a billboard the notice of a civil service examination for stenographers. He took it, headed the list and, unknown to his parents, got a situation in the office of the Fitchburg Railroad. At sixteen he was private secretary to the President of the road at a salary of $25 a week, but so great was his interest in newspaper work that he sacrificed this salary to go on The Boston Globe at $7 a week.

He reported the great train wreck at Haverhill and did such good work that he was told to put in an expense bill of $100 "for cab hire," although, as Mr. Greaves frequently recalled, there wasn't a cab in the place. His removal to this city followed soon, and after three years on THE TIMES and nine on The World he returned to THE TIMES on Jan. 29, 1900, to be City Editor.

This appreciation of Mr. Greaves, to which every man who ever worked under him must heartily subscribe, appeared yesterday in The Evening Post:

"In the fifteen years of his service as their chief Mr. Greaves commanded to an extraordinary degree the loyalty of the men of the city staff—many men of many minds, whose tasks, not always congenial, were assigned, and whose goings and comings, not always at convenient hours, were determined by his order. The genial and human qualities of the men tempered the discipline of the executive and gave to his relations with his subordinates an atmosphere of confidence and kindliness which the men who served under him will not easily forget."

AUGUSTUS J. DUBOIS DEAD.

Professor in Sheffield Scientific School for 30 Years, and Author.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19.—Augustus Jay Du Bois, for thirty years Professor of Civil Engineering in the Sheffield Scientific School and widely known as an author on engineering subjects, died suddenly of heart disease this morning while in bed at his home here. He was a member of the Governing Board of Sheffield and was one of the best known members of the Scientific School Faculty. He was 66 years old, and was born in Newton Falls, Mass. In 1883 he was married to Miss Adeline Blakeslee of this city, who survives him.

Professor Du Bois was a pioneer in the subject of stresses in frame structures. His book on "Graphic Statistics," published in 1876, first introduced that method to American engineers. Perhaps the book which gained him widest recognition was the one published in 1883, entitled "Strains in Frame Structures," which for civil engineers has always been a standard work.

MISS TANNER, BRIDE OF F. D. DOUBLEDAY

The wedding of Felix D. Doubleday, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank N. Doubleday, and Miss Rhoda van Bibber Tanner, the daughter of Mrs. John James Tanner, was celebrated at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, and the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant performed the ceremony. Quantities of shaded pink chrysanthemums and Autumn leaves were massed about the chancel and arranged in vases on the altar, and clusters of them were tied to alternate pews on the nave.

The bride, who walked with her brother, John Stewart Tanner, was gowned in white satin, the corsage cut square across the shoulders and finished with tulle and silver, and having long wrinkled tulle sleeves. The skirt was draped in apron points and caught with sprays of orange blossoms at the waist line, and a long court train of heavy white satin brocaded in silver bowknots and laid in two box plaits, depended from the shoulders. The tulle veil, the same length as the train, was ruched in high Spanish comb effect at the back of her head, and held with diamonds and orange blossoms. She carried a large spray bouquet of large and small white orchids.

Mrs. Abbott A. Low, a cousin of the bride, was the matron of honor. Her gown and head dress were altogether new and picturesque in design. Her frock was a brilliant blue taffeta, shading to green in the artificial light, and a large rosette-like bow of tulle of the same shade was fastened to one side of her coiffure, from which a wide end fell in a short half veil effect a little below her shoulders. The frock itself was very short, showing silken hose and slippers to match, the hem was finished with a double ruche of tulle with silver ribbon running through it, and the drapery was bunched in a huge butterfly manner effect at the back. The corsage was cut straight across the top, the edge falling below the shoulders and had no sleeves, a tulle ruching being a substitute. Straps of flesh-colored ribbon held the corsage in place. Her flowers were a mass of shaded purple orchids with wide orchid-colored streamers.

The two maids of honor were also cousins of the bride and sisters of the matron of honor, the Misses Agnes S. Claflin and Mary Stewart Claflin. Their gowns were a rich pink tone shading into mauve, with short plain skirts having side draped panniers, flat at the waist line. The round-necked corsages were draped with tulle to match, and were slightly pointed with elbow sleeves of tulle and taffeta. Their large hats had soft pale pink velvet crowns banded at the top with brown fur, and at the bottom with mauve ribbon, and the curving, flaring brims were edged with fur, and mauve ribbons passed from the brim under the chin to the sides in loops and ends. Their flowers were large clusters of mauve orchids, tied with ribbons to match.

Mr. Doubleday's best man was his brother, Nelson Doubleday, and the ushers were Harvey S. Ladew, L. Stuart Wing, Jr., George A. Dillon, Jr., Brent M. Tanner, a brother of the bride, Douglas Gibbon and Sidney Dillon Ripley.

The ceremony was followed by a reception at the Colony Club, where Autumn flowers and leaves were the decorations. Mrs. Tanner, who received, wore a frock of pale gray taffeta embroidered in silver, topped by a small silverlace hat, and Mrs. Doubleday, who also received, was in pale satin, topped by a large gray hat trimmed with fur and pale yellow bird of paradise feathers.

COFFEY KNOCKED OUT BY MORAN

Dublin Giant Lasts Less Than Three Rounds with the Pittsburgher—Garden Crowded.

Frank Moran, the sorrel-topped heavyweight from Pittsburgh, put a sudden end to the aspirations of Jim Coffey, "the Dublin Giant," to world's championship honors when he knocked him out in three rounds at Madison Square Garden last evening. It took Moran a couple of rounds to get warmed up, but when once he got to going he went strong and keeled Coffey over in a heap with a right-hand blow on the jaw. Coffey pitched head first to the mat, sprawled flat, while Referee "Bill" Brown counted five, got to his knees while two more counts were made, and then sprawled helplessly and completely dazed against the ropes at the Fourth Avenue end of the ring. Coffey's arms were limp, his hands lifeless, and his glassy eyes gazed helplessly and aimlessly over toward Fourth Avenue, where the sound of the trolley car gongs played a familiar tune to his ears. He seemed like a man who regretted that he had ever left the tranquil life of a motorman for the jars and jabs of the "squared circle," and would dearly like to be back twisting the brake handle. He had hardly recovered consciousness when he was led off the stage to go to his dressing room, a picture of complete dejection.

Moran's victory was won in the presence of the largest crowd ever assembled at the Garden for a boxing bout, every seat in the house and all the standing room being occupied by approximately 10,000 men, with a sparse sprinkling of women. The receipts aggregated from $25,000 to $32,000, according to various estimates. The sale of tickets was suspended shortly after 8 o'clock, and several thousand would-be witnesses of the fight went away disappointed, the police refusing to permit thousands to enter the Garden.

It was with a roar of applause that the thousands greeted Jim Coffey, first of the pair who were to box for the privilege of meeting Jess Willard for the world's championship, entered the ring at 10 o'clock, after two lively preliminaries had been disposed of. He had a host of friends in the crowd, the noise proved, and it was lucky for them that they did their cheering then. They had little chance later on. Coffey was attended by his brother, John Coffey, and Joe Jeannette, and they took the corner at the northwest end of the ring.

The titian-haired Moran followed a couple of minutes later with Willie Lewis as his principal attendant and adviser. As the crowd roared once more their welcome the big blonde giant slipped off his bathrobe and bowed his acknowledgments to the boisterous throng which pinned their faith to the man who held Jack Johnson for twenty rounds, and when stripped looked to be the physical superior of his opponent so far as exterior evidences of fitness went.

Coffey was chipper as he started fistic operations with a lead which missed Moran, who was slow and leggy as usual, and smiled complacently as they exchanged a few taps, even though they did not land close to his proboscis. There was not much force in them, however, and in a few seconds there was a clinch and some in-fighting in which Moran seemed to have more steam and force and managed to get in a couple of welts by the wind that made Coffey wince and glad to break away. Coffey did all the leading and aggressive work in the round, but his blows lacked force and his left jab was a tap rather than a punch. Moran was plainly waiting to see what Coffey had, kept his guard perfect and permitted Coffey to show the best he had in the few punches. But it was noticeable that the big Pittsburgher held his wicked right hand where it could be used in case there was an opening and a chance to get it somewhere than against the ribs, at which it had been directed. The first round was merely a warming up operation. Even at that, Coffey was breathing a bit heavily as he went to his corner.

In the second round Coffey again started out as if he intended to do things to his opponent. He mussed around a bit and managed to get in his right and left on Moran's face a couple of times. Moran was slow and in no hurry to do more than slam Coffey in the wind three or four times viciously until the round was about half over. Then Moran suddenly came to life and battered Coffey about as he liked, with Coffey just failing to make his well-intended leads land where they would do any damage. In one of the mix-ups Moran got a slight cut under his left eye, right on the cheekbone, the result of one of Coffey's left jabs. It failed to jar or materially disturb the Pittsburgh lad, who finally got his right to work and landed three blows in succession with such force that Coffey was groggy as he staggered to his corner at the sound of the bell.

Coffey was not so cocky as the third round opened, and Moran, with head down, parried his blows, and finally became the aggressor. The pair had been fighting one minute and thirty-eight seconds when Moran landed a right on Coffey's jaw and toppled him over as if he had been struck with a sledgehammer. This knockout blow followed one that was vicious but not so effective, though it had dazed Coffey and made the little boxing he did after that almost ludicrous. Coffey landed on the mat like a bull hit in a slaughterhouse, going down head first. He struggled painfully to his knees, swayed as he got to his feet, and fell over against the ropes. Moran was waiting to give him the knockout blow when the referee interfered, finished his count of ten, shoved Moran aside rather than allow Moran to hit him again when Coffey was in such a helpless state that another blow might have ended in something more serious than a mere knockout.

Brown's action was generally commended, though Billy Gibson, stunned by the sudden ending of his protegé's aspirations, protested that Coffey was not knocked out and might have been able to come back at Moran before the time limit expired. But Brown waved him aside and declared that the bout was a knockout as surely as if Coffey had lain prostrate for two minutes. The crowd agreed with him generally and hailed Moran as an out-and-out victor.

In the two bouts which preceded the main bout, Young Ketchell had rather the best of it in a six-round go with Young Brady, and Benny Leonard made a chopping block of Young Drummy in a ten-round bout, though he did not have sufficient force in his blows to land a knockout.

$2,800 OF GATE ATTACHED.

Dan McKetrick Claims Moran Owes Him $1,462.

Sheriff Grifenhagen and Deputy Sheriff Joseph Cook, with a warrant of attachment issued by Justice O'Dwyer in the City Court, visited Madison Square Garden last night just before the fight between Moran and Coffey came off and attached $2,800 of Moran's share of the gate receipts.

Dan McKetrick, former manager of Moran, instituted suit against the fighter several months ago in the City Court to recover $1,462 alleged to be due him on a former contract to manage Moran. Yesterday he asked for an attachment on the ground that Moran is a resident of Pittsburgh.

Late in the afternoon the Sheriff visited H. Douglas Vincent, Secretary and Treasurer of the show corporation which staged the fight, and announced that they were going to attach the $5,000 bonus which Moran was to receive before he entered the ring. Vincent begged the Sheriff not to attach the $5,000, as Moran had told him he would not fight unless the money was handed to him before the first round.

Sheriff Grifenhagen agreed to let the bonus money alone. But when the gates of the Garden opened last night he and his deputy were on hand, and issued an attachment to the Treasurer for the $2,800. This sum, the Sheriff said, would cover the $1,462 suit to be due McKetrick, as well as the court costs.

Four Speculators Arrested.

Four men charged with violating the city ordinance which prohibits ticket speculation, were arrested last night by Detective James Brady in the neighborhood of Madison Square Garden, where the bout between Jim Coffey and Frank Moran was contested. The men gave their names as Henry Acker, 29 years old, a clerk of 1458 West Forty-second Street; Sol Brown, 44, a salesman of 104 East Tenth Street; Charles Cohen, 24, a clerk of Ulmer Park, and Harold Brown, 24, of 101 West Eighty-ninth Street.

$10,000 TRAPS IN PARK.

Shooters Want Two Acres Set Aside for Them at Van Cortlandt.

Several hundred trap shooters of this city have launched a movement for the organization of a Greater New York Gun Club, and a success of the project depends upon the action of Thomas Whittle, Park Commissioner of the Bronx, in regard to the request that the club be permitted to lease for a nominal sum, two acres in the northeastern end of Van Cortlandt Park. Commissioner Whittle has not announced a decision in the matter as yet, but it is understood he is not opposed to the plan.

New York's trap shooters have been handicapped by the lack of shooting grounds within reasonable distance of the city. Some weeks ago a number of business and professional men discussed the matter and decided to appeal to the Park Department. In Chicago and Washington facilities have been made in public parks for trap shooting, and the local enthusiasts thought that they might get the same privileges here.

The projectors say that they can get 700 members in a club, and that 500 sportsmen have already signified their intention of joining.

The plan includes an outlay of about $10,000 by the club in fitting up the property. It is the intention to have three movable traps, a shot catcher for the protection of spectators, a two-story club house with the second floor for women, and a small shell house, a small refreshment booth, and board walks. All the construction and the management of the shooting ground is to be under the supervision of the Park Commissioner.

There is to be nothing exclusive about the club. Any citizen may become a member by vote of the Board of Governors. The club asks that three days in the week be set aside for members only, and on the other three week days, the grounds may be thrown open for the use of the public. Any one at any time may witness the shooting.

It has been further planned to provide for shooting at night. By means of a new arc light, it is said, it will be possible to have shooting at night under just as favorable conditions as though the sun was shining brightly.

Some of the men who are back of the movement are J. I. D. Bristol, W. H. Yule, Edward Cave, E. F. Warner, Warren Miller, Dr. C. G. Van Scheock, G. H. Finch, G. F. Hutchings, J. I. Brandenberg, H. O. Allen, T. H. Lawrence, Dr. F. C. Healy, E. H. Locatelli, S. D. Levings, M. McVoy, Jr., E. S. Sheffelin, and A. Spear.

Coach Rice's Methods Praised.

Columbia crew men have rallied in defense of Coach Jim Rice, and there appeared in yesterday's Spectator, the students' daily newspaper, an answer by Captain Norm Bratton to the editorial several days ago. The editorial criticised the coaching methods and the system of selecting the oarsmen, and said that there was sufficient crew interest and sentiment among the undergraduates despite the opinions of prominent alumni to the contrary. The Bratton letter concludes with the following paragraph:

"Coach Rice is a master molder of physique and stamina. He builds up crews from material that would be absolutely rejected at any other university. He instills in them the spirit of fight. Every 'Varsity man swears by him. Every alumnus honors him. His system produces these results. Shall we abolish crew? No. Let us take off our hats to the Grand Old Man of the rowing game."

Munroe Out of Columbia Crew.

Another change will be made in the Columbia crew at practice this afternoon. Munroe, who has been suffering from stomach trouble for some weeks, will take a physical examination, and may be away from practice at Edgewater for several days. O'Loughlin will be moved from bow to Munroe's seat at No. 3, and Sengstacken, '17, will be promoted from bow in the Junior boat to the same position in the 'Varsity shell.

Yesterday's practice was the fastest and longest of the season. Coach Rice drove the 'Varsity for a six-mile row, most of it being devoted to sprints, Captain Bratton frequently hit up the stroke to 38.

YALE TO WEED OUT ATHLETIC EVILDOERS

Committee Investigating More Men Tainted with Professionalism.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19.—As far as Yale is concerned, the case of Legore, Easton, Milburn, Pumpelly, and Rhett is a closed incident," said Nelson Talbott, one of the coaches of the Yale eleven, regarding the case being reopened. Reports have been current that the five players who are barred from Yale athletics for all time because they took free a week's board and lodging while playing baseball at Quogue, L. I., last Summer, might be reinstated. Talbott spoke for the football coaches, who today debated the case exhaustively.

It was stated tonight on the Yale campus that Dean Briggs of Harvard expressed himself some time ago as hopeful that the five athletes would not be thrown out of future competition because of the technicality. Dean McLanahan, of Princeton, is quoted as opposed to the reinstatement. The Yale eligibility committee, however, has no intention of reversing its decision, and the athletes will never again wear a Yale uniform against an opposing college team. Both Legore and Easton have promised to join the so-called ineligible eleven, a strong team, composed of players who are prohibited from playing this year on the 'varsity. None of these players was in uniform today, but they have offered their services as members of the scrubs or as assistant coaches.

Legore today denied that he would leave college to play baseball professionally. He said: "I have never held conferences with baseball managers who wished me to join their teams. I shall complete my college course at Yale, and I do not care to discuss the report that I shall ever play baseball professionally."

Legore is known to have received generous offers to become a member of more than half the American and National League nines. He belongs to a wealthy family of Legore, Md., and has just been elected floor manager of the junion promenade committee. His disqualification from football and baseball will have no effect on his membership on the committee, which has charge of Yale's annual social week.

Today The Yale Daily News put the blame for the disqualification of the athletes squarely up to the coaches and managers of the different teams. The players were absolved from blame, and the coaches and Captains were told that the players should have been made fully aware of the eligibility rules in every detail.

Yale's Eligibility Committee, which was appointed only six weeks ago, composed of Professor Robert M. Lovett, Chairman of the Athletic Board; John Kilpatrick, former track and football star, and Jack Field, the former football half back, will continue a careful probe into the eligibility of every member of Yale's major sport teams. Several other members of the Yale nine will be questioned closely relative to their Summer playing. "Pie" Way, the pitcher; Vaughn and Kinney were members of a nine at Fabyan, N. H., and Ray Watrous, and Johnson, short stop, were members of the Colonials, a New Haven nine which played the Boston Braves, the New York Americans, and the New York Giants. Aside from the fact that the Colonials took part in Sunday games the question of receipts will be brought up.

It was rumored today that the Yale nine, which played at Quogue, L. I., was compelled to cancel its game arranged in this city on a Sunday in July with the Colonials. The game had been advertised when the posters were suddenly taken down. Whether the Yale players' names were ordered not to advertise the name of Yale in a Sunday game, either at New Haven or elsewhere, by the Yale baseball management is unknown.

Captain Lou Middlebrook of the Yale nine last Spring was at the head of the movement to bring most of the members of the team to Quogue for the Summer game. He was graduated last June, and is, therefore, not affected by the penalty paid by the five members who were yesterday disqualified.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 19.—Yale's disqualification of Harry Legore, its football and baseball star, and four other members of the Yale University baseball nine last year did not come as a surprise to the Harvard athletic authorities. Harvard was not in a position to protest Legore for football this year, but was sitting back awaiting developments at New Haven. Legore probably would not have been protested this Fall, but next year his case might have been put up to the Yale A. A., as Harvard figures that he played lawn tennis for Lafayette before entering Yale, and therefore might not be eligible to play for the New Haven football team in 1916. Wallace, last year's centre rush at Harvard, who was with the squad two seasons ago, played soccer in California before entering Harvard. He has not been in any of the Crimson's games so far this year, but the Athletic Committee has had his case in hand for several weeks and is expected to render its decision any time.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 19.—Dean Howard McLenahan, of Princeton University and Chairman of Princeton's Athletic Executive Committee, authorized a complete denial of the statement that Princeton was the instigator of the ineligibility action against the Yale athletes. He declared that to Yale authorities and Yale athletes alone the credit of the move belongs, and is sorry that any one should impugn their motives. Sentiment in Princeton seems to be on the side of the ineligible men, although respect for the move of the Yale authorities is very much in evidence.

HAUGHTON DEFERS DRIVE.

Harvard 'Varsity Not Allowed to Tackle Scrubs—Soucy Out Again.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 19.—Although the largest squad that has been on the field for weeks was ready for work on Soldiers Field this afternoon, the Harvard coaches did not put on the expected drive between the 'Varsity and the scrubs. The regulars, with Gilman back at right tackle and Weatherhead in Harte's place at right end, were worked against the substitutes and were coached to the limit; but when the time for the scrimmage came, it was the substitute team that was sent against the scrubs, who for the first time put on some of the offensive formations Cornell is expected to use in the Stadium Saturday.

In this scrimmage the substitutes stopped the scrubs' attack at every angle and made one touchdown for themselves, this being scored at the end of a long, plugging journey up the field. The regulars, while they worked against the second string men, lined up as they did yesterday with the above exceptions. Harte was allowed to rest, and Weatherhead, who has been on the side lines so much this Fall, needed the work. He is the heaviest of all the end rushers, has played with the 'Varsity two years, and is one of the experienced players the coaches figure on having in trim for the big games.

Soucy was on the field in playing clothes and played right end for the substitutes. His knee has responded to treatment, and there seems no doubt that he will be able to play against Cornell. Parson also worked with the substitutes, and he, like Soucy, will be back with the regulars for the match against the Ithacans.

An interesting shift was made this afternoon when Bigelow, who has played both a centre and at tackle for the 'Varsity from time to time, was placed at right guard. Dadmun, at left guard, is a fixture, but Cowan has not been playing up to form on the right side, and the coaches have been looking for a man to take his place. Taylor has been doing so well at centre that it is not desired to move him out even a notch, and Bigelow may be the man to fill the place at guard. He is a very strong fellow, but has not been showing a great deal of speed at tackle except for flashes of down-the-field interference work.

Horween was in the substitute back field today. This means considerable for the game on Saturday, as Horween is the best line bucker Harvard has. He lacks something on defense and interference, but if he can keep in trim, it is thought that he can be developed satisfactorily in these points. Watson worked with the substitutes at quarter back for a time today, but is far from being in first-class physical trim. Doherty, who ran the substitutes when they scored against the scrubs, put a lot of life into his men, and he is one of the players the coaches expect will develop very fast.

Navy's New Backfield Combination.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 19.—A new combination in the Naval Academy backfield was tried this afternoon with excellent results, three of the backs being members of the fourth class. Luth, the only upper class man in the group, was at quarterback and put lots of snap into the work, besides carrying the ball better than he has done before. Von Helmburg was at fullback, and Martin and Bludget at halves. After a drill in preliminaries and signals the first team was allowed to take the ball in the scrimmage in midfield. With Martin and Luth generally carrying the ball, they forced it without a break to the scrubs' five-yard line. Here some forward pass plays were tried, but they met with little success. Head Coach Ingram intends to hammer at these plays, however, until the team can make efficient use of them. Bludget, the big fellow who has played behind the line for two seasons, is now being used at end regularly. Von Helmburg, who is doing the punting in his place, is showing steady improvement in this and the other requirements of his position.

Real Football for Cornell.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 19.—Cornell's first day of real football practice for the Harvard game turned out to be the hardest workout of the season, the 'Varsity and scrubs scrimmaging for more than an hour, and keeping at it until neither team could see the ball in the darkness.

The regulars scored four times on the scrubs, Schlichter making two touchdowns, and Barrett and Shiverick one. They played raggedly and did not show much form until the game was almost over, then they seemed to find themselves and their playing was improved. Most of their gains were made by long runs, as in line rushes the scrubs proved almost their equals. The slippery condition of the field and the wet ball also militated against the best sort of football and partly explains the ragged work. Harvard formations in the hands of the scrubs caused the 'Varsity a lot of trouble. Benedict and Lewis got loose for some good gains. The second team was held for downs on the 20-yard line, and got no nearer to the 'Varsity's goal than that mark at any time.

STRAIGHT FOOTBALL IN YALE SCRIMMAGE

'Varsity Shows Driving Power Against the Ineligibles—Neville at Full Back.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19.—Beginning the week's scrimmaging, the Yale 'Varsity today showed tremendous power and scoring ability. Three touchdowns and a drop kick were registered against a team of ineligibles in twenty-minute playing halves, and the coaches tonight told the regulars that their work showed distinct improvement.

In grinding a steady path from their ten-yard line all the way to the ineligibles' goal the 'Varsity was not checked during the afternoon. Two successful forward passes were employed, but the absence of the lateral pass was remarkable. It was mostly straight football, however, the attack shattering the rush line of the ineligibles repeatedly. Neville, upon whom the mantle of Legore has fallen, skirted around end for a touchdown and lifted the only field goal of the afternoon from the thirty-yard line. Scovil and Smith, his companion backs, scored a touchdown each. Captain Aleck Wilson directed the eleven, and the most brilliant individual exploit of the afternoon was his run back of the opening kick-off for forty yards.

The practice was open, and nearly 500 undergraduates and football fans sat in the bleachers during the afternoon. No changes were made in the line-up, the shift of Church from the second team to right end being continued. He will probably displace Allen in Saturday's game against Washington and Jefferson.

Johnny Kilpatrick, Jim Rodgers, and Ned Glass, veterans of historic Yale teams, assisted in the line coaching. Five elevens were lined up, all getting a taste of brisk football. Otis Guernsey was in uniform and will begin practice as Yale's chief reliance, as pinch punter and drop kicker, although it is unlikely that his injured shoulder will allow him to scrimmage again this year. The 'Varsity line-up today:

Indians Practice Open Plays.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Pa., Oct. 19.—The Carlisle Indian 'Varsity put in a hard afternoon's work, consisting mostly in running down under punts, blocking, and interfering. The 'Varsity did not get into scrimmage, but the reserve and scrub elevens battled for fifty minutes. The 'Varsity line players pushed the bucking sledge around the field, and as a result are charging much faster than formerly. Wofford has been putting up such a fine game that he will get a regular berth in the 'Varsity backfield, although he is very light. As Hawkeagle's condition does not show much improvement Mays and Johnson are fighting for his place at guard. Saturday's line-up against Bucknell will probably be much changed from the previous ones, as the coaches are going to give the substitutes a chance.

Secret Practice at Amherst.

AMHERST, Mass., Oct. 19.—The secret practice sign was posted at Pratt Field today for the first time this season. New plays were developed, in addition to a long scrimmage, in which Perkins played at quarter back on the first eleven. Low, who was slightly injured at Hartford last Saturday, is taking a few days' rest. Ashley and Knowlton, playing the backfield in special formation, made good gains through the line today.

COLUMBIA'S FIRST TEST.

Football Team Plays Well Against N. Y. U. Eleven on South Field.

Columbia's new football team was put to the first real test of the season yesterday afternoon on South Field, in a half hour's battle with the strong New York University eleven. It was the first scrimmage against another college, and whereas the work-out lacked many of the features of a regular game, the Blue and White coaches were able to correct many of the faults that had gone unnoticed.

Head Coach Nelson Metcalf was greatly pleased with the showing, and especially the noticeable improvement in the defense. At the start of the game Columbia's offense showed signs of the continual development of the last three weeks, and a series of line bucks netted the Blue and White good gains. The Violet team seemed surprised and it required fifteen minutes of hard playing before Coach Reilley's men found their stride. They then started a march on Columbia's goal line, and helped by two tackle-around tackle runs by Oscar Williams, the negro left tackle on the Violet team, they crossed their opponents' goal. A few minutes later Williams grabbed the ball from Mansbach, who was attempting a forward pass, and ran seventy-five yards for another score. Downs and distances were allowed each team without restriction, so that the drill was more in the nature of a scrimmage practice than a regular game.

At the end of the half-hour's scrimmage, Coach Reilley put in his entire scrub team and a twenty-minute battle followed. Then the Columbia freshmen were lined up. Raimondo, left half back for the cubs, was the only one to cross the Violet's goal line, at the end of a twenty-five yard run around left end.

Captain Simonds of Columbia may not play in the first game of the season Saturday, with St. Lawrence University. His illness for the past week with blood poisoning has left him in a weakened condition, and yesterday Coach Metcalf refused to let him don the moleskins. Donoho or Wadleton will probably be at left half back Saturday, and Mansbach will do the punting. Healey will be Acting Captain. Miller, the 'Varsity quarter back, was not allowed in the scrimmage yesterday, because of a slight injury. Stover took his place, but in making a tackle he injured his shoulder, and had to leave the field. Mansbach was switched from right half to quarter back.

Two-Hour Scrimmage for Fordham.

With its players refreshed by a two-days' rest, Fordham held a hard two-hour scrimmage with the Prep yesterday in preparation for the big game with Holy Cross at Fordham Field next Saturday. Coach Vaughn was on hand and was forced to direct operations from the side-lines. Last Sunday he was operated on for an infection on the left foot and it was all he could do yesterday to get out to the practice with the aid of a cane.

Most of the time was consumed in defensive drilling, the Prep keeping the ball all but the last ten minutes. Fordham's chief worries for the Holy Cross tussle lie in the fact that the Massachusetts line averages almost twenty pounds more than the Maroons. For this reason Vaughn yesterday used every trick he learned at Yale in getting the linesmen into shape. As he could not demonstrate them himself, Captain Dunn and Assistant Coach Cusack did the actual work in showing the players their weaknesses. Benson was in the right guard position in place of Kane, who sprained his wrist last Saturday. Another change yesterday was the appearance of Golden in Alexander Yule's position at full back. Golden started in the Union game, but since then, has been unable to get out, because of the hard scholastic prevailing at the Fordham Medical School. Later in the afternoon the 'Varsity took the ball and tore the Prep to pieces, scoring a turndown and a field goal. At a meeting of the Football Committee, Athletic Director Lush decided that Bud Wemand was acting as a coach. Instead of coaching last year's Captain only appeared in uniform Monday, and kept to himself trying some field goals.

Ballin Joins Lafayette Coaches.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 19.—Harold Ballin, the new line coach of the Lafayette team, reported this afternoon and took charge of the forwards. The practice was light in preparation for the game with Delaware State, which will be played tomorrow. The drill was called off early because of the inauguration ceremonies which are in progress at Lafayette.

TIGER COACH TRIES MOORE AT LEFT END

Rush Experiments with Speedy Player, but He May Not Keep Him There.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 19.—Bill Moore, probably the fastest man on the Tiger football squad, took part in the scrimmage today for the first time in more than two weeks. His appearance caused surprise, for when he took his place in the line-up he was in Highley's position at left end. Through the whole time that the 'Varsity remained on the field Moore appeared in that place, and was keenly watched by the coaches as well as the spectators. Moore's playing was not that of a finished end and his trial on the wing was only an experiment on the part of the coaches. Should he develop into a serviceable end it would help the team immensely. Used with Brown he would provide the eleven with one fast and one heavy end, both fierce tacklers. Used with Highley they would make about the fastest pair of ends that has been seen here for some years. It would reduce the number of back-field candidates, but as the squad now stands back-field men are plentiful.

The work-out today was longer and stiffer than yesterday's. The regulars were kept working against the scrubs until the moon came up, and then after the 'Varsity had been excused and with the field almost pitch dark, the second team was lined up against the scrubs for half an hour. Altogether there was almost two hours of scrimmage.

The offensive play was the centre of most of the attention of the coaches. The 'Varsity worked the ball against the scrubs without regard to downs, and the coaches devoted the time to perfecting the plays. During secret practice interference was the point featured. Practically no new plays are being introduced, but the 'Varsity is being drilled in the old ones.

Forward passing was slightly more in evidence today, with the results hardly satisfactory. Shea scored on one long pass, and three more were completed nicely, but there were many intercepted by the scrubs. The defense in this regard was weakened and the scrubs scored twice by that method.

The line has been improving in regard to the offensive play, and its showing today was somewhat better than yesterday. Nourse was in the latter part of the workout and seemed to add strength, but the coaches are still somewhat dissatisfied with the showing of the forwards. Jim Cooney had them out for a long drill before practice was really started, and the process will probably be continued throughout the week.

Tomorrow the Tiger squad will probably move down to the stadium for the latter part of their practice. This will be the first appearance of the 'Varsity on the new field since the Georgetown game, when it was demonstrated that the sod was in no condition for playing. Strenuous efforts have been made to get the field into shape for the big games of the season, but the ground keepers need still more time for the removal of the grubworm evil. The Dartmouth game will take place in the stadium, but it is uncertain whether the Williams game, the week following, will be played there.

Lehigh Developing New Plays.

Special to The New York Times.

RECORD CAR FOR SPEEDWAY.

Burman, in Blitzen Benz, Will Try for New World's Marks.

New Yorkers may see 120 miles an hour made on the Sheepshead Bay Speedway this Fall. Harry S. Harkness has bought the famous Blitzen Benz racer, the holder of all the world's short distance records. "Wild Bob" Burman, its pilot in its record feats on the Florida beach, will drive it on election day as an added speed feature to the 100-mile invitation race. The "speed king" will attempt to set up on New York's two-mile track new world's records for a circular course.

Burman is confident that he can show New Yorkers at least two miles a minute that day, basing his confidence on the performances of the car at Ormond Beach on April 23, 1911, when he drove a kilometer in 15 4-5 seconds, a mile in 25 2-5 seconds, and two miles in 51 1-5 seconds, all world's records, and much faster than 120 miles an hour.

President Harkness bought the famous flyer from S. A. Fletcher of Indianapolis. It will at once be tuned up and put into practice by Burman. With the Blitzen Benz once more in racing shape, Burman thinks that it will be easy to wipe off the slate the present two-mile speedway record of 1:04:40, an average of 111.8 miles per hour, made by Barney Oldfield in the Christie at Chicago, and does not regard a 125-mile-per-hour performance that day by any means an improbability.

Five of the six speedway champions who will compete in the 100-mile race on election day for the Harkness Gold Cup are now assured of their mounts being in running shape. They are Dario Resta, Ralph Mulford, John Aitken, and Bob Burman, who will pilot Peugeots, and Eddie Rickenbacker, who will be at the wheel of a Maxwell. Efforts are being made to secure a worthy racer for Earl Cooper. It is feared that Ralph De Palma will not be able to get his Mercedes in shape for the race.

After the election day race Harry S. Harkness, Anderton T. Herd, and Fred J. Wagner will meet Blaine H. Miller at New Orleans to settle the preliminaries of a speedway for the Crescent City, in which they are financially interested.

CHANGES IN ARMY TEAM.

Neyland Displaced at Quarter Back, Oliphant in Backfield.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 19.—The first real work since the Colgate game was engaged in by the Army eleven this afternoon. Drills and recitations interfered with the early start planned, and as it was dusk when the men were able to report all hands were ordered to the Riding Hall, where the Cadets went through their rough work on the tan bark and under electric lights. The poor work of the Army against Colgate has not disheartened followers of the team or the coaches, although it is acknowledged that such a showing is very discouraging. Important changes in the makeup of the team are predicted for the practices this week, and already the coaches have made several shifts.

The chief shake-up today moved Oliphant back behind the line, where he played at half back, and sent Bob Neyland to the end in Oliphant's place. Neyland's work at quarter-back has been so poor of late that it is likely the latest change will hold good for some time, if not permanently. It is expected to benefit the team all around. Neyland's place at quarter-back has gone to Murrill, the "plebe" youngster who is showing up strongly in the position. Ford, Mitchell, and Coffin will work with Oliphant behind the line, and constitute the first string of back-field men. The drill today featured a short scrimmage, but the men slowed up considerably because of the heavy going on the tan bark.

Captain Ernest Graves, who has coached Army linemen for many years, reported for duty yesterday, and has begun work on the forward wall. His arrival increases the Army's coaching staff to ten mentors. With Georgetown coming next Saturday the prospects for an Army victory in the near future are not very encouraging.

WOMEN PLAY GOLF AT FOX HILLS

WOMEN CARRY OFF WRONG GOLF PRIZES

As a Result Mrs. J. Mager of Deal, Chief Winner at Fox Hills, Did Not Get Hers.

Mrs. J. Mager of Deal Country Club won over the eighteen-hole medal play handicap in the women's invitation golf tournament at Fox Hills yesterday with a card of 09—12, 87. In spite of the lateness of the season there were sixty-four entrants in this event, and the play was both close and exciting. R. R. Mamlok, the Fox Hill golfer, displayed great ingenuity as the director of the tournament in deciding the winners when the cards resulted in a tie, but he was stumped when it came to distribute the prizes. He discovered that the women had helped themselves, and there were several tangles to straighten out. As a result of the mix-up, Mrs. Mager went away without her prize, but she will receive it in a few days.

Mrs. A. L. Cahn, of the Century Country Club won the women's record prize with a low gross score of 95. This would also have taken the low gross score prize, but under the rules of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, a player is eligible for only one prize in a tournament of this kind. This left three players tied for the low gross score with 97 each, Mrs. H. R. Stockton of the Plainfield Country Club, Mrs. A. S. Rossin, Century Country Club, and Mrs. ... Wimpfheimer, Century Country Club. Mamlok decided this by giving Mrs. Wimpfheimer the third net prize with a card of 97—5, 92, and then gave the low gross prize to Mrs. Stockton because she was the only 9 down to bogey against Mrs. Rossin's 10 down.

In the contest against bogey there was another tie between Mrs. S. Weil, Fairview Country Club, and Mrs. H. Blumenthal, Fairview Country Club, each player being 9 down to bogey. Mamlok tossed a coin to decide the winner, and Mrs. Weil was the lucky player.

The nine-hole foursomes in the afternoon resulted in still another tie, H. L. Wyatt of Fox Hills, paired with Miss M. Wolf of Norwood Country Club, turned in a card of 44—5, 39, and his club-mate, A. M. Richardson, playing with Miss A. Allaire, also of Fox Hills, had a card of 51—12, 39. Mamlok again came to the rescue of the puzzled committee and gave a prize to each woman and left the men out of it.

Early in the day, Mrs. A. McDonald turned in a card of 108—15, 93, and looked like a probable winner until Mrs. Mager, the last player to finish, beat her by a stroke. Mrs. W. J. Faith of Wykagyl, who was expected to finish well up, played poorly and did not turn her card in, and many other lesser luminaries did the same. The summary:

Handicap Medal Play.—Mrs. J. Mager, Deal Country Club, 99, 12—87; Mrs. A. McDonald, Plainfield Country Club, 108, 15—88; Mrs. L. Wimpfheimer, Century Country Club, 97, 5—92; Mrs. W. T. White Outpoints Harvey.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Charley White of Chicago got the decision over Johnny Harvey of New York in a twelve-round bout tonight. The men are lightweights. Harvey, who was nine pounds overweight, kept on even terms with his opponent for nine rounds, but White piled up the points in the last three.

CHICAGO CUBS SOLD?

Rumor Has It That McGraw Aacted as Agent for Purchasers.

It was reported from Chicago last night that Charles P. Taft, principal stockholder in the Chicago National League baseball club, had disposed of his holdings, and that John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, had acted as agent for the purchasers. For his share in the deal McGraw is to receive 5 per cent. There was no intimation in the rumor as to the purchasers or as to the amount of money they paid for the club. According to the Chicago report, the deal was put through in Cincinnati. McGraw could not be located last night to deny or affirm the report.

DE ORO'S LEAD REDUCED.

Slosson Wins Second Block in Three-Cushion Billiards.

George Slosson, the veteran balk line billiard player, displayed improved form last night at Doyle's Academy, in the second 50-point block of his 250-point three-cushion match with Alfred De Oro, and finished the session with the two nights' count 100 to 96 against him. The score for the second block, was Slosson, 53; De Oro, 50. The New York man had a big lead in the early stages of the match, which lasted 75 innings, but he became over-anxious in the closing periods, and disregarding safety play, enabled D eOro to almost overtake him. The Cuban, a master of safety play, left no openings for Slosson after the first twenty-five innings, while he himself left the ivories in impossible positions for his opponent.

Slosson made the big run of the game in the twenty-seventh inning, when he tallied ten points. To make this run the veteran had to accomplish two six-cushion shots, which he executed in such a masterly fashion that the big gathering of spectators gave him long rounds of applause. At this point Slosson led by the big score of 82 to 18. This margin really worked to the New Yorker's detriment. He took too many chances, and repeatedly left easy shots for his rival when he could have played safe.

Slosson lost a point for making two successive safeties in the seventieth and seventy-first innings. The rule covering this point, adopted before the last championship tournament in Chicago, states that a point is gained by a player when his opponent makes two successive safeties, but Slosson objected to this rule and De Oro was satisfied to let the counter declared from Slosson's total. In the last twenty innings Slosson made only four points.

The match will continue tonight, tomorrow and Friday evenings.

Other Winners with the Cue.

One of the closest and most interesting games that has been contested in the amateur handicap three-cushion carom billiard tournament at the Audubon Academy was witnessed last night when A. Bennett, with the aid of a handicap of three points, defeated L. Friede by the score of 34 to 34. Bennett was playing for 34 points while his opponent had to score 37 to win. Bennett completed his score in seventy-seven innings, and had high runs of 4 points twice and one of 3.

George T. Moon, Jr., defeated Claude R. Lewis last night in the amateur handicap 18.2 balkline tournament at the Knickerbocker Academy in Brooklyn, after conceding the latter a handicap of 15 points, by the score of 200 to 162 in forty-nine innings. Moon, playing for 200 points, had high runs of 30, 24, and 22, with an average of 4 4-49. Lewis was handicapped at 185 points, and made high runs of 23 and 12 points twice, with an average of 3 18-48.

In last night's game of the amateur handicap three-cushion carom tournament at the Morningside Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, Julius Forstein, playing for 37 points, defeated M. Elsoffer, who had a handicap of two points, by the score of 17 to 6 in thirty-five innings. The winner made 3 high runs of 3.

In the three-cushion billiard tournament at the Audubon Academy last night C. Garfinkle, playing 37, defeated Dr. H. Stern, playing 33, by a score of 37 to 29 in a game that went to eighty-eight innings. Garfinkle made a high run of 3

Van Cortlandt Greens Closed.

The hundreds of golfers who play daily over the Van Cortlandt course will be forced to use temporary greens for a few days while the regular greens are being treated with soap and water to get rid of the worms that have spoiled the putting for the last month. Many complaints were received by the Park Department with regard to the poor condition of the greens, but the course is so crowded at all hours of the day that it was found impossible to make any headway without closing the greens entirely. Greenkeeper Hannegin went over the course yesterday and placed the cups in the usual position of the "Winter greens," and from the gasoline pump was put to work flooding the first putting green with the mixture. Nothing but pure soap is used in the water, and the green is soaked until the worms come to the surface, when they are raked up and thrown away in pails. The golfers are also complaining about the long grass on the fairway and the lack of competent men to keep the course in condition. Due to lack of funds, the regular laborers are being worked on half-time allowance, and the course is suffering accordingly.

Schoolboys' Golf on Saturday.

Goulding in Seven-Mile Walk.

The seven-mile national walking championship of the Amateur Athletic Union appears destined to take a trip across the Canadian border, for George Goulding, the greatest walker in the past decade, has entered the event, which will be contested under the auspices of the Johnson and Johnson A. A. on the Rutgers College athletic field, New Brunswick, N. J., next Saturday. Goulding, who will represent the Toronto Central Walkers' Club, will bring with him his clubmate, E. C. Freeman, who finished second to the Olympic champion in a two-mile race at Toronto a month ago, in which Goulding was reported to have been disqualified.

Baltusrol Women Play Golf.

The qualifying round in the club championship for women was played yesterday at the Baltusrol Golf Club, and Mrs. J. C. S. Fraser, holder of the woman's record for the course, led the field with a card of 96. The other seven players who qualified for the match play were Mrs. E. P. Nash, 105; Mrs. Fred Bruyn, 116; Mrs. Marshall Gear, 119; Miss Violet Miller, 128; Mrs. J. A. Philbrick, 129; Mrs. B. Beresford, 131, and Mrs. Sidney S. Browne, 133. In a practice round Max Marston equaled the record of 71 for the course, made by "Chick" Evans in the open championship last Spring.

The Wykagyl Country Club will hold the official opening of their new $100,000 club house this evening. Plans are now on foot to hold several of the coming championship events in next year's golfing circles at Wykagyl, as the elaborate quarters and the recent improvement in the club grounds will make this course one of the most ideal in the country.

Famous Horse Show Trophy Lost.

A cable from Lord Decies, received yesterday by James T. Hyde, Secretary of the National Horse Show Association, stated that all efforts to locate the whereabouts of the Canadian Challenge Cup, won at the Madison Square Garden horse show in 1913 by the French Government's Amazone, ridden by Lieut. Baron de Meslon, have proven barren of results. The trophy was presented by Sir Adam Beck of Canada as a prize in a jumping contest open to officers only and was first competed for at the show of 1910. The winner was the mount of Lieut. C. J. Walwyn of England. In 1911 Canada gained possession of the cup through the success of Lieut. W. B. Sifton, and in 1912 the winner was Capt. Mervin Crawshay of the Fifth Dragoon Guards, England. The conditions required two wins to gain the full ownership.

WARD'S DEATH HARD BLOW TO FEDERALS

May Affect New York Invasion and Continuation of the Colonial League.

The death of Robert B. Ward removes from the Federal League one of its staunch supporters. He was ever an active force in promoting the welfare of the league, and on several occasions came forward with loans of money to tide over the difficulties of clubs less firmly financially intrenched than his own. In view of the position which he held, his death naturally entails consideration of what effect his loss will have on the future of the league. It is probable that the responsibility that was his will be taken over by his brother, George S. Ward, who, while not so active as Robert B. Ward, was nevertheless an equal owner with him in the Brooklyn Federal League Club. They were partners in all of their business transactions.

Robert B. Ward's first talk of going into baseball was in February, 1914, when he was in Toronto on business. At that time the Federal League was thinking of establishing a club in that city, and James A. Gilmore, the President of the league, was there to arrange the details. A mutual friend introduced the two men, and the talk turned to a discussion of the Federal League. Mr. Ward was impressed with the idea of establishing a club in Brooklyn, and, with Gilmore, came to this city to discuss the plan with his brother, George S. Ward. The latter, however, was in Boston, and came here in response to a telephone message, but was entirely ignorant of the reason for his being summoned. There were a number of prominent Federal League men at the Knickerbocker, and when George S. Ward came into the room he grasped the situation instantly, and remarked, "We are going into baseball." This showed a harmony of action that makes it seem unlikely that George S. Ward would now withdraw his interests from the league.

For one thing, the plant in Brooklyn, probably the most valuable of the Federal League, would be almost a complete loss, and George S. Ward reflects the optimism of his brother in believing that a third major league may be made a paying business proposition. His son, Walter Ward, has also been interested in baseball, being officially connected with the Colonial League. This was a league organized and controlled by the Wards, and it is possible that this may be eliminated in the readjustment following the death of Mr. Ward.

The Federal League about the middle of the past Summer announced that next season it would have a club on Manhattan Island. Whether Mr. Ward was to be the owner of this or not, his death may prove to be a damper on such an invasion, as some of the heavy money backing of the league, no matter what may be the interest of George S. Ward, has been lost.

It is likely that some time in the near future a meeting of the Federal League will be held in this city to discuss the situation caused by the death of Mr. Ward.

All of the club owners of the Federal League will attend the funeral of Mr. Ward, which will be held from his country estate, Homewood, at New Rochelle, tomorrow afternoon.

James A. Gilmore, President of the Federal League, in speaking of the death of Mr. Ward, said yesterday:

The death of Mr. Robert B. Ward removes from the business world one of its greatest assets and deprives baseball of a club owner who stood for all that was fair and clean. Mr. Ward was a shining example of true American sportsmanship who has interested baseball because of his love for the game, and his ambition was to elevate the standard of the national sport.

Mr. Ward possessed one of the most lovable of characters and won admiration by his fair play, from which he never deviated.

The Federal League has lost one of its staunchest supporters, but the future plans and policies of the organization have been so completely formulated during his lifetime that they will be carried to completion in full. The entire league mourns his loss and extends heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

Red Sox Profits Not Large.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—The Red Sox season of 1915 has been a financial success, but the profits were not large. President J. J. Lannin said today that the receipts this year would be sufficient to cover expenses for the season, wipe out the deficit of 1914 and yet have a nice left on the right side of the ledger. Until the start of the last series with Detroit here things looked dull from the financial standpoint. Until then the balance was on the wrong side of the ledger. But the big attendances of that series—about 114,000 fans paid to see those four games between the Sox and the Tigers—tacked onto the big attendance at the two world's series games played here, brought in just enough money to put the team on velvet.

Harvard Wants Matty as Coach.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Graduate Manager Moore of the Harvard Athletic Association said today: "Harvard is trying to get Mathewson to coach baseball. There will be nothing definite about the position for some time to come." If Mathewson is engaged as Harvard's baseball coach it will be his second attempt. About five years ago Matty coached the Harvard pitchers and had great success.

PARKSIDE TENNIS TITLES.

Wilson Wins Singles and Wild and Johnson Capture the Doubles.

With the victory of W. B. Wild and Mortimer N. Johnson in the final round of the men's doubles the fourth annual tournament of the Parkside Tennis Club of Flatbush was concluded. Wild and Johnson played consistent tennis throughout the tournament, and in the final round defeated S. D. France and W. N. McLean in straight sets at 6—2, 6—4.

Robert Wilson won the club championship in singles by defeating J. Ogden Holly in an interesting match which furnished the best tennis of the tournament. Holly started off at a whirlwind pace and won the first set in a decisive manner, not allowing his opponent a game, but Wilson steadied himself in the second and third sets and, by clever placements and a superior brand of tennis, succeeded in winning the title. The score was 0—6, 6—1, 6—3.

A prize has been offered for the consolation singles, which will be decided this week.

Dunwoodie Mixed Doubles Final.

This was between O'Connor and Heath, which was won by the former by the score of 4—6, 8—6, 11—9. It was not until the last ball of the fifty-fourth game was played that a winner was determined. The scores:

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts for week, 70,131 packages; last week, 65,067 packages. Exports for week to Europe, 13,000 packages; to other countries, 615 packages. After a few days of light trading and some weakness in leading grades of creamery the market has steadied and closed firmer, though as yet there has been no recovery in values. The export demand has fallen off somewhat, but there has been enough increase in local buying to offset this and check the downward tendency. The leading grades of creamery are now firm and there is a moderate offering of the medium and lower grades of fresh stock. There has been a fair amount of business in renovated, and values on all grades are steady. Ladles have been more difficult to move, and packing stock is slightly easier in sympathy. Creamery, extras, (92 score,) 28½c; higher scoring, 29@29½c; firsts, 26½@28c; seconds, 24@26c; thirds, 23@25½c; State dairy, finest, 27½@28c; good to prime, 26@27c; common to fair, 23@25½c; renovated, extras, 24½@25c; firsts, 23½@24c; lower grades, 21½@23c; imitation creamery, firsts, 23@24c; factory, current make, firsts, 22½@23½c; seconds, 21@22½c; lower grades, 19½@20½c; packing stock, June make, fine, 21c; current make, fine, 21c; No. 2, 20@20½c; lower grades, 17@19½c.

EGGS.—Receipts for week 65,397 cases. The market for fresh gathered eggs showed considerable weakness and prices were shaded even on the better grades in the effort to move more stock. Toward the close of the week high qualities became pretty well cleared, and since then there has been a recovery on these; the market closed firm for high firsts and higher grades. There is still a liberal supply of average good and lower qualities pressing for sale at extremely irregular prices in competition with storage eggs; a large part of the fresh gathered stock arriving is freely offered in range of 24@30, with some poorer lots ranging downward. Storage eggs have been quieter, but are generally held steadily; exports have fallen off, although late advices are a little more favorable. Nearby eggs are very scarce, and fancy new-laid qualities are wanted beyond the supply. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 35@36c; extra firsts, 32@34c; firsts, 28@31c; seconds, 24@27c; thirds and poorer, 20@22c; dirties, No. 1, 21@22c; No. 2 and poorer, 18@20½c; checks, good to choice, 17c, 20@20½c; culls and inferior, 15@16c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, 26c; firsts, 24½@25½c; seconds, 23@24c; thirds or poorer, 19@22½c; State, Penn., and nearby, heavy whites, fine to fancy, 31@32c; ordinary to good, 35@36c; gathered whites, as to size and quality, 35@36c; Western, gathered whites, 32@36c; State, Penn., and nearby, hennery browns, 36@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 29@30c; nearby, refrigerator whites, 27@30c.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks yesterday were again very active, and, until the last hour of trading, very strong. Transactions passed the million share mark after several days of smaller volume. So rapid was the advance in many issues in the early part of the day that the reactionary tendency which followed was welcomed by more conservative traders, who do not believe that the market can keep on at its present pace without getting into a position where it will be susceptible to a very slight shock. The advance carried many issues to new high records, and although the list closed irregular, owing to the quick disappearance of gains when the reaction took place, many stocks retained a good part of their advance.

Yesterday's session was distinctly a steel market, with all the old-time enthusiasm over the possibility of an early resumption of the dividend and record-breaking earnings figures. More than 200,000 shares of Steel, or one-fifth of the day's total, changed hands yesterday, mostly on a rising scale. The price was carried up to 87¾, making a new high record for five years, but realizing sales brought out by the big advance wiped out all but one-eighth of the day's gain, and the issue closed at 85%. Republic Iron and Steel, though naturally much less active, shared in the strength of the major steel issue, advancing at one time to 56½. A number of specialties, prominent among which were Industrial Alcohol and Distillers' Securities, sold at higher prices than ever before on prospects of a prolongation of the war and war business by the new developments in the Balkans.

A helpful sign in yesterday's activities was an increased demand for good bonds. The new Anglo-French five-year 5s sold at 97⅞ and 98. It is apparent that the syndicate managers are not availing themselves of their right under the underwriting agreement to support the market for this issue while the distribution is taking place. Banks report a very satisfactory demand for the new bonds.

There is no indication yet that the market will be checked by an increase in the cost of call money. Money is still so plentiful as to be embarrassing to the banks paying interest on deposits. Some of the interior banks which have the right to retain the amount of their subscription to the new foreign loan in their own vaults, paying interest therefor at the rate of 2 per cent., have transferred funds on deposit with New York banks to the credit of J. P. Morgan & Co., rather than pay interest on money for which they have no use. The $25,000,000 of gold which arrived yesterday will be followed within a week by another large shipment. Business appears to be making rapid strides toward recovery, but commercial loans are not yet much of a factor in the money market.

COTTON OPENS EASY, BUT CLOSES FIRM

Range of Prices Is Narrow and the Net Advance for the Day Is 6 to 8 Points.

SPINNERS BUYING IN SOUTH

Traders Looking for Census Report on Ginning as a Guide for Their Market Operations.

Although cotton was lacking in tendency yesterday, the undertone of the market was steady. The early trading was characterized by a period of easiness, but firmness developed toward the close, and final prices were around the high level of the day. The range, however, was narrow and limited to extremes of about 12 points. The close represented a net gain of 6 to 8 points.

The local trade is beginning to pay some attention to the forthcoming census report on the amount of cotton ginned prior to Oct. 18. This is the first important ginning report of the season and is instrumental in shaping the ideas of the trade as to the size of the crop. On account of the reduced acreage this season, together with the indicated shortness of supply, there has been ample labor to rush picking at top speed. In the opinion of many good judges the percentage of the crop that was picked as of date Oct. 18 will be close to 60 per cent., notwithstanding the previous high percentage was about 55 per cent. in 1909.

Further scattered rains were reported in the Central Belt with somewhat more settled conditions in the West.

Demand from spinners is increasing, and several Southern shippers wired yesterday that New England and New York State mills were paying the highest prices of the season.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, 10 points higher. The local market for spot cotton was quiet, 15 points advance, 12.65 for middling. Sales, 50 bales.

The Liverpool market opened quiet. There was a fair business in spot cotton, with middling 4 points decline, at 7.25d. Sales, 10,000 bales; receipts, 42,000 bales; American, 35,000. Market closed steady.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

United States Steel dominated the market on the Consolidated Exchange throughout the day. It displayed tenacious strength early in the face of profit taking in volume, but later in the day there was a sharp setback, and in sympathy with its reaction prices softened throughout the list. Earlier there had been a firm tone shown, with here and there special sharp advances.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

Political Controversy Has Little Effect on Trading.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—Cheap money today further eased discount rates and increased the sale of Treasury bills at the Bank of England.

The political controversy had little effect on the stock market, which maintained a cheerful tone. The war loan was a particularly active feature, and advanced, due partly to the plethora of money. Short term Japanese bonds were in good request, and Mexican rails were active at an average advance of half a point. Copper stocks recovered.

American securities were firm in sympathy with Wall Street. Canadian Pacific and United States Steel were prominently active, but most of the other issues shared in the improvement.

SUGGESTS NEW SUGAR TAX.

Expert Says One-Cent Consumption Levy Would Raise $84,000,000.

Frank C. Lowry, manager of the Federal Sugar Refining Company's sales department, has sent a letter to President Wilson suggesting that the Administration levy a consumption tax on sugar instead of extending the free sugar clause of the Tariff act, scheduled to go into effect May 1, 1916. A one-cent tax, he states, would bring in a revenue of about $84,000,000 a year with no increase in price to the consumer. Consumption in 1914 aggregated 3,790,915 tons, and it is estimated in the letter that 1915 will show about the same total.

"Because of the duty," Mr. Lowry says in the letter, "the consumer will pay about $22.40 per ton or $84,000,000 more than would be the cost under 'free sugar.' Of this amount, the United States Government will collect in duty approximately $46,000,000, less about $8,000,000, which will be refunded in drawbacks on sugar exported. Because of the enhanced value of their product as a result of the duty, the producers within our borders will divide as an indirect subsidy the balance of approximately $38,000,000, the domestic beet producers getting the largest amount, or about $13,984,275.

"Adopting the 1914 figures for 1915, we find that a revenue tax of ½c per pound on all sugars consumed would produce $42,000,000 and would increase the price to the consumer by ½c per pound instead of 1c, as is now the case. This annual saving of ½c per pound to our people would be equal to $42,000,000.

"A revenue tax of 1c per pound, the equivalent of the present rate, would raise $84,000,000 revenue as compared with $46,000,000 under the present tariff. In other words, this tax provides that the Government shall receive the entire amount paid by the people because of the tax, instead of its being shared with the domestic producer, as is now the case."

ITALIAN NOTES RENEWABLE.

$25,000,000 Loan May Be Converted Into Ten-Year 5½% Bonds.

The $25,000,000 one-year 6 per cent. notes of the Italian Government will be offered by Lee, Higginson & Co. and a syndicate being formed at par and interest, probably before the end of the week. Buyers will have the privilege of converting the notes into another one-year 6 per cent. issue at the end of the year, and at the end of the second year the notes can be converted into a ten-year 5½ per cent. Italian Government bond. The banking firm stated yesterday that many inquiries had been received for large amounts of the issue.

Little if any of the proceeds will be used to buy munitions of war. Italy imported from this country $67,000,000 worth of wheat and $47,000,000 worth of cotton last year, and it is believed that the loan will be used largely in purchases of these commodities. The loan is of the same nature as the great Anglo-French borrowing in that it is a direct obligation of Italy, without security in the shape of collateral.

Trading Quiet on the Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Oct. 19.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 66 francs, 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs, 54 centimes.

Sugar Stocks IN War Times

France which usually supplies its own needs is now importing American sugar.

Cuba second alone to Germany in sugar production is now particularly benefited by the increased demand due to the war.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers bought from the controlling interests in Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., 30,000 shares of the company's stock and it has been resold.

H. Parker Willis, Secretary of the Federal Reserve Board, will speak tonight on the subject, "Some Neglected Features of the Federal Reserve Act," before the forum section of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking at the Institute's rooms, 138 East Twenty-third Street.

The Commonwealth Power, Railway and Light Company reports net profits of $178,312 in September, a gain of 23.23 per cent. over the same month last year.

H. R. Bond, Secretary of the New London Ship and Engine Company, and Frank D. Potter of Pouch & Co., have been elected Directors of the General Ordnance Company, a corporation with $1,000,000 capital, organized four months ago to manufacture arms.

The protective committee for the first mortgage 4 per cent. gold bonds of the Central Branch Railway, a part of the Missouri Pacific System, of which Charles A. Peabody is Chairman, is asking for deposits of bonds with the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. The latest reports show that the Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Travelers Insurance Company, both of which are represented on the Peabody Committee, together own $400,000 of the bonds.

General Baking Co. Preferred
The General Baking Co. is a consolidation of twenty different concerns engaged in making bread and other baking products, with combined output of about $9,000,000.
Following consolidation, the cumulative preferred stock sold at $87 per share, when 7% was paid. Since Dec. 31, 1913, 4% per annum has been paid. On Oct. 1, 1915, accumulated dividends due preferred stockholders amounted to 12½%.
The Company's net profits for 1914 were sufficient to pay full 7% on the preferred, leaving a balance on the common, while at the close of the year would have enabled the Company to pay off all accumulated dividends on the preferred and leave about 8% for the common. This showing resulted after liberal allowance for depreciation of plants, additions, betterments, etc. In October, 1914, the preferred stock sold at $38 per share, since which time the price has steadily improved.
An unprecedented wheat yield has reduced the cost of flour, and the Company's earnings are showing material increases. It is not unreasonable to anticipate provision for the payment of 12½% accrued on the preferred stock, and a resumption of the full 7% dividend. Since 1912, 4% has been paid semi-annually on the preferred.
Price $58 per Share. Yielding 7%

WHAT OF THE FUTURE?
Many people are already asking "When will the bull market culminate?" Our organization has been making a careful study of underlying influences in recent weeks with a view to throwing light on this problem. This week's BAROMETER OF BUSINESS CONDITIONS gives a direct forecast of what is probably in store for us during 1916 and after the close of the war.
Everybody interested in either industrial or railroad stocks should read this forecast. A few copies only are available.

AUTO STOCKS
No class of securities have risen so much in value as the stocks of the automobile companies. The extraordinary demand for machines from Europe, in addition to the wider sale of cheap cars in this country, is partially responsible for this remarkable appreciation in value. But what is ahead? Here is a question which must be solved. Can these stocks maintain their present high altitude? There is an article on this interesting problem in the current issue.

Will Handle Passaic Prints.

From today on the production of the Passaic Print Works, Passaic, N. J., which was formerly sold through Edward E. Poor & Co., agents for Frederick Victor & Achelis, will be handled solely by the T. Holt Haywood department of the latter firm. Among the lines that will be continued are Stratford cretonne, National drapery, San Toy robes, Orion robes, Clarion robes, Central Park shirting, Passaic 36-inch challie, Lodi shirting, Peabody grays, Cynthia stripes, and Elrene crêpe.

Lighter Colors for Spring.

The vogue for Norfolk models that is coming in for next Spring in men's wear is having its effect on colors. A decided tendency is noted toward the use of lighter shades and snappier designs. This will be quite a change from the color style that has reigned so long. Except in the country districts, the manufacturers have found it almost impossible to sell anything but ultra conservative models for some time. The trend this Fall has been strongly in the direction of very dark shades and cloth patterns that are scarcely discernible.

Suit Business Improving.

While there is a very optimistic tone to the clothing market, several factors believe that the situation must become a little bit better before it can be safely stated that conditions are normal. Instances are cited of clothiers who have taken large uniform orders and who would very much prefer to devote their energies to domestic trade if it was forthcoming. There is little doubt that the scarcity and consequent demand for overcoats has rather overshadowed the dullness this Fall in the suit end. While the latter is improving and looks big for Spring, the manufacturers are not quite willing to talk prosperity until it is actually upon them...

Crude Rubber Easing Off.

The easier price tendency that has been a feature of the local crude rubber market for the last several days continues in force, up-river fine being quoted here yesterday for spot and near-by delivery at 57 cents. Both pale crêpe and smoked sheets were held at 61¼ cents, but it is said that prices all through the market could doubtless be shaded by a large buyer. Continued lack of buying activity on the part of the large manufacturing interests is said to be the reason for the present condition of the market. Still, there are few signs of selling pressure evident.

Hard Coal Trade in Good Shape.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that the anthracite trade is in that well-balanced condition of supply and demand which is observed only at brief intervals, usually two or three times in the course of a year. At some stage of the recovery from a depressed condition, or in the course of a recession from Winter activity, operators find that orders are coming in just about fast enough to take care of all the coal that can be produced. That point has now been reached on the upward swing, and in the natural course of events shippers will soon find themselves unable to keep pace with the rising flood of orders. With the demand increasing and producers unable to make a corresponding increase in supply, owing to a shortage of cars and labor, bituminous prices have a strong upward tendency.

As to Canned Goods Labels.

In its latest bulletin the National Canners' Association calls attention to a few points regarding the right way to label canned goods. It first reminds the members that the use of all labels bearing the serial number is prohibited after May 1 next. Another point to be remembered is that in making statement of weight of contents this should be done in type of such size and in such position on the label as to be plain and conspicuous. Where the food packed contains more than one label, as in the case of bottled goods, the statement of weight must appear plainly and conspicuously on the principal label. Goods purchased by a packer cannot go out under his own label unless actually packed by him, and, where he desires to have such goods go out under his label, it must appear that he is the distributor and not the packer of them.

Big Order for Black Waists.

A report that $2,000,000 worth of black waists are wanted for export to England was substantiated yesterday at the offices of the Bijou Waist Company, 536 Broadway, where it was stated that estimates were being drawn up on a line of cotton waists ranging from 79 cents to $1.50 each. The buying representative is now in Philadelphia. The money to cover payment will be deposited with a bank to be drawn against invoices as delivery is made. The firms that are successful in obtaining a share of the business will be given, it is said, three weeks in which to reach the maximum of their promised production, and the goods will be taken as fast as they can be turned out. It is limited to divide up the contract among six concerns. It is being negotiated by private interests, the English Government having no hand in it.

Gathering Store Information.

John T. Kirby and Laurence Gardner, who are traveling on lecture tours for the National Retail Dry Goods Association, are gathering some interesting information on various retail merchandise and store problems. One point brought out by the answers to questions submitted to the merchants in different cities is that between 40 and 60 per cent. of the help engaged during a year are either discharged or leave the stores. If these figures are substantiated by further inquiry, it is evident that the retailers find it very hard to increase the efficiency of their employes, as such a small percentage remains for any length of time. It has also been brought out that most store owners have found it unprofitable to keep open a half day on Saturdays in the Summer. The information obtained will be tabulated when the two association representatives return.

Gray Goods Show Little Change.

There was not a great deal of change in the local gray goods market yesterday. Buyers are apparently "fed up" for the time being, and are not prone to take goods unless something especially attractive is offered. As a result, trading is confined more or less to small and odd lots. One of the features of the market at the moment is the position of 38½-inch 64-56s, which are said to be very scarce because the mills making them are pretty well sold up. It was said that there were no printcloth sales yesterday worthy of special comment, nor did drills come in for any particular notice. A nice business was reported on 48 square, 4-yard sheetings, however, at 5¼ cents for delivery during this month and next. Some business was also reported on 4-yard, 56-60 sheetings at 6 cents. Staple printcloth prices follow:

Howard, $207, and Federal Printing Company, $106. It was alleged that the company permitted a judgment to be taken against it by the Motor Car Equipment Company for $148, on which the assets were sold on Aug. 24. The company was incorporated in December, 1914, with capital stock $10,000, and had a branch in Philadelphia.

The business was started in 1900.

HARRY KLEINMAN, shoe dealer at 57 Second Avenue, has made an assignment to Archibald Silverman. A petition in bankruptcy was also filed against him by these creditors: Parker, Holmes & Co., $50; Powell Shoe Company, $173, and Marshall N. Thayer, $335. Liabilities are $4,000 and assets $2,000. He was formerly Treasurer of the Cloak and Skirt Makers' Union from 1910 to 1914, and started the shoe business in December, 1914.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 19.—Bankruptcy proceedings brought against the Lyons Boiler Works, of Depere, Wis., are being contested in the United States District Court. The petition was filed by Walter D. Halk, who said he held promissory notes totaling $80,000. The Lyons concern sets up that, pursuant to an absence agreement, the notes were paid and that at the time of the filing of the petition the boiler works' liabilities were less than $5,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—E. Jackson Casse Co., architectural engineers and contractors; voluntary petition; liabilities, $200,846; assets, $164,701.

E. Jackson Casse, as an individual; voluntary petition; liabilities, $245,473; assets, $225,714. The failure of Mr. Casse and the corporation bearing his name is attributed to a great falling off in business after the commencement of the European war. The company was largely engaged in the building of bank structures and bank vaults. With the outbreak of the war the banks of the Middle West inaugurated a policy of retrenchment, and the business of the Casse Co. was greatly reduced. Mr. Casse, who was manager and stockholder, became involved personally because he indorsed much of the company's paper.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Where Some Importers Interposed Pleas Only for Delay.

Thomas Young, Inc., was sustained yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in the claim that cloth composed of silk and wool was in chief value of the latter material, and consequently properly dutiable at 35 per cent. ad valorem. The Collector was reversed in levying 45 per cent. duty as silk chief value.

Adverse action was taken on a protest by William H. Stiner & Co., relating to the classification under the tariff act of 1909 of imitation astrakan composed of colored fabrics of cotton and jute with an uncut pile. It was claimed to be dutiable at 45 per cent. ad valorem as a manufacture of cotton or as a manufacture of vegetable fiber. Judge Brown held that the merchandise was properly assessed at 47½ per cent. under the pile fabric provision.

The Collector was reversed in his assessment on woven figured cotton cloth. This was returned at 30 per cent. ad valorem as Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton, while Hedden & Martin, the importers, claimed duty at the appropriate rate as woven figured cotton cloth. The board ordered a reliquidation.

H. J. Baker & Brothers were upheld with regard to the rate of duty on bone precipitate. The Collector classified it as a chemical compound, and took duty at 15 per cent. ad valorem accordingly. It was shown at the trial that the chief use of the precipitate was as a fertilizer. The board ordered it admitted free of duty as such.

How some importers help to clog the official machinery of the board was illustrated in the case of the Tabb Transfer Line of Louisville. This concern protested the Collector's assessment of duty on certain paper imported under the tariff act of 1913, which was claimed free of duty under the provisions of the Canadian reciprocity act of 1911. The history of the case as set forth in Judge Hay's decision follows:

These protests were originally placed upon Board 3 calendar for May, 1914. On May 20th the cases were called for hearing, but there was no appearance on behalf of the importers. Upon application this default was set aside and the cases placed upon the Louisville calendar. On April 26, 1915, at the call of the calendar in Louisville, counsel for the importers requested the transfer of the cases to New York, with leave to file with the board an application to take deposition.

An order was entered granting the importers three weeks within which to make application to take deposition and transferring the cases to New York. No application was filed with the board, and the cases were again placed upon Board 3 calendar for September last. At the call of the calendar there was again no appearance on behalf of the importers. The cases now come before us for decision. An examination of the records before us discloses nothing that would warrant a disturbance of the Collector's action, which is presumptively correct. The protests are overruled.

Other protests long clogging the files and undefended were overruled as follows: A. C. Damon, J. W. Place & Co., Stern & Stern, Batjer & Co., F. S. Maynard & Co., and J. T. Steeb & Co.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

Samuel K. Jacobs Buys Midtown Loft Held at $900,000—Two Dwellings on Lexington Avenue Sold to an Investor—Another Private Dwelling Deal in Greenwich Village.

The feature of yesterday's realty market was the sale of the old Daniel B. Sickles house on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Ninth Street by the Bowery Savings Bank to William Lustgarten & Co. The property, which fronts 79 feet on the avenue and 100 feet on the street, will be improved with a twelve-story fireproof apartment house by the buyers on the expiration of the present leases in the Fall of 1916. The property has an assessed valuation of about $166,000.

$900,000 Sale in Midtown Loft Zone.

Another equally important transaction in the midtown loft zone was the sale of the new twelve-story commercial building at 8 to 14 West Thirtieth Street, adjoining the Holland House, on the southwest corner of Fifth Avenue.

The property has been bought by Samuel K. Jacobs, a prominent operator in the loft section, and who recently sold the northwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street.

The parcel just acquired has been held at $900,000 by the firm of Isaac A. Hopper, Inc., which erected the building and leased it to a realty corporation for ten years at a net rental of $54 000. It is subject to a mortgage of $650,000 at 5 per cent., and Mr. Jacobs also takes it subject to the lease.

The building covers the site of the old Hotel Burlington, fronting 100 feet on the street by 98.9 deep. The sellers bought it over a year ago from Otto H. Bahnsen and Max Warburg, as trustees, for about $450,000. The building was erected at an estimated cost of $375,000. I. Josephson represented the seller as attorney in the deal.

Investor Buys Two Lexington Avenue Dwellings.

Another Lexington Avenue deal in the eighties, where there has been considerable speculative activity of late, was reported yesterday by J. Irving Walsh, who sold for Ennis & Sinnott, operators, 1,229 and 1,231 Lexington Avenue, two three-story private dwellings, occupying a plot 32 by 62.3, between Eighty-third and Eighty-fourth Streets. The buyer is George M. Clarke, who will hold the property for investment.

Another Greenwich Village Dwelling Sale.

A client of Richard S. Elliott has purchased from the McManus estate, 55 West Ninth Street, a three-story dwelling on a lot 22.2 by 92.3, located between Fifth and Sixth Avenues.

The dwelling at 52 West Ninth Street was recently purchased by Mr. Elliott and resold last week to Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan. G. Reynolds Gibbons represented the McManus estate.

C. B. Squire Sells East Side Dwelling.

Charles B. Squire has sold to an investing client of the Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company, for occupancy, 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, a four-story brownstone dwelling, on a lot 25 by 100, located between Madison and Fifth Avenues.

Spring Street Deal.

Daniel H. Jackson of the D. H. Jackson Company has bought from H. A. Strauss, 148 Spring Street, near West Broadway, a five-story business building, with stores, on a plot of 20 by 100. Sussman & Gibbs were the brokers.

Harlem Flats in Demand by Investors.

Another uptown flat, recently acquired in foreclosure proceedings by the Lawyers' Mortgage Company, was disposed of yesterday to an investor. The property involved is known as 246 East 114th Street, a four-story tenement, on a lot 21 by 100.11, located 100 feet west of Second Avenue. This is the fifth property disposed of by the mortgage company during the past few days.

Another east side deal in the same section was reported by H. H. Cohen, who sold for the Rayiorius Realty Company to an investor 524 and 526 East 110th Street, a six-story new-law tenement, containing six apartments on a floor. The structure occupies a plot, 50 by 100.11, near Pleasant Avenue, and was valued by the selling company at $50,000.

Buyer of Lenox Hill Dwelling.

K. R. Babbitt is the buyer of the U. H. Boughton residence at 15 East Seventy-eighth Street, reported sold Monday.

Bronx Sales.

Kurz & Uren, Incorporated have sold for David Mackay, 1,329-31 Clinton Avenue, near 169th Street, a five-story building, having three families on a floor, on lot 50 by 138.

A building syndicate has purchased from the Hammer Realty Company, Ernest E. Hammer, President, ten lots on the east side of Valentine Avenue, running through to Tiebout Avenue, located 69.6 feet north of 183d Street. $8,000,000 WAR DEAL HALTS AT JAIL DOOR

MUST FACE THEFT CHARGE

Blames Spiteful Rivals in Real Estate for Indictment Under Which He Jumped Bail.

Edward H. Peters, a wealthy real estate dealer of Chicago, was arraigned in Yorkville Court yesterday as a fugitive from justice and held without bail to await extradition to Illinois. Peters was arrested on Monday while he was trying to sell to two representatives of the Allies war munitions, which he said were worth $8,000,000.

A dispatch to THE TIMES from Chicago last night said that Peters was indicted last March on a charge of larceny involving the sale of a municipal bond valued at $400. The complainant was Percy R. Fletcher. In the Cook County Criminal Court Peters was released on a bond of $1,000, furnished by Joseph Schmidt, a saloon keeper. The case was called on Sept. 30, and when Peters did not appear the bond was forfeited. Schmidt had been looking for him since, and when he heard of Peters's activities in New York asked the Chicago police to act.

Peters was found on Monday night in front of the Hotel Vanderbilt while talking to two men who, he said, were purchasing agents for the Allies. As Detective John H. Griffiths walked up to Peters and told him he was under arrest, the prisoner responded:

"I wouldn't have had this happen for a million dollars. I was just about to sell those men 20,000 tons of barbed wire and four carloads of acid."

He was taken to Police Headquarters until his arraignment in Yorkville Court yesterday morning.

At the Vanderbilt it was said that Peters had been there for ten days and had frequently spoken of big deals with the Allies involving between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000. He said he was the representative of several big Western mills, and mentioned the Ornamental Brass and Iron Works of Lake Street, Chicago. It was said at the hotel that he had been in frequent conference with men known by the hotel management to be foreign agents.

In Yorkville prison Peters said last night that his arrest was due to the spite of some real estate operators in Chicago who sought revenge for deals in which he had got the better of them.

William P. Dewey, counsel for Peters, wired to the Chicago police last night asking that Peters be released and that he would guarantee that his client would take the first train for Chicago. He received no answer.

According to Mr. Dewey, Mr. Peters is the victim of unfortunate circumstances which his rivals have turned against him. Mr. Dewey understood that Mr. Peters had several contracts for war supplies near consummation.

THE TIMES dispatch from Chicago said that Peters was a real estate dealer with offices at 29 South La Salle Street, and that he was reputed to be worth more than $500,000. He was at one time identified with city and State Republican politics in Illinois and was appointed by Governor Deneen a member of the West Chicago Park Board.

Chicago friends of Peters said last night that they believed he had made the trip to New York unaware that under the law he was violating his bond and that his only mistake was neglect to inform State's Attorney Hoyne of Cook County of his departure. It was understood in Chicago that he was interested in several large deals for supplying war munitions to the allied Governments.

Peters was indicted in Chicago in 1913 because of a real estate deal, but was acquitted.

The Peters family live at Deer Path Inn, Lake Forest, Ill. A dispatch from there last night said that Mrs. Peters was ill. She was Miss Nellie Mullaly, daughter of the late Major John E. Mullaly. Peters's mother-in-law said last night she did not know what was back of Mr. Peters's arrest, but that he had been hounded by enemies, and that she was convinced his trouble was a matter of spite.

Mr. Dewey said last night that he did not believe Peters's arrest was the result of any international prejudice.

School Gets Dismission Cup.

Borough President Marks yesterday presented a silver cup to Public School 82, as winner of the dismission contest, in which the schools have been competing during the last week. The 1,500 pupils of the school were dismissed in forty-two seconds from the time the fire gong rang and were clear of the building and theoretically out of harm's way. In his address Mr. Marks said: "I congratulate Fire Commissioner Adamson upon his splendid headway in the work under his efficient charge.

BABY MAY CRY, SAYS COURT.

No Ground for Eviction of Parents, Rules Justice.

A baby may cry without being guilty of objectionable conduct. And the baby needn't select his time for crying. Bright noonday or dark midnight, he may cry as much as he pleases and still be a perfectly good and unobjectionable child.

This was the decision yesterday in the complaint made by John J. Dillon against David Eisenberg, who is 1 year and 8 months old. Mr. Dillon is a publisher and the lessor of the apartment house at 47 Claremont Avenue.

Complaints from a number of tenants against Mr. and Mrs. Lester W. Eisenbergs. David's parents, who are also tenants of the house, resulted in an attempt by Mr. Dillon to evict the Eisenbergs. When the case came before Justice Young of the Seventh Municipal Court yesterday for settlement, Mr. Dillon explained that a number of his tenants had dubbed David a nuisance, because he cried so long, so loud and so frequently.

But Justice Young refused to permit the Eisenberg family to be evicted. He said that everybody knows that children cry, that David's crying, doubtless was like the crying of any other healthy child of the same age, and that such crying was part of the general scheme of things.

Judge Edward Swann, Tammany candidates for District Attorney, and Alfred E. Smith, candidate for Sheriff, were the guests of honor last night at a dinner and reception at the National Democratic Club. The number of participants in the dinner was restricted to the capacity of the club's dining room. John M. Hasslocher, George Ehret, Jr., Nathan Hirsh, Antonio Zucca, Judge Lorenz Zeller, William H. Page, President of the New York Athletic Club; Judge Moses Herman, Professor Leslie J. Tompkins, J. T. Mahoney, D-Cady Herrick, John F. Galvin, Judge Paul Krotel, Judge M. Warley Platzek, Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall; John F. Curry, Judge John J. Freschi, H. M. Goldfogle, Charles W. Culkins, Luigi Solari, Judge Robert L. Luce, William Harmon Black, Chairman of the Democratic County Committee; William Dalton, Walter R. Herrick, Nicholas J. Hayes, Daniel J. Riordan, John F. Carew, Murray Hurlbert, and John W. Keller.

At the reception after the dinner it was estimated there were more people in the building than ever before in its history.

When a boy or a business has a birthday—the world forgives the I or the We!

These crisp October days are birthdays for us, and it is not unnatural that we think and write more of ourselves than is our wont.

After all—it took a good deal of courage to open a clothing business in New York—probably the hardest market in the world. But we were sure from the first that we would succeed, if—we would give New York men more style—more quality—and even better service than they had ever had for the money.

Ever since 1904—when we first put clothing into our stores—you have shown your appreciation by helping us build not only one of the largest retail clothing businesses in the city, but in the world.

Which is a good deal to have accomplished in eleven years. Isn't it?

There is a crumpled one-dollar bill in a frame in one of our private offices.

It has been there a good while—for it is the first dollar that was paid to the Wallach boys when they began business.

Even now—it belongs to the man who paid it, if he'd rather have it than the goods it bought.

Perhaps one reason for our success is that every dollar that has come to us since has been just as important—the sale of just as much interest—as that first dollar.

We have tried as hard every day as we did that first day. And this spirit has grown up with the business, until you can almost feel it in any Wallach store.

Another reason—is the merchandise we offer and the modest prices we charge for it.

Everything men wear—except shoes.

This year we have set aside—in celebration of our birthday—a fine lot of Hart Schaffner & Marx Varsity Fifty Five Suits, and marked them $21.50

Not even the salesmen will know the regular prices.

We simply tell you that you make a great saving on each garment.

Try once, putting your faith wholly in us—and then judge us by the result!

EMBARGO ON ARMS TO CARRANZA'S FOES

President Issues Proclamation Stopping All Shipments Into Villa Territory.

ARMY TO HELP ENFORCE IT

New Order in Effect Since Tuesday Midnight — Like President Taft's Aid to Madero.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Announcement was made by Secretary of State Lansing today that President Wilson had declared an embargo against the shipment of arms and ammunition into Mexico. The President also signed a supplementary order which excepts the Carranza Government from the embargo and permits arms and ammunition to go to him without restriction. This is similar to the policy in vogue during the Taft Administration, when shipments of arms were passed for the Madero Government, but were prohibited to all persons in insurrection against that Government.

The new embargo has been in effect since midnight of last night. The communications and proclamations emanating from the White House bore yesterday's date, and orders went forth last night to the Collectors of Customs along the border and elsewhere, although announcement was withheld until this morning. The army will assist to the extent necessary to prevent arms going across the border in violation of the President's proclamation. The President's proclamation was as follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, A joint resolution of Congress, approved March 14, 1912, reads and provides as follows:

"That whenever the President shall find that in any American country conditions of domestic violence exist which are promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States, and shall make proclamation thereof, it shall be unlawful to export except under such limitations and exceptions as the President shall prescribe any arms or munitions of war from any place in the United States to such country until otherwise ordered by the President or by Congress";

And whereas, It is provided by Section II. of the said Joint Resolution "that any shipment of material hereby declared unlawful after such a proclamation shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding $10,000, or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both";

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, acting under and by virtue of the authority conferred in me by the said Joint Resolution of Congress, do hereby declare and proclaim that I have found that there exists in Mexico such conditions of domestic violence promoted by the use of arms or munitions of war procured from the United States as contemplated by the said Joint Resolution; and I do hereby admonish all citizens of the United States and every person to abstain from every violation of the provisions of the Joint Resolution above set forth, hereby made applicable to Mexico, and I do hereby warn them that all violations of such provisions will be rigorously prosecuted. And I do hereby enjoin upon all officers of the United States, charged with the execution of the laws thereof, the utmost diligence in preventing violations of the said Joint Resolution and this my Proclamation issued thereunder, and in bringing to trial and punishment any offenders against the same.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this 19th day of October in the year of our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifteen and of the Independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fortieth.

WOODROW WILSON.

The President's order making an exception in favor of the Carranza de facto government took the form of the following letter to Secretary McAdoo:

The White House,
Washington, Oct. 19, 1915.

My Dear Mr. Secretary: I am informed by the Department of State that the recognized de facto Government of Mexico is now in effective control of all the ports of entry in Mexico, except those along the international boundary in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora, and all the ports in Lower California.

An exception is hereby made to the prohibition against export created by the President's proclamation of Oct. 19, and you will please instruct the Collectors of Ports and other officers of the Treasury Department to permit to be exported through United States Custom Houses munitions of war for the use of the recognized de facto Government of Mexico, or for industrial or commercial uses within the limits of the territory under its effective control, as above set forth, embargo, therefore, will be immediately placed against the border ports in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora, as well as all ports in the territory of Lower California, whether or not controlled by the recognized de facto Government of Mexico, and you will so instruct the appropriate Collectors of Customs and other officers of the Treasury Department. Sincerely yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

With reference to the embargo on arms to Mexico, the following letter was sent by Secretary of State Lansing to President Wilson on Oct. 19:

My Dear Mr. President: I have the honor to submit herewith for signature by you, should it meet with your approval, a letter addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, directing him to permit the exportation of munitions of war to the territory under the control of the recognized de facto Government of Mexico.

The information before this department leads me to believe that the recognized de facto Government of Mexico is now in effective control of all the ports of entry in Mexico, except those along the International Boundary in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora, and all Lower California ports.

In the circumstances it would appear that there should be no objection, for the present, to granting permission to allow the shipment of munitions of war to ports of entry under the control of the recognized de facto Governments of Mexico, except to border ports in the States of Chihuahua and Sonora, and all ports in Lower California, whether not controlled by the recognized de facto Government of Mexico.

I have the honor to be, my dear Mr. President,

Sincerely yours, ROBERT LANSING.

Villa Agency Is Closed.

The Villa Confidential Agency, which has been maintained in Washington for the last year, closed its doors today and members of the junta scattered. It was stated that in view of the recognition of the Carranza government it was futile to continue the Washington agency of the Villa movement. Eliseo Arredondo, confidential agent here of the Carranza government, issued a statement tonight in which he denied that he was going to Mexico to confer with General Carranza with the expectation of immediately returning as Ambassador from Mexico to the United States. It is the understanding and expectation in Washington that Mr. Arredondo will be so returned, but no such statement has been authorized by Mr. Arredondo himself.

"I expect," said Mr. Arredondo, "to leave shortly for Mexico, but the date of my going has not been fixed. I believe my work in Washington as confidential agent of the Constitutionalist government has ended with the recognition of the government of which Mr. Carranza is the chief. Hereafter I will be at the service of the Government of

FORD TO BUY $1,000,000 WORTH OF WAR BONDS

Pledged to Subscribe to Canadian Loan—"Pro-Ally" in Sentiment, Says His Partner.

Special to The New York Times.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—That Henry Ford was pro-ally and that his Canadian company would subscribe the first million dollars to the Canadian war loan was an official announcement coming from the company today.

"Tell the people of Canada for me that I am with them heart and soul," said Mr. Ford to Gordon MacGregor, head of the Canadian Ford Motor Company. "You may say also," said Mr. MacGregor, "that Mr. Ford has expressed the strongest pro-ally sentiments to officials of the firm and to hundreds of his friends. A hundred times Mr. Ford has sent for me to come over and bring a bunch of Canadian newspapers, and by the hour we have figured how the Allies were going to win this war.

"Further, if the Canadian Government makes a flotation the Canadian Ford Company will take a million dollars' worth of the bonds."

ASTOR IN SEA-PLANE BAGS TWO SUBMARINES

Young Millionaire's Craft Is Too Fast for D-1 and G-1 in Impromptu War Game.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 20.—Vincent Astor put in two hours this afternoon chasing submarines in Long Island Sound. Sailing in his fast hydro-aeroplane he succeeded, according to reports, in theoretically capturing the undersea craft and putting them out of commission.

Mr. Astor's big steam yacht Noma, with the owner on board, arrived in port some time last night, and anchored off the New York Yacht Club station, a few yards north of the cruiser Columbia, flagship of the submarine flotilla. Two of the seven submarines that arrived Monday at the Naval Station here, the new base selected by Secretary Daniels, started out into Long Island Sound this afternoon for diving tests in deep water, but the program was abandoned on account of the heavy fog prevailing. The submarines, however, the D-1 and the G-1, made several plunges off the mouth of the harbor, and for two hours, after the fog had lifted, played a game of hide-and-seek with Mr. Astor and Captain Yates Sterling, commander of the Columbia, who were together in the hydro-aeroplane.

TO PREVENT ENGLISH 'SLACKERS" MIGRATION

Government Will Stop Rush of Men Who Dread Military Service to Colonies and Ireland.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Immediate steps will be taken by the British authorities, The Evening News understands, to restrict the sudden rush of ablebodied Britons of military age to the colonies, to the islands of Jersey and Guernsey, and to Ireland in order to escape military service.

"It is perfectly obvious," the newspaper says, "that grave damage will be caused to the relations between the mother country and her dependencies if hordes of slackers are allowed to pour into Canada, Australia, and India, which have given their best blood for the Empire."

HOLLIS WON'T CONTEST WIFE'S SEPARATION SUIT

U. S. Senator Asks Court to Give Her Decree with Alimony—Hits at Streeter, Political Foe.

Special to The New York Times.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 20.—United States Senator Henry F. Hollis, replying to his wife's suit for separation and maintenance, consents to the separation and to the wife having custody of their daughter, and asks the court to name a suitable allowance for her. He also hits at Frank S. Streeter, the Republican chief, who is Mrs. Hollis's counsel.

The nature of the answer caused great surprise among the Senator's friends, who expected him to contest the suit.

"I not wish to be heard," says Senator Hollis, in his answer. "It is my experience in such cases that a personal contest in court serves no useful purpose and is undignified and degrading to both parties."

The answer sets forth that the couple separated in 1912 because of "incompatability," and continues, "for some time up to July, 1915, I paid my wife $4,080 per year for the support of herself and my daughter. About the middle of June, last, further differences arose, which would, I believe, have been amicably adjusted if she had not employed Mr. Streeter. He bears me a personal grudge.

"July 5, 1915, I wrote my wife that if she continued to employ Mr. Streeter I should not pay her another dollar except what the Court should award after a hearing. I expected her to discharge Mr. Streeter or to apply to the courts to secure her legal rights at once.

"As long as my wife complied with my desires," the answer says, "it was my wish to make her a generous allowance. To accomplish this I took the very unusual course of continuing to practice law at great personal sacrifice, for more than two years after my election to the Senate.

"I have no income or means of income except my salary of $7,500 a year as Senator. About $1,500 of this sum is required to pay interest, taxes and life insurance, leaving substantially $6,000 for the support of myself and family. Out of this sum I am paying my son and daughter $1,500 a year each for their support and education."

CANNOT SAVE HILLSTROM.

President Advises the Swedish Minister That He Can Do Nothing More

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—President Wilson today advised W. A. F. Ekengren, Swedish Minister here, that he could do nothing further for Joseph Hillstrom, a Swedish citizen, under sentence of death in Utah for murder.

At the request of Minister Ekengren, the President several weeks ago asked Governor Spry of Utah to postpone Hillstrom's execution until new evidence could be presented. A stay was granted, but no material evidence having been presented, the State now is preparing to carry out the court's sentence.

FINDS HIGH TAXES ARE DUE TO BABIES

Too Many of Them Born, Says Professor J. F. Johnston, Who Would Discourage Matrimony.

HIGHER TAX FOR HUSBANDS

Senator Boylan Demands to Know If Witness at Mills Committee Hearing Is Serious.

Arguments against a State income tax were heard yesterday by members of the Mills Legislative Tax Committee, which is holding sessions in the Woolworth Building.

Surrogate Robert Fowler gave it as his opinion that an income tax in the State would be a direct violation of a tacit agreement between the State and the Federal Governments by which the State guarantees not to adopt any measure of taxation that will interfere with the Federal income tax.

Alfred E. Holcomb, tax attorney for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, said that a low tax on intangible personal property would work out better and be more acceptable than a State-wide income tax, which would be difficult to collect and would require an entirely new tax administrative office.

Professor Joseph French Johnson of New York University, a professed believer in the Malthusian theory, said a married man should bear as heavy a tax as a single man and that he did not believe it a good thing to encourage matrimony by lowering taxation.

In arguing for a listing system Mr. Holcomb said:

"If the people know that a tax is likely to be placed on their incomes there will be great opposition to it, but if we go along the line of least resistance a man will pay taxes on his property. It is absurd to think that a tax can be devised that will be a pleasure to the people. The listing system is the best and fool of all forms of taxation. Just as the people can give a true and accurate list of their personal belongings to the Federal Government, so also can they give an accurate list of their personal property to the State government."

Personality Tax a Failure.

"But the listing system is not the line of least resistance, but of most resistance," said Chairman Mills. "It is known that the personal property tax is a failure because of the much opposed and almost always evaded listing of property and because it does not seem that a tax on intangible property would raise the necessary revenue."

Mr. Holcomb said he knew of no prejudice against the listing system. Senator Mills replied that opponents of the proposed new Constitution had sent out forms and notices requesting voters to defeat the Constitution because its adoption would mean an enforced listing system, although, of course, the new Constitution, he said, had nothing whatever to do with the listing system. He mentioned this as an illustration, he said, of the unpopularity of the listing system. Mr. Holcomb thereupon submitted statistics of various States to prove his contention that in most States the listing system is a success.

"A State income tax," he said, "would be an addition to the Federal income tax and would therefore be obviously unfair. There is a tacit agreement between the State and Federal authorities that neither should encroach upon the other's method of taxation, and the proposed income tax is a direct violation of this agreement."

Commodore Vanderbilt's Offer.

At another point he said that the present enormous city debt is the result of early mistakes in the municipal government, and he gave this example:

"When Commodore Vanderbilt offered to build free a viaduct railroad around the city in connection with the plan of development of the Harlem River Railroad and of the waterfront facilities, the city fathers wanted to be paid to let it for them. Whereupon Commodore Vanderbilt became disgusted and abandoned the idea. Thus New York lost an excellent opportunity of obtaining the viaduct for nothing."

On the whole the Surrogate thought it would be best at present to leave taxation alone.

Professor Johnson said he would discourage matrimony by making the married man pay a heavier tax.

"I think we should not do anything to encourage matrimony and child-bearing," he said.

"Surely you are not serious in that statement, professor?" asked Senator Boylan.

"Yes, I am serious," replied the professor. "I should have to give quite a disquisition to explain my conclusions, and I do not believe it is worth your while. I doubt if it is practical for you to consider it, and you would have to surrender to the public, anyway. If you do put in force any income tax system you will have to treat the married men easily, I suppose.

A Disciple of Malthus.

"I am still a confirmed disciple of Malthus, and I believe that that awful war over in Europe is being fought out because the human race has deliberately refused to see the lessons of his doctrines, which were taught 100 years ago."

"Don't you think if we followed out that theory that in a period of time the population would decrease?" asked Senator Boylan.

"Oh, no, never," replied Professor Johnson. "Nature would take care of that."

Charles F. MacLean and Henry G. Schneider also testified.

The hearing will be continued this morning.

ISLAND THE PRICE OF RUSSIAN ARMS?

Half of Sakhalin Said to Be Ceded to Japan — Output There Greatly Increased.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The Cologne Gazette, a copy of which has been received here, publishes a report which it says passed the Russian censor, that Japan has undertaken to supply Russia with munitions in return for a complete cession of the Island of Sakhalin.

[The Island of Sakhalin, 570 miles long and from seventeen to ninety miles wide, lies between the east coast of Asia and the northern islands of the Japanese archipelago. Russia owns the northern and Japan the southern end of the island.]

TOKIO, Sept. 30.—The output of war munitions for Russia resulting from the recent agreement between Japan and the Allies is already showing a great increase. Russian orders include railroad cars, a large quantity of rails, sleepers, locomotives, as well as guns, rifles, ammunition, boots, and general leather equipment and cloth.

Fleet Will Decide the War, Says Churchill; Britain's Sure Protection, Balfour Declares

LONDON, Oct. 20.—"Germany aims at world domination, and against world domination the British fleet, from the time of Queen Elizabeth to the present day, has always been found the surest and most effectual protection."

This is the contribution of A. J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty, to the Navy League's symposium in connection with tomorrow's observance of Trafalgar Day.

Winston Spencer Churchill, ex-First Lord of the Admiralty and at present Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, writes in part:

"For six months no hostile flag has flown outside the Baltic. We are stronger than ever and incomparably better adapted for war conditions. The great strategic conclusions upon which our naval disposition is based have been vindicated. From its shrouded throne amid northern storms the grand fleet dominates and will finally decide the fate of the warring nations, and by that formidable combination, strength and patience, will secure the victory of our just cause.

"On land good days have not yet come. The valiant Russian front wears thin, the French and British offensive in the West has pierced, but has not ruptured, the German fortified lines. Through our long delays the enemy has seized a new initiative in the Near East, and the Oriental inclination in his war policy raises new perils of peculiar significance to us. A hazardous struggle, vast expense and hard privation lie before us.

"Courage! All's well with the fleet. The destruction of German military manhood is irreplaceable. Under the sure shield of the navy every mistake can be retrieved, every neglect can be repaired.

"The choice to save or to lose the freedom of the world rests still with the British people and their leaders. The spirit of Nelson and the memory of Trafalgar should rouse us now to sustain unwearyingly the darkening conflict and, by proceeding to all necessary extremes, and by laying aside every impediment, to rescue Britain from dishonor and Europe from ruin."

BANDITS AGAIN RAID NEW JERSEY TRAIN

Auto Gang Awaits Erie Freight at Glen Rock, Where Ally Applies Air Brakes.

ESCAPE AFTER PISTOL DUEL

Crew, Detectives, and Police Fire on Robbers, Who Reply as They Flee in Motor Car.

Chief of Police Martin Jenson of Glen Rock, N. J., at 11 o'clock last night sent out a general alarm for five men riding in a brown touring car who had held up an Erie freight train in a deserted spot in the outskirts of Glen Rock, had been fought off by railroad men and police after a pistol battle, and at last had escaped in the automobile, racing away in the direction of Paterson. Chief Jenson and all the police of other towns who received his message believed the bandits were the ones who held up two trains of the West Shore Railroad on Monday night.

Posses in automobiles set out at once from all towns in the neighborhood of Glen Rock, and every road over which an automobile could force its way was watched by armed men. Early this morning not a trace of the car had been found, but the roads still were watched and it was believed the men could not escape. Certainly they could not bring their car into any town without instant capture.

The hold-up was executed as boldly as any of the old Wild West days. The car arrived in Glen Rock about 10 o'clock last night and stopped in Rock Road about 500 feet from the railroad tracks where the Erie trains run over the Bergen County Short Cut on their way from Jersey City to Port Jervis, N. Y. Chief Jenson inquired why the car stood by the roadside. The occupants explained they had broken down and were busy repairing the engine, and the Chief passed on with a word of sympathy. He did not note how many men were in the car, but it is believed now that one of the five, and perhaps two, were elsewhere at that time.

This belief is based on the fact that an Erie freight train due in Glen Rock about 10:30 o'clock halted suddenly as it was opposite the crossing of Rock Road. The air brakes had been applied suddenly, and as they could be applied only by the breaking or cutting of the airhose or its connections, some one other than the crew must have been aboard the train to do this, and it is thought now that one or more of the bandits boarded the train below Glen Rock, probably when it slowed down for a yard or crossing.

With the halting of their train the crew of four men and a railroad detective, who was riding in the caboose, where he had been stationed since the hold-ups of Monday night, jumped down and went along the train seeking the break in the air connections. As they passed one freight car, five men sprang out leveling pistols at their heads.

Three stood on guard while the others broke open the door of a car and jerked out three bales of silk. The attention of the guards wavered for an instant and it was long enough for the detective to begin firing his pistol. The crew joined in with their pistols, and the bandits, taken by surprise, dropped their booty and ran for their automobile, firing over their shoulders as they fled.

The fusillade aroused the whole town. Chief Jenson and all of his men rushed for the railroad tracks. They were in time to join in the pistol battle, but although more than twenty shots were fired, none hit the bandits. They reached their car, jumped into it, and were off at full speed while their pursuers were still some yards behind. The detectives fired at the tires of the flying car, hoping to cripple it, but none of their shots hit, and the motor disappeared in the direction of Maple Avenue, the main automobile highway between Paterson and Suffern, N. Y.

The police caught the number of the car as 17,600 New York. This proved to be the license number of John H. Watkins of Mount Kisco, N. Y. Mr. Watkins could not be reached last night, but the police believe the number was originated by the thieves, and that Mr. Watkins's car, which might have been stolen from him, was not used, since the Glen Rock car was described as of different make from that registered under his name.

YOUNG TRIEST'S TRIAL AGAIN POSTPONED

Indefinite Stay Granted at Request of State Department—May Drop Case Against Him.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The trial of Kenneth G. Triest, the young former Princeton student held in London as a German spy, has been postponed indefinitely, according to a dispatch from London today to the State Department.

It was explained that the postponement did not mean a decision not to bring Triest to trial. State Department officials, however, would not be surprised if the prosecution was dropped ultimately.

The postponement was granted at the request of the department, which had been asked to intercede by Gustav W. Triest of New York, father of the youth.

The elder Triest asserts that his son was not in his right mind when he enlisted in the British naval wireless service and wrote letters in which he was alleged to have said that he was a German secret agent.

GERARD INTERCEDES TO HALT EXECUTIONS

Obtains a Stay of Sentences of Women Condemned to Death in Belgium.

KING ALFONSO ALSO ACTIVE

Wires an Appeal to the Kaiser and Obtains His Promise to Review the Cases.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—A dispatch to the State Department today from James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador at Berlin, said that he had made representations to the German Foreign Office in behalf of Countess Jeanne de Belleville and Mlle. Louise Thulier, a teacher, both under sentence of death by the German military authorities in Belgium, and that it was probable that they would be reprieved pending further inquiry. The action of the Ambassador was based on instructions from Secretary Lansing to make informal inquiries with a view to obtaining leniency. The women were convicted of violation of the German code regulating the conduct of civilians in conquered territory.

The instructions were sent to Ambassador Gerard at the instance of the French Government. No direct request that the sentences be annulled was made by the United States through Mr. Gerard, as the Government felt that it had no right, even as the representative of Belgian and French interests in German territory, to question the administration of German military justice. But while officials are not committing themselves on the subject, the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, an English school principal, and the imposition of the death sentence on other women has created a painful impression here that makes the action of the Government more than a mere perfunctory proceeding.

No information concerning the execution of Miss Cavell has been received at the State Department, and no request has been made by the Governments of France and Great Britain to intercede in behalf of male citizens of those countries who are reported to be under sentence of death in that part of Belgium controlled by the German forces.

MADRID, Oct. 20, (via Paris.)—The Foreign Ministry announces that in addition to the instructions given in the King's name to the Spanish Minister at Brussels to endeavor to obtain Emperor William's pardon of the Countess de Belleville, Mlle. Thulier, and the other persons under sentence by court-martial, the Foreign Minister himself telegraphed to the Ambassador at Berlin to intercede with the Emperor.

Notwithstanding all these steps, however, King Alfonso personally telegraphed Emperor William, renewing the request, and has received a telegram from the Emperor stating that he had asked for the papers in the cases and would give his answer after he had carefully studied them.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The American and Spanish Ministers to Belgium intervened to have commuted the death sentence which was passed by the German authorities at Brussels on Miss Edith Cavell, a British nurse, but their efforts were fruitless, Lord Lansdowne told the House of Lords this evening. In the case of two Frenchwomen, however, who were also sentenced to death, strong representations made by Pope Benedict and King Alfonso of Spain had the effect of postponing the executions until the German Emperor considered the report.

Lord Lansdowne added that the people of this country were being continually shocked by such incidents, the last one always being more shocking than the one preceding. A full report of Miss Cavell's case, he said, had just been received from the American Minister to Belgium.

This report, he said, would be published without delay.

Lord Lansdowne added that Miss Cavell might have, by her conduct, rendered herself liable to severe punishment, but he had no intention in saying that she might, at any rate, have expected that measure of mercy which he believed in no civilized country would be refused to one who not only was a woman, but a very brave and devoted woman, and one who had given all her efforts and energies to the mitigation of the sufferings of others.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (via Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—The Overseas News Agency says that President Wilson, as well as the Pope, interceded on behalf of the Countess de Belleville, Mlle. Thulier and seven other persons who were court-martialed in Belgium and convicted on the charge of having abetted the escape of Belgian and French prisoners and the execution of whose sentences was postponed by Emperor William in order that he might make a detailed examination in the cases.

AIR RAID STIRS SWISS.

Government Demands That Germany Punish Careless Aviator.

BERNE, Oct. 20.—The Swiss Government has instructed its embassy at Berlin to lodge an energetic protest against a new violation of Swiss territory by German aviators.

The protest is occasioned by the act of an aviator in dropping eight bombs over Chaux-de-Fonds on Sunday, causing the injury of four persons and considerable damage to property.

Switzerland demands compensation and the punishment of the aviator.

BRITAIN OFFERS CYPRUS TO GREECE FOR HER INTERVENTION IN THE WAR; ROME REPORTS AN ULTIMATUM SENT

Rumania Sends a Mission to Allied Capitals and London Is Expectant of Her Aid in War

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—A Reuter dispatch from Odessa says that a military mission, which the Rumanian Government is sending to France with a son of General Oatuneano at its head, arrived there yesterday. The mission will visit Petrograd on its way to France.

Considerable importance is attached here to this mission. Its object is not known, but it is thought that such a mission would hardly be undertaken unless Rumania contemplated action on the side of the Allies.

Dispatches from Bucharest indicate that a violent campaign is being waged in Rumania over the question of that country's intervention in the war. One of the Bucharest Opposition newspapers, according to the dispatches, has gone so far as to threaten the King with a popular rising.

Much indignation has been caused in Rumania by the action of the Austrian authorities at Salzburg in arresting Michael Cantacuzene, former Rumanian Minister of Justice, who was returning from Paris. His arrest, it is alleged, was due to the finding of a letter in his possession, addressed to M. Filipesco, leader of the Conservative Party in Rumania.

HEAR CZERNOWITZ IS EVACUATED

Russian Advance Said to Have Forced Austrians Out of City Near Rumanian Border.

RIGA IN GREATER DANGER

Renewed Talk of Surrender of the Port, Though Defenders Are Still Fighting Stubbornly.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The extreme northern and the extreme southern ends of the Russian front are the scenes of the most important developments in the war news from the east. In battles south of Riga the Germans have made some progress in the new thrust at the Baltic province port, but in Volhynia and Galicia the Russians have gained rather important victories.

General Ivanoff, who has proved himself to be the most aggressive of the Russian commanders, has been striking hard at the Austro-German forces on the Middle Styr and along the fringe of Galicia that is still in Russian hands. At several places he has driven his opponents back, and there is a report tonight that the Austrians have evacuated Czernowitz—a report which finds some confirmation in the following dispatch from Odessa dated yesterday:

"The Russian authorities have decided that the favorable turn in military affairs has rendered it unnecessary to carry out the contemplated evacuation of the three northern districts of the Government of Bessarabia."

As for the northern front the Germans have concentrated very large forces, with a great amount of artillery, south of Riga, and, as a result, a stubborn battle has been in progress for several days. Field Marshal von Hindenburg, who is in command in this region, reported two days ago that his forces had reached the River Dvina, but, as on previous occasions, this broad and fast-running waterway appears to have held him up for the time being.

The situation, however, is considered by the Russians to be more serious than it has been for a long time, and there is again talk of the evacuation of Riga by the military, who have been in sole occupation of the city since the civilian population left a month ago.

Dual Attack on Riga.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—Operations on the Riga front are growing more serious. The Germans have brought up reinforcements, partly from the Dvina front and partly from reserves in the rear. They apparently intend once more to undertake the exceedingly difficult task of forcing the Dvina near Riga.

The country along the left bank of the Dvina toward the mouth is thickly wooded and it is impossible to operate here on a front at once broad and compact. The Germans are advancing in separate columns from the Mitau-Windau and Mitau-Neugut railways. On the latter they have advanced about two miles, but are being actively engaged by Russian troops. Near Friedrichstadt their artillery has opened fire from the left bank of the Elisenof Temmul section of the Riga-Dvinsk Railway, which here runs close to the northern bank of the river.

The Russians are pressing on their flanks and bombing the stations between Mitau and Neugut from their Sikorsky biplanes and at the same time are opposing strong resistance to the unceasing fire of the enemy on Dvinsk.

The new Riga operations of the Germans seem for the present to be in the stage of a reconnoissance in force. The development will depend on turns of fortune rather than any definite plan.

CZERNOWITZ NEAR RUMANIA.

Austrian City Important for Possible Balkan Influence.

Czernowitz, the capital of the Austro-Hungarian Crown Land of Bukowina, is situated about twenty-five miles from the point where the boundaries of Austria-Hungary, Rumania, and Russia meet. In a direct line it is about fifteen miles from the Rumanian border and about twenty-five miles from the Russian Province of Bessarabia.

Czernowitz is south of the River Pruth, which would have to be crossed by a Russian army capturing it. Two bridges cross the Pruth into Czernowitz. The city had in 1900 a population of 70,000, composed of a mixture of Germans, Ruthenians, Rumanians, Poles, Jews, Armenians, and Gypsies.

It was taken by the Russians early in the war after their drive through Galicia. An Austro-Hungarian army recaptured it and was a second time driven out. The Russians were a second time forced to evacuate it when von Mackensen's drive forced them to give up the attempt to cross the Carpathians.

BERLIN PREDICTS PEACE BY SPRING

Sound British Business Sense, "High Official" Says, Will End Hostilities.

WHAT THE KAISER WANTS

Huge Indemnity and Colonial Advantages the Chief Points in Present Discussion.

BERLIN, Oct. 8, (Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—"But by spring we shall probably have peace." This remark of one of the most highly placed state officials in conversation with The Associated Press correspondent may be taken as indicative of the view of the probable duration of the war held in German Government quarters, or, at any rate, in certain influential circles of the Government. The person quoted occupies a place which lends much weight to his opinion on this subject. The remark was made incidentally during a discussion of certain future possibilities in the Balkan situation.

Pressed to give a reason for his optimism, the official replied that he based his expectations largely on "the sound business sense of the British," which would lead them to move for peace as soon as they saw nothing was to be gained by continuing the war.

"We now hold in the West," he continued, "a strong fortified line inclosing a great enclave of French and Belgian territory. We shall soon have a similar line fortified in the East. Behind these two lines we can sit tight and defy all efforts of our enemies to break through.

"I have much confidence in the business sense of the British and think that when they have found the Dardanelles cannot be forced, this will lead them to take steps in the direction of peace."

The correspondent suggested that business men usually were unwilling to make a contract wherein all the advantages of conditions were on the side of the other parties to it and that it was customary in business circles to have some definite idea of the terms upon which an agreement would be possible before sitting down to draw up a contract. He asked whether this "business" would not be facilitated if the opponents had some definite information as to the maximum terms upon which Germany would be ready to discuss conditions of peace. The official replied that for Germany to make a statement at this time on the conditions of peace might possibly be interpreted as a confession of weakness, and that for the present he preferred to await overtures from the other side.

Since this conversation the correspondent of The Associated Press has heard similar remarks from other officials. The vigor with which the various political groups and big industrial, commercial, and agricultural organizations are pursuing the discussion of the fabooed topic of the "aims of the war," which, although public discussion of it in the press is forbidden, is the absorbing topic in German society, indicates, too, that the Government is giving serious consideration to the subject of peace.

This discussion and the oracular utterances of Dr. Karl Helfferich, Secretary of the German Imperial Treasury; Sir Edward Grey, British Foreign Secretary, and other responsible personages on possible and impossible conditions of peace, give color to the suspicion that something may be going on behind the curtain. Such "sounding out," undertaken at the instance of persons in authority, undoubtedly has been done informally and in such a manner as to permit of a disavowal should circumstances require.

Possible Peace Conditions.

No statement whatever as to Germany's peace conditions can be obtained, nor is it even certain that the Government has reached any final conclusion as to the extent of "guarantees" which will be demanded for the future security of Germany, to which the Emperor and the Chancellor have referred repeatedly in public utterances. Should it be permitted, however, to hazard a guess, based not on any authoritative statements, but on personal observations and deductions and remarks dropped from time to time in official circles, The Associated Press correspondent would say Germany's terms at present in view include neither the absorption of Belgium nor other wholesale annexation of the extent demanded by the "blue sky" enthusiasts, who seem bound on adding to Germany practically everything now occupied by German armies.

The cardinal point in the desires of official Germany, if these assumptions are correct, is at present a large indemnity. This is demanded to compensate Germany for the steadily growing war costs and to provide one of those "guarantees" against future attack referred to. The usual reply to arguments that exhausted nations probably would be unable to raise the huge sums in question is that they need only cease paying out the billions spent annually

PARIS, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following dispatch under date of Wednesday:

"A great battle is going on the Heights of Vlassona and Kotchana.

"The Bulgarian object seems to be to march on Monastir so as to cut communications with Saloniki.

"In the Negotin region two Bulgarian attacks have been repulsed.

"The newspapers state that after the occupation of Istip and Kotchana by the Bulgarians the Serbians fell back on Uskup. The population of Uskup has left. Communications between Nish and Uskup are cut.

"The ministers of the Quadruple Entente have left Nish for Krajevo.

"The Bulgarian Army is advancing rapidly on Kumanovo and Uskup, according to information from a Bulgarian source."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The Island of Cyprus has been offered by Great Britain to Greece on condition that she joins the war on the side of the Allies. Announcement of this offer is made in two London newspapers this morning.

The Daily Chronicle says in its news columns:

"A message has been received in London from Athens stating that Great Britain has offered to transfer the Island of Cyprus to Greece. We understand that such offer has been made and communicated to our allies. It is made, subject to the condition that Greece joins the Allies. The proposal is now being considered by the Greek Government."

The Chronicle says editorially:

"The attitude of Greece under the Zaimis Cabinet is still obscure. The pledges of the Serbo-Greek treaty bind here, and if she ignores them indefinitely, if she continues to break the treaty, both in the letter and the spirit, she will forfeit her national honor, which no nation forfeits with impunity, though Serbia herself may not be in a situation to resent her betrayal in her hour of need, her allies have every right to resent it on her behalf, and we have no doubt that the point has been courteously, but firmly, brought by them to Zaimis's attention.

"We learn from a trustworthy source that as a proof of good-will they have offered to Greece the Island of Cyprus.

"We are offering something that is already in our hands to give. Belligerents in negotiation with neutrals during this war have often been generous in offering what belonged to their enemies, but there are few instances where any nation has made a like offer like this of something which it had in its own secure possession.

"The offer is a splendid one, and if the Greek action allows the Zaimis Government to reject it the world will have to revise its view of the seriousness of Hellenic aspirations."

"The transfer is not made contingent upon the final triumph of the Entente. It is an actual and tangible concession, to take effect as soon as Greece should have performed her part in the suggested arrangement. It is a plan that will assuredly be welcomed by Venizelos and his followers as greatly fortifying their already strong position as advocates of the courageous policy, for the formal offer of Cyprus can be a matter of indifference to no patriotic Hellene.

"There is no sentiment in the matter upon our side, and it would be idle to try to give it any such appearance. The sooner we all recognize that purely chivalrous motives are not predominant in Balkan politics today the better.

"The cession of Cyprus, however, to the State to which most of its inhabitants are related by race and history clearly involves no departure from the principles upon which we have taken our stand from the beginning and would come with specially happy effect from the power to which Greece owes her possession of the Ionian Islands."

A dispatch to The Daily News from Rome gives this version of the present attitude of Greece:

"I am informed from a diplomatic source that the Greek Government is willing to give formal assurances to the Allies that Greece's intervention in favor of the Austro-Germans is absolutely impossible in any case."

A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Rome says:

"Much comment is passing in diplomatic circles here on the subject of the ultimatum which the Allies are said to be addressing to Greece, asking her to give an exactly defined statement of her attitude.

"The whole of the Italian press is now declaring that it is time for Greece and Rumania to take a final decision as to their position in the war."

In the same connection The Times prints a dispatch from Petrograd, which quotes Foreign Minister Sczonoff as saying:

"Although Greece has made a formal protest against the landing of Allied troops at Saloniki and at the same time has refrained from active opposition, she may find it difficult to maintain this position, which appears to be ambiguous."

SERBS ARE DRIVEN BACK.

Teuton and Bulgarian Invaders Advancing South and East.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The progress of military operations in Serbia is surrounded by considerable mystery. The Austro-Germans and Bulgarians are advancing all along the various fronts, but not with the speed expected.

The Austro-Germans apparently have spread their armies over a wider front, as Berlin reports that they are advancing on Shabatz, which is on the Save River about thirty-five miles west of Belgrade, while for the Bulgarians it is asserted that they have captured Sultan Tepe, southwest of Egri Palanka, and ten miles from the frontier, and that in advancing toward Kumanovo they took 2,000 prisoners. Kumanovo is about forty miles from the border on the Nish-Saloniki Railroad and a score of miles north of Uskub, as the line winds.

There is still some doubt as to whether they have cut the railway near Vranya. The Serbian Government denies the report that they have done so, while other accounts say that the Bulgarians reached the city, but were driven back.

Official Reports of Operations.

The German official bulletin of the operations, issued yesterday, is as follows:

Austro-Hungarian troops are pushing forward toward Shabatz. In the region south of Ripanj, (fifteen miles from Belgrade,) further engagements are in progress. South of Lucica and Bozevac the enemy has been again defeated.

By means of a quick attack the Bulgarians put themselves in possession of Sultan Tepe, to the southwest of Egri Palanka. During an advance on Kumanovo they took 2,000 prisoners and captured twelve cannon.

The Vienna War Office communication reads:

The Austro-Hungarian troops advancing in the Macva region are approaching Shabatz. We have dislodged the enemy from a strongly organized height position near Ripanj and southeast of Grocka.

South of Semendria the German troops have forced a crossing of the lower Ralja and gained new ground southeast of Pozarevac in the direction of Petrovac.

The Bulgarians have ejected the enemy from strong positions on Sultan Tepe, southwest of Egri Palanka. Advancing against Kumanovo they captured 2,000 Serbians and twelve guns.

The Bulgarian War Office made public the following:

Our armies advancing in Serbia have obtained the following successes: In the Timok Valley they have occupied the line of Teherni, the village of Vrh Charbonvec, the village of Aultchevao, the village of Balinec Novo, and Baltaberilovci. South of Wlassinaswam they took the height of Pandjingrob. (All these places are near the frontier.) Our cavalry participated in this attack and sabered 180 Serbians and captured fifty.

Through the gallant attack from the north, in addition to the skillful manoeuvres from the south, our troops seized the important strategical point of Sultan Tepe, near Straun. Two thousand prisoners and twelve guns were captured.

The general opinion is that the Germans in their campaign are aiming in the first place at the Serbian grain country, of which Kozarevac, already reached by them, is the centre, while the Bulgarians are making straight for Macedonia, where they will find part of the population friendly to them.

The Anglo-French forces have been in action near the Greco-Bulgarian frontier, but seemingly the battle was not an important one, as no official reports have been issued with regard to it.

Advices from Athens indicate that Turkey and Bulgaria are undertaking energetic measures to oppose the land and sea operations of the Entente Allies in the Balkans.

The Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company reports that Turkish forces are being concentrated in the region of Dedeaghatch, in Southern Bulgaria on the Aegean Sea. Large Bulgarian forces, the correspondent states, are being moved toward the Rumanian frontier.

The French and British Ministers at Athens, the dispatch adds, asked the Greek Government to sanction arrangements to provide for Serbian refugees on Greek territory. Premier Zaimis agreed, with the stipulation that Serbia should guarantee the maintenance of the refugees.

Bulgars in Macedonian Towns.

BERLIN, Oct. 21, (via London.)—Wireless reports from Sofia say that the Bulgarians have entered Macedonian towns.

CYPRUS SEIZED FROM TURKS.

Island Offered to Greece Third Largest in Mediterranean.

Cyprus, which Great Britain has offered to Greece for participating with the Allies in the Balkan war, is the third largest island in the Mediterranean. It is sixty miles from the coast of Asia Minor and had been Turkish from the middle ages until the convention of 1878 gave it a semi-British administration. On England's declaring war on Turkey, Nov. 5, 1914, the island was annexed to the British Empire.

It has an area of 3,584 square miles and a population of 300,000, consisting principally of the descendants of early Greeks. It has five towns with populations ranging from 17,000 to 6,000, and a splendid system of public schools, and law courts. It has eleven weekly papers, nine in Greek and two in Turkish. It is famous for its archaeological remains and, in mythological days, was dedicated to the worship of Aphrodite.

ARMIES SEEK TO JOIN HANDS.

Teutons and Bulgars Then to Make Joint Drive at Nish.

SALONIKI, Oct. 19, (via Paris, Oct. 20.)—The Entente Allies are marking time, pending the concentration here of a sufficient number of troops for their operations in the Balkans. A large French force is on the way to Saloniki. French forces have succeeded thus far in protecting the lower end of the Nish-Saloniki railway.

The Austro-German expedition is composed of mixed forces, of about twelve divisions. The Austrians have advanced well up the Morava Valley and are endeavoring to effect a junction with the Bulgarians, who are making an attack north of the Nish-Zaiecar sector.

Army officers here believe the combined armies, when a junction has been effected, will not be satisfied with opening a route across northeastern Serbia, but will attack Nish.

Another serious attack also is under way by the Bulgarians with Uskub as its objective. It is admitted that this force already has occupied Istip.

PASSAGE OF DANUBE UNIQUE.

Feat Without Parallel in War History, Mackensen Says.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (by Wireless to Tuckerton, N. J.)—Field Marshal von Mackensen, commanding the German campaign against Serbia, after the storming of Belgrade on Oct. 8 by his troops, is quoted by the Cologne Gazette as saying:

"The passage of so large a river, (the Danube,) without the use of a bridge, and in the face of the enemy, is, in fact, an achievement unknown in war history of all times."

STRUMITZA NOT OCCUPIED.

French Troops Receive Orders Not to Pass Bulgar Border.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—The Saloniki correspondent of the Havas Agency sends the following dispatch under Tuesday's date:

"French troops having received orders not to pass the Bulgarian frontier, Strumitza has not been occupied by the Allies.

"The Bulgarians are concentrating troops in haste in Dodrudja, supposedly because Rumania appears to be leaning more toward the Entente. At the same time three divisions of Bulgarian troops are being concentrated on the Greek frontier.

"Communications by the Uskub Railway now are said to be definitely assured for the allied troops.

"The entire Bulgarian coast on the Aegean Sea has been evacuated by the civilian population and the authorities."

DOUBT AS TO SERB CAPITAL.

Both Prizrend and Monastir Mentioned in Reports from Greece.

ATHENS, Oct. 20, (via London.)—The Diplomatic Corps at the Serbian Court has been compelled to remain in Nish, for the present at least. The expected departure of the diplomats for Monastir, in Southwestern Serbia, near the Greek border, has been postponed on account of the interruption of railway communications between Nish and Saloniki. Traffic between Saloniki and Monastir is also suspended on account of floods.

There has been no telegraphic communication with Nish for four days.

SALONIKI, Oct. 19, (via Paris, Oct. 20.)—The capital of Serbia has been transferred from Nish to Prizrend, in western Serbia, close to the Albanian frontier. The banks and most of the legations are being removed to Prizrend. The Russian Consul at Saloniki has sent an automobile to bring the Russian Minister to Serbia to this city, but owing to the muddy condition of the roads it is doubtful whether this effort will succeed.

BERLIN, Oct. 21, (via London.)—Reports from Nish received at Radulevatz say that the Diplomatic Corps and part of the Foreign Office and national archives have been transferred to Monastir. The Serbian National Bank and the government remain for the present at Nish.

FIGURES 600,000 FOES ARE ATTACKING SERBIA

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The Times military correspondent, discussing the Serbian situation, says this morning:

"The Austro-Germans have shown some thirteen divisions and probably have sixteen, (320,000 men). The Bulgarian army now has sixteen divisions including the Macedonians, and the Bulgarian division, numbering 24,000 men, is an army corps in all but name. How many divisions have been left to watch Greece and Rumania and the coasts we cannot at present tell, but from the wide front on which the Bulgarians are operating we should judge that not less than twelve divisions (288,000 men) in three armies are acting against Serbia.

"Our little ally, grievously hurt by the loss of 150,000 men in the present war and by the ravages of disease, which swept away 50,000 more, has probably not more than 200,000 men all told, if so many. The enemy has a superiority of two to one at least, and it may be greater if the Turks are lending a hand in the campaign.

"The situation is not desperate unless the main Serbian Army should be defeated, but it is of course most serious, and the Serbians are defending themselves in circumstances of the greatest disadvantage.

"A crisis cannot be long delayed, for even if part of the most southerly Bulgarian army faces south to meet the Anglo-French advance from Ghevgeli, there need be no slackening of the other movements, and though the country is difficult and the roads are both few and bad, the Bulgarian Army is organized for its special work, while the Austro-German pressure from the north will continue to be severe.

SERBS FIGHT TO DEATH

Women and Children Stand With Soldiers—Bulgars Lose Heavily.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—A delayed dispatch to The Daily Telegraph from Rome, under Tuesday's date, says:

"Information received from German sources confirms statements already made here that the campaign in Serbia is assuming a dreadful character, even private citizens, together with women and children taking part in the fighting. In the neighborhood of Mount Branovo and on Mount Pasulitch the battles were desperately contested and many women, young girls, and boys were shot down by the invaders as they were fighting side by side with the Serbian soldiers.

"It said that up to the present the enemy has not been able to take Serbian prisoners, and that all the Austro-German prisoners taken by the Serbs are wounded. Such stubborn defense is taxing all the energies of Von Mackensen, who again has asked for reinforcements. Three new army corps already have arrived in Serbia from Germany, but these must merely suffice to fill gaps in the ranks.

"Bulgarians, it is true, have been able to occupy Vranya but the town is little more than a mine field and the struggle for the possession of the place was such that Serbian soldiers defending it were killed almost to the last man. Ten thousand Bulgarians are stated to have been killed in the course of attacks on Vranya."

EGYPT IS THE GOAL OF THE BALKAN DRIVE

Capt. Persius Says the British Fleet Cannot Halt the Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—The high hopes which all Germans entertain of the success of the Balkan operations as the opening of a drive toward Egypt and the breaking of British power in the East are evidenced in the article in today's Tageblatt, entitled "England's Fleet Eliminated," by Captain Persius, the naval expert of that journal.

"For the emancipation of Egypt from English tyranny," says Captain Persius, "the passage of the Mediterranean is no longer necessary. British warships will hardly be able to prevent the crossing of the Suez Canal; and from Egypt, wherever one might then look eastward or southward, one encounters the impotence of the British sea power. Everywhere the way is free for land armies.

"The submarine and Zeppelin fear is now added the fear of developments in the Balkans. The English fleet is unable to save Serbia and cannot prevent the march of the armies of the Central Powers to Constantinople any more than it can throw a protecting wall about Egypt. The English fleet proved inadequate when the word was given to destroy the German fleet and starve out Germany; inadequate to conquer the Dardanelles, give breath to Russia, and to ward off the more distant danger that lie in threatening Egypt."

BULGARIAN COASTS MINED.

American Minister at Bucharest So Informs Washington.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The Bulgarian coast on the Aegean and Black Seas has been mined, according to a dispatch today from American Minister Vopicka at Bucharest. He also stated that the port of Dedeaghatch had been closed to navigation since Oct. 1. Bulgarian lighthouses have ceased to operate.

President Wilson today signed a proclamation, giving notice of the neutrality of the United States in the war between Serbia and Bulgaria. The proclamation was along the same general lines as those already issued, covering the wars between other nations.

PETER'S PALACE WRECKED BY A SHELL

THRONE ESCAPED EXPLOSION

Graphic Picture of the Bombarded Serbian Capital as Seen from the Citadel.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.—Leonhard Adelt, the first correspondent to reach Belgrade, wires the Berliner Tageblatt as follows:

"A shell from Semendria struck the heart of the hostile capital, crashing into King Peter's throne room. Entering the second-story balcony window of the yellowish Renaissance palace, it broke through the library floor and appears to have burst in the throne room beneath, in whose yawning emptiness the red upholstered throne seems lost.

"It is as if this bomb had blown the furniture to the winds and hurled books, pictures, letters, and documents over the interior staircase with golden eagles into the foyer below. There they lie in heaps, between bad portraits of King Peter in his coronation regalia, water-colors of court ladies, and visiting cards of 'Conte d'Avala,' as the Crown Prince called himself on the Paris Boulevards. In cabinets are cutglass bottles, plates, &c., intact, and in a washroom are red and blue uniforms dating from the boyhood of the Princes.

"Adjoining the washroom is a chapel with frescoes of sacred subjects, whose windows look into the new park. Where now a young Austrian soldier stands guard, once struck the soulless bodies of King Alexander and Queen Draga, cast from the window on the night of their murder.

"Beyond the modest park is an uncompleted building, a new palace whose future fate armies are now deciding. Opposite the park entrance is the Russian Legation, with a new addition pulverized by a shell. Next to the corner house, into which the field post is just moving, is the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the German Legation, and the Austro-Hungarian Minister's palace. They are sealed and guarded and are undamaged as to their exteriors.

"Nearly all stores are closed, most of their windows having been blown out. Here and there buildings, including all the custom houses and warehouses on the waterfront, the university and the national theatre, have been burned out, but in general the city is intact.

"From the walls of the citadel on whose plateau stand the towers intact and the officers' casino in ruins spreads a panorama of the Danube country that was the battlefield. One sees walls and trenches in which shells tore holes, burned out magazines, sunk pontoons and lighters. One sees a yellow river with motorboats and coal barges. One sees a troop train, cattle, hay, flour bags, ammunition on boats and barges and hears the call of the steersman.

"The Save railway bridge lies in four neat sections in the river with a pontoon bridge nearby as a substitute. Beyond one sees Big and Little Gipsyl Island, whence the Germans pressed toward Belgrade, the Austro-Hungarians crossing the river at our feet."

ARMY TO FIGHT MONTENEGRO.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—It is reported from Frankfort that the Central Powers have decided to undertake still another campaign, this time against Montenegro.

According to this report, forwarded from Amsterdam by a correspondent of the Central News, 20,000 Austrian and German infantrymen, with artillery, have arrived from Galicia at Sarajevo, in Bosnia, about sixty miles north of the Montenegrin border.

These troops, the correspondent says, will soon be dispatched against the Montenegrins, with whom there has been only desultory fighting for months.

Reports Riots in Petrograd.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.).—The Overseas News Agency says: "Private reports from Petrograd state that further riots have taken place there. A crowd led by N. S. Tchekheidze, leader of the Social Democratic Party and a member of the Duma, made a demand for the reopening of the Duma. Cossacks dispersed the rioters and many were wounded."

OFFICIAL WAR REPORTS.

Berlin Claims Progress at Riga—Austrians Take Armored Train.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The German official report says today:

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: Our troops made further progress northeast and northwest of Mitau, and captured several positions of the enemy.

Army Group of Prince Leopold: There is nothing new to report.

Army Group of General von Linsingen: Local battles on the Styr still continue.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20, via London, Oct. 21.—The War Office today issued the following official communication:

Fighting continues in the region of the Mitau road and the environs of Olai, and also at many points in the forest east of Roed.

Our aeroplanes yesterday raided the station of Friedrichshu, southwest of Mitau, and dropped several dozen bombs on the buildings and rolling stock.

On the Dvinsk front the Germans delivered an attack in the region of the road from Dvinsk to Novo Alexandrovsk and toward the south of Lake Medum, but it was repulsed. North of Lake Boginskoye the enemy attacked the village of Ourmitzki. Our fire drove him back.

On the left bank of the Styr our troops have continued their pursuit of the enemy, who is retiring in disorder and scattering through the forest. We captured yesterday after a fight the Mulczicki Farm, south of Mulczicki Village, and repulsed enemy attacks near the village of Soviescitza, on the Styr below Rafalowka, making a further haul of prisoners and machine guns.

From a supplementary report it appears that the officers belonging to the first German grenadier corps reported yesterday as taken prisoners included one battalion commander and his adjutant and seven company commanders. The guns captured included a battery of four howitzers, completely intact, with a large quantity of cartridges.

VIENNA, Oct. 20, (via London, Oct. 21.)—The following communication has been issued by the War Office:

On the Putilowka an infantry scouting party demolished a Russian armored train, the locomotive of which was hit by a shell some 100 yards before our position.

The party seized two machine guns and numerous Japanese firearms and much ammunition and war materials. Otherwise in the northeast there are no events to record.

RUSSIA DENOUNCES FERDINAND AS TRAITOR

Hopes Bulgars Will Not Turn Against Sons of Russia Who Died for Them.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 20.—An Imperial manifesto declaring war against Bulgaria appeared today under date of Oct. 18. It was accompanied by a communication reviewing the friendly services of Russia for Bulgaria in the past, and pointing out the "treachery" of King Ferdinand. This communication says:

"When Turkey and Bulgaria were threatened with war on account of financial relations the Russian Government intervened in an amicable manner. Part of the Turkish debt to Russia was transferred to Bulgaria, whereby the latter, on advantageous conditions, was freed of all obligations to Turkey.

"Thus having realized for Bulgaria its actual independence, Russia further displayed magnanimity toward the Bulgarian people by recognizing Ferdinand as the Bulgarian ruler. While well aware of the real aims of the Coburg Prince, Russia refrained from interference with Bulgaria's internal affairs, firmly believeing that sooner or later the eyes of this emancipated people would be opened and that it would find a way to save itself from the new servitude threatening it.

"The victorious war of the united Balkan peoples against their ancient enemy, Turkey, assured to Bulgaria an honorable place in the Slavic family. But under Austro-German suggestion, contrary to the advice of the Russian Emperor and without the knowledge of the Bulgarian Government, the Coburg Prince, on June 29, 1913, moved Bulgarian armies against the Serbians. This treacherous act of King Ferdinand raised a gulf between two fraternal allied peoples. On this day, a black day for all Slavdom, Ferdinand wrecked the country, but rendered invaluable service to Germany.

"The defeat of Bulgaria and the punishment imposed upon that unhappy country by the Bucharest treaty, which deprived it of almost all the fruits of victory, deeply wounded Ferdinand's self-esteem. He became intent on regaining Macedonia, which he had lost by his own folly, and extending his possessions at the cost of other Balkan States. Consequently he completely and finally subordinated the country to German influence. For an entire year the Allies tried to free the unhappy Bulgarian people from German hands, but Ferdinand remained deaf to all advice."

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A dispatch from the Petrograd correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company says:

"The Official Messenger will tomorrow publish a long communication from the Russian Government concerning the rôle played by Kink Ferdinand, who remained a German Prince, although reigning in Bulgaria. The communication terminates thus:

"During almost thirty years the Prince of Coburg has stood between Russia and Bulgaria. Throughout this period Russia never ceased to hope that its brother people would at last open their eyes. Even now, when Bulgaria sacrifices itself to German perfidy, Russia still has not abandoned the hope that the Bulgarians, faithful to their historic traditions, will not lift their hands against the sons of the Russian warriors who died for Bulgaria."

ZEPPELINS IN THE BALTIC.

One Drives Off a British Submarine Chasing a Steamer.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—As a result of the continued activity of British submarines in the Baltic Sea and the possibility that England may declare a submarine blockade, an official statement reassures the public that the countermeasures of the German Admiralty permit of a confident expectation that the submarines will not succeed in appreciably impairing Baltic shipping, let alone accomplishing the purpose of causing a cessation of shipping.

That these measures may include the use of Zeppelins as first aid to endangered German steamers is indicated by a telegram from Stettin reporting that a German steamer, the Scortia, coming from Sweden, was chased by a British submarine. The Scortia sighted a Zeppelin and signaled her plight. The Zeppelin drove off the submarine, rescuing the Scortia, which safely reached her destination.

on armaments, or materially reduce such payments, to finance the required indemnity.

The second cardinal point is the restoration of Germany's Colonial empire in undiminished form, with certain additions, presumably at the expense of Belgium. That nation would be permitted to retain its independence and territories, with the exception of the Meuse line of fortresses. The demand for annexation of a strip of territory down to the coastline has been dropped; if, indeed, it ever formed part of the Government's program. Even naval experts no longer are agreed on the necessity or advisability of obtaining the much-discussed naval base on the English Channel, particularly in view of the development of submarines and the increase in their radius of action.

An insistent demand is heard in some quarters that in case of withdrawal from Belgium, Germany should retain control of the railroad for a number of years, but this, so far as is ascertainable, is not an essential condition.

France is expected to provide a large part of the expected indemnity. Territorial demands against France apparently are confined to rectifications of the frontier for strategic reasons.

In the East the situation is less clear. Earlier in the war the Government apparently did not contemplate or even desire accessions of territory at Russia's expense, beyond a possible advance of the frontier for strategic reasons to the strong defensive swamp and river line formed by the Bug, Narew and Warta rivers. It was felt that retention of Russian Poland by Russia would present certain advantages from the viewpoint of German internal politics. The steady chain of victories and the insistence of Austria, however, produced a change. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg in his August speech indicated clearly a determination to deprive Russia of her Polish territories, but whether these districts would have some form of national autonomy, be annexed to Austria-Hungary, or administered by Germany and Austria-Hungary jointly is still uncertain.

German People Confident.

This statement of German demands may seem to be a cool assumption of certain ultimate victory at a time when Germany's opponents are announcing their firm determination to prosecute the war to a successful end. However, it is symptomatic of the positive assurance of practically all Germans, who are convinced that the German armies cannot be beaten, and that the Balkan situation soon will clear up in their favor, giving them a road to Turkey, whence copper, cotton, foodstuffs, and other supplies may be obtained. Then, they say, Germany can wait until her opponents are ready to acknowledge themselves beaten.

To all arguments as to the impossibility of keeping the manhood of the nation on the firing line for a protracted period, as to the steadily growing financial burden of the war, as to the paralysis of German business life, except as devoted to war purposes, and as to the general desire for peace, they reply that other nations are suffering equally and that Germany will not be the first to crack.

CHAMPAGNE FIELD A VISTA OF RUIN

GERMAN LOSS PUT AT 150,000

"Impregnable" Positions Easily Rushed, French Soldiers Say, After the Bombardment.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—"We took everything to the edge of the horizon the first day," said an officer standing on the first-line French trench whence a wave of men fifteen miles long rose on the morning of Sept. 25 and dashed on from one to five miles before the tidal rush of soldiery was stopped.

The correspondent in his first view of the field of the great battle in Champagne looked across a rolling land whose thin soil was studded with graves and thickly sprinkled with dwarf pines which stood out against the almost snow-white system of chalk-like redoubts, trenches, traverses, communication ditches and other defensive constructions by which German military science had in vain sought impregnability. The population was meagre in this camp of Châlons, where the French army fought to regain the old review ground which, for a year, has been the theatre of relentless sap warfare. Only the village of Perthes, whose slight cluster of houses has become typical ruins through shellfire, was in sight from the spot.

Important German Supply Line.

Walking over the course of the French advance, the correspondent witnessed the results of the most powerful defense against the most powerful attack of the war. The famous hill, the Butte of Tahure, the occupation of which clinched the French success, resembled a small wooded hill in an Eastern American State. Shells were seen bursting at a distance over the railroad at Somme-Py. Thus this important German transport line has been cut or destroyed by French gun-fire, rendering the railroad useless.

The prodigious labor done by the French before the attack is indicated by the transport road ten miles long and a winding communication ditch six feet deep, six feet broad, and five miles long, which they had cut through chalk of the consistency of soft stone to enable them to move rapidly under the cover of their shell fire for the assault. Though the visit was made three weeks and more after the battle, the ground was still strewn with German shells and hand grenades that had not exploded, and French soldiers were yet gathering and sorting piles of German accoutrements and other war material.

The Dead Buried in Shell Holes.

Here and there, sometimes in a shell hole, sometimes in a dug-out, the German dead had been buried. At one place thirty-four and at another sixteen, as a cross over the common grave revealed, unidentified French dead had also been laid to rest. Close to the cemeteries where were buried Germans who had fallen in preceding battles are newer cemeteries for the French, the graves in both being marked by wooden crosses bearing the names of the fallen. Thus are one-time enemies now sleeping close to one another.

The cross over the grave of one French soldier was surmounted by huge wreaths such as are seen in the cemeteries of Paris, which relatives had sent. In cases where there had not yet been time for the placing of crosses, bottles containing pieces of paper bearing the name of the fallen had been thrust neck downward in the fresh earth of the graves, so that the rains might not render the writing undecipherable. Nearly every cross seen bore the inscription, "Killed on the field of honor." In one case a priest had built a garland bower of pine branches on the hillside for the dead of his regiment.

German Loss Estimated at 150,000.

Considering the immensity of the operation—at least 1,000,000 men were engaged on both sides along the narrow front—it was amazing how apparently small had been the number of French casualties. Officers who had participated in the charge said the German losses had been heavier than the first official estimate, and must have reached 150,000. Twenty-five thousand German prisoners, they said, was a small proportion to the number of Germans killed by the high explosive shells and in hand-to-hand fighting in the trenches.

The barbed-wire front of the first-line trenches had been cut to bits, and it was impossible to live or to make resistance during the preparatory bombardment. Soldiers agreed that the rushing of the first line was a walk-in, there being neither rifle nor machine-gun fire to stop them, so excellent had been the work of the enormous concentration of French artillery. Serious resistance developed at the second line, where the trenches for the entire fifteen-mile sector had not in all places been smashed, and the wire not always cut, so that the advancing troops had to pauses at places and slowly cut their way. By the state of the ugly masses of wires, rusted from a year's rain, the correspondent was able to tell where the tide had advanced, halted and flowed through the opening made before railing on.

'Impregnable' German Position Taken.

The labor that had been expended in constructing the German trenches and fortifications was enormous. It was as if hundreds of thousands of human beavers had never ceased their toil in preparing for their protection. French officers said that the Germans knew that the attack was coming, and thought their positions were impregnable, but were overwhelmed by the number of the French guns and the masses of French troops. The most formidable defense seen by the correspondent was the redoubt Trou Bricot, which had on all sides mitrailleuses, a labyrinth of dungeon-like cellars, and sand-bag galleries, which had been pounded into heaps of earth by the high explosives. The sand-bags had been turned into rags mixed with dust before the position was surrounded by French infantry, which marveiled to find a few men still alive. What few were left had had their senses numbed.

"If we can take that with our guns," said a soldier, "we ought to be able to take anything the Germans can build."

In the midst of what remains of this result of colossal labor and the use of probably 500,000 sandbags, was a mine crater 100 feet deep and 300 feet across, which the French had created by an explosion after the guns had finished their work and just before the infantry charge. Many such mine craters were seen at formidable points along the German and French lines. Significant of German strategy in preparation to receive the attacks was a long ditch through the woods in which the charging French soldiers naturally took cover. At the end the ditch branched into blind alleys, while a concealed machine gun commanded it. "However, we took the gun," said an officer who had led the attack in this section.

Roads and light railways which the Germans had built to supply their trenches with food and material are now used by the French. German trenches are being reversed into French defenses. Deep dugouts made by the Germans twenty feet under a parapet now give the French reserves protection from shell fire. An underground habitation, fitted with lace curtains, tables, and chairs, which German officers had used, is now occupied by French officers. In a dugout labeled 'Schrubstube,' where German soldiers wrote home to Posen or Hanover, French soldiers now write to Marseilles or Bordeaux. Tanned, sturdy "pollus" appeared from burrows of chalk, welcoming the latest newspaper which the correspondent brought and all exhibiting confidence that what they had done once they could do again.

An officer pointed out the spot near a clump of trees where General Marchand, standing on a parapet of one of the German trenches, fell wounded as he was directing the charge toward the next trench. Tales of heroism, showing the qualities of leadership and initiative of both officers and privates, were heard without end, and from the lips of those who had been in the battle. A General of Brigade, who had seized a rifle and led the charge of a regiment after its Colonel had been killed, retrieving a critical situation, has now been promoted to be commander of a division.

On the front line the French and Germans have settled down for the present, their trenches being about the same distance apart as before the battle, this varying from fifty to three hundred yards, according to the ground. Occasionally there are machine gun duels of aeroplanes, seven to eight thousand feet high, the sound of their firing being audible on the ground; or a shell will burst, sprinkling the landscape with its contents during desultory artillery fire, as both sides continue to organize their positions.

52 MUNITIONS WORKERS KILLED IN PARIS BLOW-UP

Many Others Injured Through a Workman's Clumsiness—Victims Mostly Women.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Fifty-two persons are reported to have been killed in an explosion this afternoon in a munitions factory in the Rue de Tolbiac, while one hundred or more were injured. Many of the victims were women workers in the factory, which was wrecked, as were buildings in the vicinity.

President Poincaré and Minister of the Interior Malvy, who were immediately informed of the disaster, visited the scene and gave directions to the rescuing forces.

An automobile truck was being loaded when workmen accidentally dropped one grenade causing an explosion, which was followed by two others in quick succession.

The explosion destroyed not only the main factory and other buildings connected with it, but everything within a radius of 100 yards, and damaged buildings 500 yards distant. The explosion was followed by fire, but the flames were soon extinguished.

Of the forty-one bodies already recovered thirty-one are those of women. Forty injured persons were treated at the emergency hospital, which was quickly installed at the scene. Twenty others were removed to another hospital. It was said that the injured would exceed 100 in number.

Reports that the explosion was the result of the work of spies were absolutely denied.

BRITISH REPULSE ATTACKS NEAR LOOS

Inflict Heavy Losses on Germans Charging the Hohenzollern Redoubt.

BIG GUN DUEL NEAR RHEIMS

French Reply Vigorously to a Bombardment with Heavy Projectiles and Gas Shells.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The checking of a determined German assault upon the Hohenzollern Redoubt and other British positions to the north of Loos, delivered yesterday after a heavy bombardment, is reported by Field Marshal Sir John French. The losses of the Germans, who charged across the open ground under fire from the British big guns, machine guns, and musketry, are said to have been very severe.

Yesterday's artillery and infantry attack upon French positions east of Rheims was followed today by a violent German bombardment, in which gas shells were used, the French guns replying with vigor. Berlin reports the capture of 308 French in yesterday's assault on this front, which is described as "a reconnoitring advance." French artillerymen exploded large ammunition depots in the rear of the German lines.

Sir John French's report is as follows:

An enemy attack yesterday afternoon was made against our front from the quarries at Bulluch. After a heavy bombardment of our trenches, infantry attempted to attack across the open ground, but was completely stopped by our combined artillery, machine gun, and rifle fire.

This was followed by a number of bombing attacks in the neighborhood of the Hohenzollern Redoubt and Fosse No. 8. All these attacks were also repulsed. The enemy's losses were very severe.

Following is the text of the Paris night report:

The artillery actions during the course of the day were particularly violent to the north of Arras, in the sector of Loos, the Givenchy Wood, and in the neighborhood of the road from Lille.

The concentrated fire of our batteries exploded large depots of munitions in the German lines to the north of the Aisne and to the north of the Navarin farm.

To the east of Rheims, on the front which extends from the Butte de Tir to Prunay, a new and very violent German bombardment with shells of all calibres and projectiles of a suffocating nature is reported. Our artillery replied energetically.

There is nothing to report on the rest of the front.

There was no important action in the course of the night.

In the sector of Lihons our artillery directed against the German trenches a repressive bombardment which silenced the machine guns in those trenches, which had been attacking our lines.

In Champagne, in the vicinity of the Butte of Tahure and between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the north of Flirey, the enemy bombarded our positions several times. Our batteries responded with great energy.

The Belgian official communication reads:

The enemy artillery did not display much activity today. There was a feeble bombardment of our advanced posts and of the region around Caeskerke, as well as in the neighborhood of Oudecapelle. Our artillery replied to the German batteries and dispersed some military pioneers to the north of Dixmude.

During a reconnoitring advance northeast of Prunay, in Champagne, we made prisoners of four officers and 364 men, and captured three machine guns and three mine-throwers, together with much material.

At Middelkerke a British flying machine was shot down and the occupants were captured.

Zinn is Still in the Foreign Legion.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Having learned that his name was included in a list of Americans, formerly with the French Army, who were missing, Frederick W. Zinn, of Battle Creek, has sent to Paris from the front a letter asking that the report be corrected. Mr. Zinn, a volunteer in the Second Regiment of the Foreign Legion, was struck by a fragment of a shell in a recent battle in Champagne. He is recovering.

COMMONS CHEER CARSON DEFENSE

Former Minister Explains He Resigned Because He Wanted Decisive Eastern Policy.

NO PERSONAL DISSENSIONS

Premier Asquith Better—Announcement Made That Suvla Bay Commander Was Removed.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—Sir Edward Carson, who resigned his post of Attorney General on Monday, handed the seals of that office to the King yesterday afternoon, and immediately afterward made a statement in the House of Commons which explained the reasons for his resignation. He declared that he had found himself at complete variance with the Cabinet over questions of Near Eastern policy, and he therefore felt that his presence in the Cabinet would be a source of weakness and not of strength.

Sir Edward spoke from his old seat on the front Opposition bench. He stated that he had never had the slightest personal differences with any of his colleagues in the Ministry.

After expressing regret at the absence of Premier Asquith and stating that for this reason he would give a briefer explanation than he had intended, Sir Edward said:

"I am well aware of the difficulties under the existing circumstances of making any full statement or of saying anything that might be taken hold of as showing any signs of weakness or divergence in the main object we have in view—of carrying the war at all sacrifices to a final and conclusive issue. I need hardly say that upon that issue there is not and never has been either in the Cabinet or in this House or in the country any disagreement or divergence of opinion.

"The real unity which the country wants is that steadfast unity of purpose to defeat our enemies and to save our country, and I entirely deny that the fact of holding a divergent view as to the best policy and methods to adopt in the various war theatres in order to bring the war to a successful conclusion is in any sense an element of disunion.

"I have seen criticisms of myself and reasons for my resignation of a very petty and malicious character, attributing the motives to party and political nature.

"I do not desire to deal with these ridiculous assertions except to say now, in the presence of many of my late colleagues, that since I entered the Cabinet I never heard a word of discussion or dispute on those party questions which divided us before the war. In every Cabinet meeting I attended we all devoted our energies wholly and solely to the discussion of questions which arose with reference to the prosecution of the war.

Praises Asquith's Courtesy.

"I also desire to say that during the whole time I have been in the Cabinet I never have had any personal differences either with the Prime Minister, whose unvarying courtesy I desire to acknowledge, or with any one of my late colleagues. May I also add that no one realizes more than I the great difficulties under which we labor owing to the fact that our policy and methods must at all times be adopted in concert and co-ordination with our various allies, and must also be frequently be framed with a view to consulting sentiments and feelings in those neutral countries with whom we remain on friendly terms. This often has been lost sight of by critics of our actions who cannot possibly know the difficulties which arise from time to time.

"Difficulties which have arisen in the eastern war theatres have created a situation, which, to my mind, must necessarily lead to far-reaching results. At the time I entered the Cabinet we already were committed to what may be called the operations in Gallipoli. It is not, of course, my intention to deal either with the inception or the carrying out of these operations, but it must be plain to any observer that the new war theatre in the Balkans created a situation which could not be divorced from our position on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and the statement made in this House by the Foreign Minister, with the sanction of the Cabinet, appeared to me to be an announcement of a policy of the highest importance with regard to our obligations in the Balkans involving our prestige and honor.

"That situation, with all its complications, necessitated, in my opinion, a clearly defined, well-thought-out, and decisive policy on the part of the Government, and, finding myself unable to agree in any respect with what I understood to be laid down as a policy approved by the Government, I felt that my presence in the Cabinet could not be of any use in the critical situation in which we were involved.

"I need hardly say I am not suggesting that my views could possibly be compared with the views of those who have much more experience and greater wisdom in dealing with such situations, but at the same time I held and hold the views I have expressed very strongly, and, I hope the House will believe, conscientiously and patriotically. I did not think that in the circumstances I could be anything but a source of weakness at a time requiring great strength and consistency.

"That is all I can say, and I ask the House to believe that in the course I have taken I have been actuated by no personal or party motive, but that I have acted to the best of my ability solely in the interests of my country."

Sir Edward Carson's speech was punctuated with cheers, and was concluded amid loud cheers.

Suvla Bay Commander Punished.

Cabinet Ministers were again bombarded with war questions in the House of Commons yesterday, but for the most part they managed to escape an intended frontal attack.

In the course of the replies it developed that the officer who commanded the landing of British troops at Suvla Bay, on the Gallipoli Peninsula, has been shelved, and that he holds no command in the army at present, but Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for War, declined to give further information on the ground that it would be against the public interest.

The suggestion made by William Joynson-Hicks, (Unionist,) Member for the Brentford Division of Middlesex, of a policy of reprisals as a deterrent to Zeppelin raids was frowned upon by the War Office, Mr. Tennant remarking that such a policy had always been the subject of considerable contrpversy.

"The Royal Flying Corps," he said, "is a military organization in England for military operations. The dastardly raids by the enemy on undefended towns and defenseless people should not be allowed to divert the energies of this fighting force from its primary military purpose."

The condition of Premier Asquith, who was suddenly taken ill on Tuesday, was described by his physicians yesterday as satisfactory. The following bulletin was given out:

"The Prime Minister passed a satisfactory night. His condition is improved. He will be confined to his room all day."

SAYS ENGLAND IS "IN A HOLE."

Country Knows It Now, Asserts The London Evening Standard.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—"We are in a hole," says the military correspondent of The Evening Standard, in commenting on the present situation. "It is not the first time we have been in a hole, for it was touch and go at Cambrai and Landrecies on Aug. 26, 1914, and again in Flanders a year ago, but we did not know it then. This time we do know it.

"We have lost faith in the ability of our statesmen and in the strategic conduct of the war and in the willingness of the people to support the war. Three or four very serious questions now exercise the minds of politicians and public alike, and threaten to wreck the Government. In France the best-known Minister has resigned; in Russia public opinion is shaken. * * * Four great powers are full of good-will for one another, but each is a law unto itself.

"On the enemy's side we find unity of purpose, singleness of control, and constant willingness to sacrifice everything and to take all risks. The Germans have been held up here and repulsed there, but they can claim that, whereas they have never been badly beaten anywhere since the battle of the Marne, they have added Poland to their conquests, and threaten to overrun Serbia."

The writer goes on to argue that the only way for Great Britain to meet the situation is to cease attacks on her statesmen and face the facts with quiet determination, bearing in mind that, if England is suffering, Germany is suffering more, and that "on the fronts which matter most they (the Germans) are doing no more than holding their own," and are now unable to increase their forces in the field, and soon will be unable to maintain them.

Of the Serbian situation the writer says: "The question of the moment is the extent to which we can or should assist Serbia with reinforcements. Unfortunately the long southern arm of the railway crossing Serbia runs very close to the Bulgarian frontier at several places, and troops are urgently needed to protect this line throughout its length; but to do any real good we must send her at least 200,000 men. If that number is immediately available, well and good; if not, we must remember that it will take time to withdraw men from the western front and get them in action in the Balkans, and therefore we may be in powerless to save Serbia as we were to defend Belgium.

"Moreover, Russia will not be able to do much until the frosts of December render the country passable and the slow equipment of her armies enables them to advance; thus Germany has time to settle Serbia's business unless the Entente powers can quickly land 200,000 men at Saloniki or can deal the Germans such a smashing blow in the west as will cause the immediate withdrawal of all Germanic troops from the Serbian front.

"Some people suggest that we should use our sea power to force Greece to go to the aid of Serbia, but the Serbian Army may yet need an asylum and may not be able to find it in Montenegro, and Greece may join us as soon as we have landed enough troops to give her efficient protection.

"We understand it is munitions and not men that Russia lacks. Her ports are still open. Why should she not send troops by sea to Saloniki or Flanders, where they would meet their munitions and transports?"

SUGGESTS A CARSON PARTY.

Morning Post Says Present Government Shirks Responsibility.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—The Morning Post says in an editorial article:

"The Coalition has failed because it was formed, not on national but on party lines. The men were chosen, not for their qualities but on the basis of proportional representation—so many men for one party, so many for another. The whole thing is rotten, and the best men in the country should unite to make an end of it.

"This might be done by the creation of a national Government selected, not on claims of party but on grounds of efficiency. Here is a work which his Majesty the King might do well to consider, for he ought to know by this time what men are to be trusted to conduct the war with efficiency and courage.

"The party claim must be swept away. Mr. Lloyd George, for example, seems to be as much in earnest as Sir Edward Carson. If they are both patriots and both with the same clear, overmastering end in view, then they would both work together, irrespective of the past. These two men and Lord Kitchener might find others to work with them of the same mettle and might be able to form a small, efficient Cabinet for the purpose of fighting Germany and not for the purpose of keeping two effete political parties in a state of suspended animation.

"What is most urgently required is that those who think with Sir Edward Carson range themselves upon his side and organize themselves into a possible alternative Government, strong enough in men and interests to take over the heavy responsibilities which are being shirked by the present holders of office."

SEES 'A SINISTER MOVEMENT.'

Daily Chronicle Charges a Plot to Oust Asquith and Grey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21. — The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent says:

"I am told Sir Edward Carson's own view is that we ought to send 300,000 men to the Balkans and adopt conscription forthwith. His personal statement, so restrained in tone, so modest, so free from any suspicion of asperity, created a favorable impression in the House, though subsequently in the lobby the members were disposed to revise their first impressions and say its courteous form marked a very artful and adroit performance.

An old Parliamentary hand tells me in his belief Carson is playing a bold hand with a view to future developments, and that his retirement simply is a case of "reculant pour mieux sauter." That may be so; what is certain is that Carson's retirement has not caused a ripple on the surface of public opinion.

"Despite the lull caused by the Asquith's illness symptoms of political unrest are very perceptible. It is useless disguising the fact. There is a sinister movement afoot to get rid of Asquith, Grey, and other Ministers. It is a movement with no authority behind it, originating in newspaper offices and London clubs, and without any national backing.

"If those who promote it think by driving out Asquith and Grey they will be able to get conscription more easily they are laboring under a great delusion. Their initial success would mean the doom, not the dawn, of conscription. What these hotheads may, however, succeed in doing is to cleave the nation in twain."

WOULD DRAFT AUSTRALIANS.

Many Prominent Men Join the New Universal Service League.

MELBOURNE, Sept. 30.—Agitation over the question whether the Australian Commonwealth should adopt conscription has been caused by a manifesto issued recently by the Universal Service League. The league, which has but lately been formed, has established itself in all the States of the Commonwealth, and contemplates a vigorous campaign.

The league has the support of many prominent Australians in every walk of life, but the Federal Government has not thus far signified what its position is either toward the league or toward conscription. It is presumed that it will await action by the Imperial Government in regard to compulsory military service. It is held that until England herself declares for conscription there is no occasion for any of the overseas dominions to do so.

NO NOBEL PRIZES THIS YEAR

Committee Said to Have Heard That English Candidate Was Slain

It is reported that a prominent English scientist was placed as a candidate, but that the committee received news that he had fallen in battle.

WOULD ASK EUROPE TO QUIT AMERICAS

C. H. Sherrill Wants Us to Seek Freedom for Colonies on This Hemisphere.

THINKS THIS THE RIGHT TIME

BUFFALO, Oct. 20.—Now is the time for the United States to ask European countries to relinquish possession of their colonies in the Americas, according to Charles H. Sherrill, former Minister to Argentina, who made an address along this line before the University of Buffalo today.

"It is very doubtful if ever again the United States will be in a better condition to ask favors of Europe than it is at present," said Mr. Sherrill, in referring to the fact that European nations were seeking financial assistance in this country, and he asserted that the United States owed it to her sister republics to ask Europe "to release to the sovereignty of the peoples themselves all colonial territory in the Western Hemisphere."

Mr. Sherrill's subject was "Buffalo and Her Opportunity in Pan-Americanism," but after referring to the local pride that Buffalo had in Pan-Americanism by reason of the fact that she was the first among the cities of the United States to hold a Pan-American Exposition, and, further, that it was at Buffalo's doors that the recent "A B C" conference was held, the speaker outlined his proposition of asking Europe to release her hold on her American colonies, and went so far as to suggest that if financial considerations were involved, the United States might meet the cost.

The speaker did not make it entirely clear whether he would include Canada in the bargaining for independence, saying only: "Canada can have her independence whenever she likes it, but continues her connection with the British Empire by her own volition." Mr. Sherrill spoke more particularly of Dutch Guiana, British Honduras, and such European colonies. He said in part:

"Let us give a glance backward before looking forward, and consider for a moment the condition in which Pan-Americanism finds itself today, and the path by which it has advanced. For us of the most northerly republic, Pan-Americanism has always been linked with the Monroe Doctrine, which doctrine is not only an important international fact, but also one founded upon a great principle.

"The next logical step, after the general recognition across the ocean of the Monroe Doctrine, was that our fellow-American republics should come to agree that the Monroe Doctrine ought to be a continental one, in those responsibilities they must join with us, so that the doctrine should no longer be unilateral, and its operation (defensive or otherwise) be left to us alone. That step in advance has already been taken, thanks to the success of the A B C mediation in preventing a war between the United States and Mexico.

"Pan-Americanism has produced a practical method for conserving international peace in this hemisphere, but can it not also produce an equally practical method of insuring peace for this hemisphere with Europe? I believe that there is such a step, and that now is the psychological moment to take it. Last December our South American friends initiated a joint effort to disembarrass all Pan-American waters from armed conflict between outsiders—an excellent suggestion and formulated in practical terms, as might be expected from nations so long trained in the study of international questions, a field which has interested our own people but recently.

"Our South American brothers objected to the naval battle off the Falkland Islands being fought in Pan-American waters, but if those islands had been returned to Argentina, to which they are allied by propinquity and origin, they could not have been used as a naval base by a European power, and the battle of the Falkland Islands would have been fought elsewhere.

"The time is ripe for such a request to free the soil of all the Americas, and none knows it better than the European Governments. We are being asked to list on our exchanges many of their securities, a privilege which every foreign Government controls, and for the concession of which they always require compensation. Let any one who doubts this statement study why Argentine bonds lost their quotation on the Paris Stock Exchange a few years ago, and how that quotation was regained, or inquire into any one of many similar episodes abroad. In compensation for opening our exchanges to all these European securities, which means opening our pockets to Europe, it is our duty to our fellow-American republics and to our children's children so that they may enjoy in peace their inherited liberties—it is our duty, I say, to complete and round out the immunity from entangling foreign allies, proposed by Washington and Monroe, by asking our European friends to liberate all territory in any of the Americas now held by them."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Official Washington was much interested in the remark at Buffalo today of Charles H. Sherrill. Officials who read his speech doubted, however, that European nations having possessions in the Western Hemisphere would look with favor upon a plan such as suggested by Mr. Sherrill. None seemed to agree that the time was ripe for the United States to request the European nations to relinquish their possessions.

RED CROSS DAY IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Oct. 20. — Throughout the British Isles tomorrow, "Our Day," efforts will be made to raise a great fund for the work of the British Red Cross Society and the Order of St. John of Jerusalem.

King George has subscribed $25,000, and by the sale of badges and many other articles, it is expected that a very large sum will be realized. Many of the theatres are to give the total receipts of their afternoon and evening performances, and the owners of big game preserves have sent game into the city to be sold to the highest bidders. There will also be special concerts and exhibitions, the receipts from which will be turned over to the fund.

Since the commencement of the war upward of $10,000,000 has been raised by these societies, not including the funds recently collected in the colonies.

DU PONT SHARES LEAP.

Advance on Report of Powder Contracts for $100,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 20.—A report, which was said to be based on good authority, that the du Pont Powder Company had obtained powder contracts in excess of $100,000,000, the powder to be delivered by 1917, today sent the new du Pont common stock up to $410 a share, with little for sale at that price. This is equivalent to $920 a share for the original common stock, which had a par value of $100 a share.

It is probable that a number of new units will be added to some of the present powder plants. Plans are under consideration for the construction of a smokeless powder plant at Hopewell, Va., generally known as the City Point plant.

MINE ACTIVITY AT GALLIPOLI.

Five English Sappers Buried Three Days by an Explosion.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—A British official communication dealing with the operations on the Gallipoli Peninsula, made public tonight, says:

"The General Officer commanding the Mediterranean expedition reports that during the last week there has been little to report as regards the opeartions above ground, but that on both sides mining activity has been considerable.

"At Hill 60 the Turks exploded a mine at an evidently predetermined hour. Unfortunately for the enemy, the mine exploded beneath his own lines and entanglements, causing much damage to his own trench, but none to ours.

"In another part of our line the enemy succeeded in exploding a mine under our trenches. The garrison, however, had already been withdrawn, but five of our miners working underground were buried and given up as lost. Three days later, having dug themselves out, they reappeared, little the worse for their ordeal."

BIG GUNS FOR NEW SHIPS.

Navy Considering the 16-Inch Type for Dreadnoughts of Future.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—From a high naval source it was learned today that the department was considering the advisability of mounting 16-inch guns on the next group of dreadnought battleships to be authorized by Congress. The ordnance experts of the navy have designed and built a model naval gun of 16 inches bore. The diameter of this weapon is two inches greater than that of any gun now mounted in the navy, and an inch greater than the latest guns which have been mounted on some of the more recent ships of the British Navy, including the Queen Elizabeth.

Whether the new gun will be used on the dreadnoughts will depend first on the General Board, of which Admiral Dewey is President.

The army has decided—the determination having been reached last Summer—to mount nothing but 16-inch guns in coast defenses in the future, that is, nothing but 16-inch guns for direct firing, in addition to the mortars and howitzers for high-angle firing.

Ordinarily, it was pointed out today, it might not be thought wise to introduce 16-inch guns into the armament of dreadnoughts. The battle range today is from 6,000 to 8,000 yards, and the 14-inch gun is considered in about as effective at these ranges as the 16-inch, while more of the 14-inch guns can be mounted. The latest American dreadnoughts are each to mount twelve of the 14-inch guns. Not more than eight of the 16-inch guns can be placed on a dreadnought on account of increasing the ship's displacement.

Without the aid of aerial adjuncts battle ranges will be regulated by the distance at which an enemy's ship can be seen. The 16-inch gun, it is estimated, has an extreme range of about twenty-five miles. Two fleets, twenty-five miles apart, would be invisible to one another. Thus the 16-inch gun could not be used for its extreme range in a naval battle without some means for indirect firing.

A high navy official said today that experts were now calculating upon longer battle ranges through the aid of aviation. He pointed out that plans were being worked out for the use of balloon spotters, for sending men aloft in dirigibles, from which they might observe the position of an enemy's vessels below the horizon. It is thought this can be done and the range sent to the defending fleet by radio-telegraphy. It then would be possible for naval vessels to fight battles by indirect fire at much greater distances than are possible under older methods of warfare.

ASKS AID OF COLLEGES.

Americanization Committee Wants Students Prepared.

The co-operation of 150 universities and colleges in the "America First" campaign was invited yesterday by the National Americanization Committee, which was organized by a large group of prominent men and women on Oct. 15, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor, to develop ideals of American citizenship, efficiency and the civilian side of preparedness throughout the country. Accompanying the requests sent to the many educational institutions for aid in the work, the committee inclosed a definite and thoroughly worked-out course for the educational campaign.

"It is an emergency call," says the committee, summarizing the chief objects of the movement, which is being directed from the headquarters of the organization at 20 West Thirty-fourth Street, "and it is believed that if the colleges can prepare students for politics, finance and social service they may well prepare them for the work of Americanization, which includes all these things."

Does not Favor a Federal Monopoly, but Demands More Competition.

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 20.—What the navy expects to do toward preventing private manufacturers reaping excessive profits on the expenditure of hundreds of millions involved in the Administration's national defense program was outlined here today by Secretary Daniels in a speech at the North Carolina State Fair. Mr. Daniels said his annual report to Congress would recommend legislation to enable the Government to equip itself to build more naval craft, make its own armor plate, and greatly extend its manufacture of munitions.

"The Government has invested many millions of dollars in navy yards," said the Secretary, "and unless this investment is utilized for new construction much of it is wasted. If the Government is prepared to construct naval craft, private shipbuilding companies desiring contracts must compete with Government yards. This tends to secure competitive prices and prevent combinations between private corporations to charge higher prices than conditions justify.

"Not only must the yards be able to build ships, but naval establishments should be equipped to manufacture a portion of all munitions of war."

In this connection Mr. Daniels pointed out that the Government paid 80 cents a pound to a private manufacturer a few years ago for making powder, but the navy now was making it at a cost of about 25 cents a pound. Torpedoes and mines, he said, also were being manufactured by the navy at a great saving of money.

"These cases could be multiplied," he added. "Do not understand me to advocate any monopoly by the Government in the manufacture of munitions. There are many things we can buy from private manufactures at a reasonable price. The navy, however, should be free to make a large part of its own munitions if private concerns charge excessive prices, as has sometimes been the case when the Government is shut up to buy from only two or three manufacturers.

Saving in Armor Plate.

"It has been ascertained by a special commission that the navy with a modern plant can manufacture armor plate from $230 to $260 as against the non-competitive prices of $425 to $486 a ton charged in the last contract. Experience in Europe teaches that the navy should not longer rely upon private manufacturers for projectiles. And, if Congress approves we will erect a large factory which will turn out a large product of fourteen-inch armor-piercing shells, as well as smaller projectiles. This will insure better shells and better competition."

The Secretary particularly directed the attention of Southern farmers to the lack of ships in the American merchant marine to carry their produce abroad.

"What the navy needs and, in case of trouble, would need sorely," he added, "are auxiliaries properly built and equipped with trained Americans. A merchant marine with foreign crews is not an American need, either for commerce or defense."

Scientific Naval Program.

Explaining why a five-year building program for the navy was decided upon Mr. Daniels said:

"Wise men, in and out of the navy, believe that the program, involving an expenditure of $500,000,000, will give us a navy well proportioned and far better than so large a program if it should be authorized in piece-meal, year by year. The program is based upon all that could be learned by naval experts in Europe and our naval statesmen in America."

Hope that an international understanding eventually might be reached by the naval powers was expressed by the Secretary. "I trust," he said, "that this country will take the initiative and that steps will be taken by a conference of all the powers to discuss reduction of the heavy cost of the army and navy."

EMPLOYERS OFFER ARMY AID.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20. — Indorsements of the Administration's plan to create a great Continental army for defense are beginning to reach Washington from large employing firms and corporations. It was learned tonight that approving letters had been received from several such concerns, and that at least one had expressed willingness to grant to its men leave on full pay for service in the proposed organization.

Enlistments in the Continental army as contemplated in Secretary Garrison's program would be for six years, but the men actually would be required to serve only two months a year for the first three years, during which time they would undergo intensive military training in field camps. Officials realize that the success of the scheme depends to a considerable extent on the co-operation of the employers of the country's young men.

One of the companies wrote that it would gladly grant leave with pay to any of its men desiring to enlist, not only for reasons of patriotism, but because it was regarded as a good business proposition to permit the men to take advantage of an opportunity to spend two months in vigorous camp life with military training.

Further details of the army program became known tonight. To obtain officers for the increase in the regular establishment, the addition of 144 cadets to the present corps at West Point would be recommended, bringing the corps up to the full capacity of the academy, 770 men. By this means promotion of qualified men from the ranks and appointment to the regular service of graduates from military schools whose courses are approved by army officers, at least 1,000 officers soon can be added.

URGES MORE NAVY AIRCRAFT.

Alan R. Hawley Thinks Appropriation Should Be $20,000,000.

Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, with which is affiliated twenty-six other aeronautical organizations, said yesterday that the contemplated appropriation of $6,000,000 for aviation equipment in the estimate of $500,000,000, which it is proposed to spend during the next five years in increasing the United States Navy, was less than one-third the amount really needed.

In support of his criticism, he quotes Senator Duncan U. Fletcher of Florida, who has gone into the needs of the navy in a thorough manner, and who insists that at least 676 aeroplanes of all kinds are needed before the navy is properly equipped.

"Instead of $6,000,000 spread over a period of five years," Mr. Hawley said yesterday, "the navy needs not less than $20,000,000 with an initial expenditure of $7,500,000 to start its aerial equipment. To properly protect our coasts and give our navy the greatest efficiency, there should be thirty-three aeronautical stations on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, the Panama Canal, and our island possessions. These should have not less than twelve aeroplanes apiece, making a total of 396. Then there should be not less than 80 aeroplanes on floating bases. These bases should consist of cruisers capable of making better than thirty knots, who would act just as the 'mother ship' does for submarines and would carry not less than 16 aeroplanes apiece.

"Fifty machines would be necessary for the aviation schools, and there should be a reserve for the schools in case of breakage. In addition, 150 aeroplanes would be required for merchant vessels converted into scouts or supply ships, making a total of 676, before it could be even thought that the navy had begun to be properly equipped.

"The recent naval manoeuvres were conducted without aeroplanes and were on the lines of war that were correct ten years ago. None of the manoeuvres would have been possible if they had used aeroplanes, as every naval officer knows. The British abandoned their manoeuvres two years ago, because they found that it was impossible to hide from the fliers. The attacking fleet knew all about the defenders and vice versa, with the result that the manoeuvres became a joke.

PLAN NAVAL RESERVE WEEK.

Move to Organize 30,000 Ex-Members of the Navy for Defense.

Plans for a campaign to round up 30,000 former bluejackets and officers of the navy now in civilian life in this country and weld them into an organized, coherent reserve body for the service of the nation in case of war were discussed at a meeting of the Naval Reserve Committee of the Navy League of the United States at the Recess Club, 60 Broadway, yesterday afternoon. As part of the campaign, a naval reserve week is to be held simultaneously in all parts of the country early in December, in conjunction with the week of national defense celebrations planned by the Navy League and its woman's section, during which each member of the league and the woman's section will be asked to obtain the registration of at least one former bluejacket or officer in the Naval Reserve.

Committees will also be organized in every seaport and lake city to ascertain the number, speed, and tonnage of the ships, yachts, motor boats, &c., which would be available for use as auxiliaries to the navy.

Members of the Naval Reserve Committee are Henry H. Ward, J. P. Morgan, C. L. Poor, W. A. Clark, Ambrose Cramer, Samuel Insull, Henry B. Joy, A. E. Lamberton, R. A. Long, J. Stauff Blackton, and Ralph Beaver Strassburger.

Among the New York men who have volunteered for active committee work in response to the inquiries of the Navy League are Robert W. Watson, A. B. Humphrey, Walter Damrosch, Charles H. Sherrill, Elbridge G. Snow, James A. Burden, Charles P. Steinmetz, James B. Ford, James Speyer, Samuel Thorne, Jr., Frederick G. Delafield, and Chester W. Chapin.

O'GORMAN FOR BIGGER NAVY.

Thinks Daniels's Program Will Have the Nation's Support.

Referring to the plans outlined by the Navy Department Senator James A. O'Gorman gave out this statement yesterday:

"The naval program is inspiring and is sure to have the support of the nation. The recommendations of Secretary Daniels evince an intelligent and patriotic conception of the country's needs and make ample provision for a naval increase which, with an adequate army, will preserve the peace and security of the United States. We can no longer ignore the necessities which new world conditions have imposed upon us. If we would escape the disaster that has fallen upon other nations, we must at once provide an adequate naval and military establishment."

WOULD USE PISTOL TO RULE SOLDIERS

General O'Ryan Says It May Be Necessary to Enforce Discipline on Troops.

CRITICISES MILITIA SYSTEM

Tells the Technology Club That Men Must Be Trained to Lose Initiative and Forget Fear.

Major General John F. O'Ryan, commanding the New York National Guard, told the members of the Technology Club at their fifth "war luncheon" yesterday that the greatest value of a trained soldiery came from the process which made them mere automatons, trained to do the bidding of their officers. The first thing that must be done, he said, is to destroy all initiative, and that, with the training, fits men to be soldiers.

"The war in Europe," he said, "has demonstrated that the conduct of war requires absolute co-ordination, unity of purpose and absolute command. In this country we are very much better off for material things than we are for soldiers. The recruit does not know how to carry out orders. His mental state differs from that of the trained soldier, who obeys mechanically. We must get our men so that they are machines, and this can be done only as the result of a process of training.

"When the feeling of fear—the natural instinct of self-preservation—comes over a man there must be something to hold him to his duty. We have to have our men trained so that the influence of fear is overpowered by the peril of an uncompromising military system, often backed up by a pistol in the hands of an officer. We must make the men unconsciously forget their fear. All these matters of standing at attention and 'Sir, I have the honor to report,' are valuable to put him through the biological and social process by which he becomes a soldier.

"That is the reason why we cannot have any military force simply by having dinners and entertainments. The recruits have got to put their heads into the military noose. They have got to be 'jacked up'—they have got to be 'bawled out.'

"It is a principle of military tactics that a second-rate tactical plan, loyally supported and efficiently carried out, is more successful than the best possible plan not carried out in that manner. Our military organizations are getting more of the spirit of discipline every year. Regiments which formerly were composed of stout business men are now filled with slim-waisted, athletic young men, who are ready for business.

"The great weaknesses of the militia, or the National Guard, are legal defects. The greatest defect is that the President and Congress have not the power to send the militia outside of the continental limits of the United States before the guardsmen change their status to that of volunteers. Therefore, at the outbreak of war, there is a delay because of this change of status. In other words, we have soldiers to a limited extent, and that violates the military principle that there should be no limitations. That defect is not peculiar to the United States, however. The German Emperor has not the power to send troops outside of Europe. A Japanese officer told me recently that it was practically impossible for his country to send troops to Europe. The men must first volunteer, and that has not enough interest in European affairs individually to cause them to give up their homes and families and go abroad.

"A second defect is that the National Guard of the forty-eight States constitutes forty-eight little armies, each with its own ideals and methods. In most of the States the National Guard is run by an Adjutant General who is a political officer. Viewing the matter broadly, this proposition of forty-eight little armies violates the military principle of unity of control. It must be a one-man power."

Colonel Lucas of the Twenty-second Regiment of Engineers urged the members of the Technology Club to join his regiment, service in which, he said, would fit them for valuable military service and would qualify many of them for officers' positions.

ITALIANS PUSH WAR TO AID THE SERBS

Berlin Reports, However, That They Have Been Decisively Defeated on the Isonzo.

ALSO BEATEN AT GORIZIA

But Their Capture of Positions in Trentino Are Said to Threaten Riva and Rovereto.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (via London.)—The Tageblatt's war correspondent in the Austrian Southwestern theatre says:

"The third Isonzo battle is in progress. A decision has already been reached at the points where the Italians made their strongest attacks. They were compelled to flee on the front between Kargreit and Tolmino, leaving piles of dead. The Italians have also met with heavy losses before Gorizia and on the Doberdo Plateau.

"They have not the slightest prospect of obtaining a better result by repeating the attacks. They appear to be preparing for an attempt at a forward movement in Carinthia and Tyrol, where a heavy bombardment is under way."

On the Izonso front yesterday there was an uninterrupted cannonade against our positions. The violent sunfire against the Doberdo Plateau increased during the afternoon.

In the Krn region Italian infantry attacked the Tolmino Bridgehead and subsequently Monte Sabotino and Monte San Michele and east of Vermigliano. They were everywhere repulsed, losing heavily.

Big engagements also developed on the Tyrolean front near Tressassi, and on the Vielgereuth Plateau. Our troops repulsed two attacks in each sector.

In Judicaria, where recently there has been increased activity, our advanced detachments retreated to the main line of resistance.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (by Wireless to Sayville, L. I.)—The official statement issued yesterday by the Austrian War Office, after describing the repulse of several Italian attacks, says:

VERONA, Oct. 20.—The Italian offensive along the Tyrolean front is believed here to be the beginning of the execution of the plan of General Cadorna, Chief of the Italian General Staff, for an invasion of Austrian territory, which he is declared always to have held to be the best way of assisting Serbia.

The capture by Italian forces of Pregasina threatens Riva, while the taking of the Brentisco Castle, Dosso, 2,500 feet above it, threatens Rovereto, meaning Italian command of the route to Mori and the railway to Trent.

The results of this offensive movement thus far are held here to indicate that the Austrians may be obliged to triple their forces to meet it.

NEW ITALIAN WAR TAXES.

ROME, Oct. 20, (via Paris.)—A royal decree has been issued creating new taxes and increasing the existing taxes for the duration of the war. Those persons exempted from military service, except for total physical disability, must pay an annual tax of 6 lire, ($1.20,) plus a surtax of from 6 to 8,000 lire, ($800,) according to their income. Directors of stock companies must pay an income tax, on a graduated scale, of 5 per cent. on incomes of $2,500 and 20 per cent. on those over 40,000 lire, ($8,000.)

Special stamp dues are provided for, as well as increased taxes, on Government concessions and land. Certain telegraphic and postal rates have been raised.

UDINE, Italy, Oct. 20.—King Victor Emmanuel today held a council with Lieut. Gen. Count Cardona, Chief of the General Staff, and General Porro, the Under Chief of the General Staff, and Admiral the Duke of the Abruzzi.

Nothing has become known as to the subjects discussed or the decisions arrived at, but it is inferred from the presence at the council of the Duke of the Abruzzi, who is Commander in Chief of the Italian Fleet, that Italy's participation in the Balkan campaign was the subject of the deliberations.

EAGER TO FIGHT TURKS.

Albanians and Armenians in Italy Want to Go to Balkans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 20.—All Albanians living in Italy, numbering about 200,000 descendants of those Albanians who left their country at the time of Scanderbeg declare themselves ready to contribute a contingent to fight on the side of the Allies in the Balkan expedition.

Not because they have any special sympathy for Serbia, but they wish to again face the eternal enemy of their race, Turkey, and frustrate the Bulgarian plan to stretch across the Balkans from the Black Sea to the Adriatic.

All Armenians residing in Italy also support enthusiastically any undertaking against Turkey.

MONTH'S WORK OF U-BOATS.

Berlin Announces 29 Merchant Ships Were Sunk in September.

BERLIN, Oct. 19, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, N. Y., Oct. 21.)—The Overseas News Agency today gave out the following item for publication:

"During September German submarines sank twenty-nine enemy merchant ships of 103,316 tons, transports aggregating 18,949 tons, and seven trawlers of 1,200 tons. By mines were destroyed six enemy merchant ships of 20,612 tons. Altogether these vessels aggregate 144,977 tons, which is the best proof that the English report that the activity of our submarines has ceased on account of losses is incorrect."

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Official announcement was made today that the total number of British merchant vessels, exclusive of fishermen, sunk by submarines to Oct. 14 was 183. The number of fishing vessels sunk to that time was 175.

SKINNER MAY KEEP HIS POST

Daily Mail Hears the Consul General Will Return to London.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—Mr. Skinner, the United States Consul General in London," says The Daily Mail, "is sailing for the United States from Falmouth today on the Holland-America liner Rotterdam. Mrs. Skinner accompanies him. We are informed that the Consul General is expected to return to England and resume his official duties at the end of six or seven weeks.

"His visit to the United States is believed to be exclusively for the purpose of consultation with the trade division of the State Department."

BAGDAD THREATENED BY BRITISH FORCES

East Indian Expedition Reported Only a Few Miles from the City.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—It is unofficially reported from Mesopotamia that the British are within a few miles of Bagdad.

Until last night's announcement the most recent news to come from the seat of operations of the Anglo-Indian force in Mesopotamia was imparted in the House of Commons on Sept. 29 by Austen Chamberlain, Secretary of State for India—for it is the Indian Office which is directing the campaign.

It was then stated that General Sir John Eccles Nixon, who was in command of the whole force and the leader of the column operating on the Tigris, had defeated the Turks near Kut-el-Amasa and caused them to retreat on Bagdad, 90 miles to the northwest. It had been previously reported that Major Gen. George Gorringe, (a cousin of the late Commander Gorringe, U. S. N., who brought over from Egypt "Cleopatra's Needle," now in Central Park,) operating on the Euphrates, had, on July 1, reached a point on that river only 75 miles southeast of Bagdad. He had refrained from advancing further owing to a curious strategic obstacle which had confronted Sir John.

This was that the Turks at Kut-el-Amasa has threatened to leave the river, and, by a detour in the direction of Persia, get in the rear of the Tigris column. By a series of outpost engagements, lasting nearly a week, Sir John had finally, on Sept. 27, engaged the entire force confronting him, capturing 1,650 men, slaying and wounding 5,000, and putting the rest to flight in the direction of Bagdad, as has already been stated.

This left Gorringe seventy-five miles and Sir John ninety miles from Bagdad, proceeding by two routes, with a desert of fifty miles between, and converging upon the famous City on Caliphs.

BRITISH MUNITIONS OUTPUT QUADRUPLED

Army Now Amply Supplied as Result of Lloyd George's Work.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The success attending the appointment of David Lloyd George as Minister of Munitions is testified to today by the Times's parliamentary correspondent, who says that the production of munitions has increased fourfold, and in one highly important branch, over thirtyfold.

"The Ministry of Munitions," the correspondent adds, "justified itself in the recent heavy fighting on the French front. There were no complaints this time of advances having to be stopped for lack of ammunition. A prodigious amount of high explosives was shot away in the advance to Loos, but still the supply was not exhausted. The authorities at home received no complaints whatever from the Generals in the field. When the fighting ceased they had a great deal more ammunition left than they expected, and in certain departments there was actually a greater quantity ready for the gunners at the end of the struggle than at the beginning, which proves excellent transport arrangements.

"It is a feather in the cap of Mr. Lloyd George, who set himself up in an old-fashioned house in Whitehall with two chairs, a table, and a secretary, and in a short interval has created a wonderful organization at the Ministry of Munitions. Gathered around him is, perhaps, the strongest company of business and scientific brains that has ever been applied to any Government department in this country.

"At present 1,000 industrial works and factories have been scheduled as controlled establishments, and the number of men employed in them is little short of 1,000,000. In addition, 5,000 skilled soldiers have been released for munition work.

"The unlimited supply of munitions which the army requires, however, has been by no means reached yet. The labor problem still presents difficulties which the Ministry is now devoting special attention to. The personnel of the Department also is being constantly strengthened.

Colonel Arthur H. Lee, former Civil Lord of the Admiralty, becomes a secretary of the Munition Minister, charged with the duty of co-ordinating the work of the Ministry with that of the army in the field. Sir Leo C. Chiozza Money has been appointed Parliamentary private secretary to Mr. Lloyd George.

ENGLAND TRIES OUT NEW TYPE OF AIRSHIP

Noiseless Craft Speeds Along Before Londoners, Ready to Meet Next Zeppelins.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Oct. 21.—The Daily Express says this morning:

"The Admiralty yesterday afternoon announced that Londoners would have an opportunity of seeing Great Britain's mystery ship of the air on her trial flight over the metropolis.

"At 3:48 P. M. a small, dark, cigar-like shape was suddenly discerned over the Thames traveling at considerable speed eastward and apparently following the course of the river. It seemed to be flying at a much greater height than the Zeppelins, whose two recent visits to the London district were observed by the same Daily Express watcher. Its altitude, indeed, might have been 10,000 feet or more. The engines were inaudible, even to the keenest ears. The airship seemed to be somewhat smaller than the German machine."

ARMENIANS THANK POPE.

Patriarch is Grateful for Benedict XV.'s Plea to the Sultan.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 20.—The news that the Patriarch of the Armenians had thanked the Pope for his intervention in favor of the Armenians in Turkey was received here with great satisfaction, as it was thought that had the Papal remonstrance to the Sultan had no effect the Patriarch would have kept silence.

The agitation in favor of the Armenians has not ceased, however, as the people here have had too much experience with Turkish promises to believe the danger of outrages over.

The plan of an Armenian Captain to organize a corps of his countrymen from all countries to fight the Turks was received with enthusiasm here, and he would have no difficulty in getting volunteers among the Armenians in Italy.

HONORS JEWISH SOLDIERS.

Germany Gives Officers Commissions and Confers Iron Crosses.

BERLIN, Oct. 20, (by Wireless Telegraph to Sayville, L. I.)—Two hundred and eighty-six Jews in the German Army have been promoted to be officers, and 4,000 Jewish soldiers in the army have been decorated with Iron Crosses, 16 of them with the Iron Cross of the First Class, according to an Overseas News Agency announcement today.

Kaiserin's Birthday Is "Jam Day."

SUFFRAGISTS LOOK TO THE LEGISLATURE

Beaten by 51,000 in Vote of More Than 300,000, They Start New Campaign.

WILL FIGHT AT TRENTON

Hope to Get Law Passed Permitting Them to Vote at Presidential Primaries in 1916.

Revised returns from the New Jersey woman suffrage election with 113 out of a total of 1,891 voting precincts missing give a majority of 48,850 against the constitutional amendment, which would have given women in that State the right to vote.

The total vote cast for the amendment in the districts already heard from was 125,803. The total vote against was 174,-153. Should the same ratio hold good throughout the missing 113 election districts, the vote cast for the amendments would be 133,203 and the vote against, 184,397, giving a total vote of 317,600 in the entire State and a majority against the amendment of 51,194. This is within 1,000 votes of the figure given in the returns printed in THE TIMES yesterday morning.

Developments yesterday indicated that despite the decisive defeat which was administered by the voters at the polls, the leaders in the woman suffrage organizations in New Jersey intend that the enfranchisement of women shall remain an issue in that State. The opening gun in a suffrage campaign along new lines was fired in Newark yesterday, even before the full extent of the disaster that befell the suffrage cause at the polls was known.

Suffragists Have New Plan.

The new plan of the suffragists contemplates a campaign on the doorstep of the New Jersey Legislature with a view to getting the lawmakers to enact a statute to give the women the right to vote for Presidential Electors next Fall. In this campaign the woman suffrage leaders will have assistance from their sisters in other States. Mrs. William Post of California and Miss Mary Green of Cleveland, Ohio, who have been in New Jersey to assist the Woman's Political Union in the fight for the woman suffrage amendment, announced in Paterson yesterday that headquarters would be established at Trenton within a few days from which the fight to secure Presidential suffrage for the women would be conducted.

This suggests that the suffragists of New Jersey would ally themselves with those who are seeking an amendment to the Federal Constitution and they will labor with the delegates to the National Conventions of the leading parties next year with a view to having a plank indorsing a woman suffrage amendment national in scope enacted and submitted to the various States.

The eleven States where women already have the ballot, the advocates of this plan say, would give them the nucleus of a support were such an amendment to be submitted to the various States.

Open Air Meeting in Newark.

The southern apex of Military Park in Newark, the very spot where the Victory Van Band of suffrage orators held forth before woman suffrage met its Waterloo, was the scene of the first battle in the new campaign. Mrs. Mina C. Van Winkle, President of the New Jersey Branch of the Woman's Political Union, and a number of her lieutenants in the suffrage movement went there yesterday in an automobile from which the green, white, and purple of the Union fluttered quite as gayly as before the battle of the ballots had resulted in shattered hopes. From their motor car they addressed a large crowd at their first open air rally. The meeting had been arranged for at a midnight conference held by the suffragists, while the avalanche of adverse reports was coming in to their various headquarters.

Besides Mrs. Van Winkle, the speakers were Mrs. Frank H. Sommer, President of the Newark branch of the Woman's Political Union; Mrs. Helen Hoy Greeley, a New York lawyer; Mrs. Helen Hill Weed of Washington, D. C., a daughter of Congressman Ebenezer J. Hill of Connecticut; Miss Elsie Marie, Mrs. Warrington Lawrence of Roselle, N. J.; Mrs. Leka Churchill of Colorado, Mrs. Ella Reeve Bloor of Ohio, and Miss Viola Dean. Miss Dean acted as Chairman of the meeting, and introduced Mrs. Bloor as the first speaker.

Mrs. Bloor said she was proud to be the first speaker to open the new campaign in New Jersey. She expressed confidence that "underneath the soil of political corruption" that caused Tuesday's temporary reverse, "the seed of a new, clean citizenship" was sown.

"This is only one battle," said Mrs. Greeley, "nothing more than the preliminary battle in the open between the suffragists and the interests that are against them. We have brought them out in the open. We know now as everybody in the country will know today what those interests are. We are in the fight to stay. It is the opening of a campaign that will go on Winter, Summer, Spring, and Autumn—go on until we win by the grace of God."

Attacks on Nugent.

Mrs. Weed attacked James Nugent, the Democratic leader of Essex County, who directed the big fight against the suffragists in Newark and Essex. Nugent had criticised Mrs. Weed for coming into the State to campaign. She declared that she had no apology to make; that she fought for the freedom of women abroad and in Mexico, and that she promised to do it whenever the chance presented itself. She concluded by saying that President Wilson's action in favor of suffrage was but a forerunner of favorable action by Congress on the Federal amendment.

Mrs. Van Winkle launched a broadside at Nugent and what she called his "gang" of anti-suffragists, whom she referred to as "the little veneer to cover up the rottenness of the political leaders who conducted the campaign against us." She declared that there was colonization of voters in Milburn and districts in the eastern and central sections of Newark. She added that "if the election had been an honest one we would have swallowed defeat gracefully."

Won't Have Five Years' Wait.

The revised returns yesterday made it definite that as far as New Jersey is concerned, the suffragists will not be able to have another amendment providing for the enfranchisement of women submitted for at least five years. The Constitutional amendment which was designed to wipe out this restriction went down to defeat by about the same majority as did the woman suffrage amendment.

The suffrage leaders believe that while it would require a Constitutional amendment to give them the right to participate in the election of any candidates, a bill permitting the women to participate in the preferential primaries in the Spring, when the parties in New Jersey will express their choice for the Presidential nomination, could be legally passed by the Legislature.

The suffrage leaders at a conference held after the open air rally decided to launch a campaign with the purpose in view of at once seeking pledges from all candidates for the Senate and Assembly who are to be voted for this Fall that they will support such a measure.

PUSH FEDERAL AMENDMENT.

Congressional Union Hopeful of Action by Next Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The fight for the submission of the Susan B. Anthony constitutional amendment for woman suffrage will be renewed at the next session of Congress with redoubled vigor, following a general strengthening of organizations in all the States. The defeat of suffrage in New Jersey apparently has not daunted or discouraged the militant workers in Miss Alice Paul, Chairman of the National Committee of the Congressional Union for Woman Suffrage, commented today on the result in the President's home State as follows:

"For more than sixty years women have been trying to win suffrage by the State referendum method, advocated by President Wilson. This has meant the expenditure of an enormous amount of energy, of time, and of money. Women are now beginning to feel that the State referendum campaigns in which the question of woman's political freedom is left in the hands of the most ignorant men voters in the State are too wasteful and indirect to be much longer continued. They are turning to the national Government, asking enfranchisement by action of the United States Congress.

"We approach the next session of Congress full of hope that the leverage which the suffrage movement possesses in Congress as a result of the fact that one-fourth of the Senate, one-sixth of the House and one-fifth of the electoral vote for President now comes from suffrage States, will mean the passage of the national suffrage amendment, thus doing away with costly and laborious State campaigns such as has just been unsuccessfully waged in New Jersey."

TO RULE SUFFRAGE MARCH.

Miss Ethel Stebbins to be Grand Marshal of Saturday's Parade.

The Grand Marshal of the suffrage parade on Saturday will be Miss Ethel Stebbins, it was announced last night by the Empire State Campaign Committee.

Miss Stebbins is a daughter of Henry G. Stebbins, Vice President of the New York Stock Exchange and member of Congress during the civil war. She is a Cornell graduate and President of the Alumnae Association, and acts as Vice Chairman of the Twenty-fifth Assembly District of the Woman Suffrage Party. On parade she will wear a white suit and an official suffrage hat.

Among the prominent men who will march in next Saturday's big suffrage parade are Judge William H. Wadhams, Justice Charles L. Guy, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, Civil Service Commissioner; Frederick C. Howe, Immigration Commissioner; Robert Adamson, Fire Commissioner; Julius Frank, Mayor of Ogdensburg; John A. Kingsbury, Charities Commissioner, and Frederick Shipley, Tax Commissioner.

A recent convert to suffrage is the Rev. Father Thomas Murphy, formerly of St. Patrick's Cathedral, who will make his first speech for the cause next Sunday night at his own church, the Church of the Resurrection, 151st Street and Broadway.

Edith Wynne Mathison is to be "New York" in the parade. She will walk alone with spear and shield and a banner asking the men of New York to grant the vote on Nov. 2.

CALLS JERSEY "PUNK STATE."

Massachusetts Leaders Think Defeat Won't Hurt Their Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 20.—Massachusetts suffrage leaders claim to see in the result in New Jersey only encouragement so far as the result in this State is concerned.

"I don't want to abuse New Jersey, but she is a punk State," said Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald, head of the Political Equality Union.

"We realize, of course," said Mrs. Gertrude Halladay Leonard, Chairman of the Massachusetts Equal Suffrage Association's Executive Committee, "that the conditions in New Jersey are much different from the conditions here. We know it to be a boss-ridden State, with the vicious interests strongly intrenched."

"The question is much better understood in this State," said Miss Alice Stone Blackwell.

SAW VOTES BOUGHT IN JERSEY ELECTION

Mrs. Helena Hill Weed Says Money Was Passed Before Her Eyes in Newark.

SUFFRAGISTS ARE HOPEFUL

New York suffragists were working as cheerfully yesterday as if they had never heard of a suffrage defeat in New Jersey. At the Women's Political Union they were going ahead with preparations for a gay and glorious election night on Nov. 2 at the Suffrage Shop, 663 Fifth Avenue.

"The respectable men in New Jersey tell me that it was the rawest political deal that was ever put over," said Mrs. Helena Hill Weed, daughter of Representative Hill of Connecticut, who was a watcher at one of the polling places in Newark. She told of seeing the bars down in the place where she was watching, any number of voters admitted at one time, electioneering, and money passed for votes before her eyes. She was at her post before 6 o'clock in the morning and finished up a little before 11 o'clock at night, going with the policeman and the ballot box to the Court House.

Mrs. Weed Saw Corruption.

"And we have absolutely tied up the women antis with Jim Nugent's party," she said, "though they have all along resolutely denied it. We knew that Nugent had all through the campaign been distributing their anti-suffrage literature, but yesterday his men acted as watchers for the women. I saw Charles M. Jessup of 99 Hedden Place, a Democratic district leader, and Nugent's official representative and henchman, wearing the badge of the New Jersey State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, with the name of the association upon it and that of its President, Mrs. E. Yarde Breese, all day, and alternately acting as watcher for the women and for his own party."

Mrs. Weed said that the first ballots cast, which could be recognized by their position in the box before the rough element came in and the really corrupt practices began, were for the women.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, speaking for the New Jersey Branch of the Women's Political Union, of which she is President, told of corrupt practices and said there would be many prosecutions. Her society, she said, was in possession of the names of repeating voters and the times at which they voted. The voters were openly bought, she said. The women saw money passed, and they saw sample ballots marked and carried into polls.

"This will make an impression upon New Yorkers," said Mrs. Blatch. "It will bring out a big vote, will influence the men and make the women watchers more alert. Wavering votes will be turned in our favor."

James Lees Laidlaw, President of the Men's League for Equal Suffrage, said yesterday:

"Since the returns from the New Jersey election have come in a number of New York men who had been undecided have been so disgusted with the conduct of the elections over there that they have come out for the women."

Mrs. Catt Expected the Defeat.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who has had the widest general experience of any one of the suffrage workers, yesterday reiterated her belief that New York would be carried for the women.

"We did not expect to win in New Jersey," she said, "for all the forces of wickedness were against the women. The whole campaign of the men was one of intimidation. I believe that the men of the political parties of New York have told the truth when they said they would not interfere with the vote in this State, and I think we shall win."

"As a New Jersey woman I have been so fond of my State that I have defended it against everything of which it has been accused, from the raids of the mosquito up to politics," said Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Treasurer of the National Woman Suffrage Association. "I did hope that it was coming out as leading in democracy among the Eastern States. But I am not discouraged. There must be a further educational campaign to overcome ignorance, indifference, and among political influence."

"I am perfectly sure that the men have had their last chance to show their chivalry to the women in New Jersey," said Mrs. William L. Colt of the Congressional Union. "And this is their last referendum campaign. The women will now see the value of working for the Federal amendment, and the Congressional Union will have the aid of the New Jersey women."

Dr. Anna Howard Shaw said yesterday that the New Jersey defeat would give a great impetus to the work of the National Association for the Federal Amendment.

"The one other thing the New Jersey women can do now," she said, "is to work for Presidential and municipal suffrage which can be granted by the State Legislature. All State work pushes on national suffrage work and vice versa."

Antis See Effect in New York.

Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, President of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, said yesterday that the contagion of the successful opposition to woman suffrage in New Jersey must have its effect in New York State.

"I have been surprised to find within the last two weeks the number of men who are asking each other how they shall vote on the suffrage amendment in New York, and five out of every six are against it," she said. "I think New York City will go against woman suffrage by a very large majority. Up-State the majority will not be so large, though we are splendidly organized. I do not think there is any chance for the New Jersey women to get the Presidential suffrage next year. This defeat has been too decisive."

"There was great interest in this election," said Miss Clara Vesin, Campaign Manager for the anti-suffragists in New Jersey. "Men left their business in New York and went to remote parts of New Jersey to cast their vote. In deciding how to vote the men asked the women of their families and voted accordingly. I have been delighted with the results of the campaign. All sides must agree that it was a good thing to call out so large a vote. There will be no chance of the suffrage question coming up again next year."

UNDAUNTED IN SISTER STATE.

Pennsylvania Suffragists Spurred On by Jersey Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—The defeat of woman suffrage in New Jersey yesterday left local workers for the cause undaunted and, if anything, stirred them to still greater efforts for success at the general election in Pennsylvania next month.

Between comment on the result of the Jersey vote, which was uniformly referred to as a delay and not a defeat," the leaders and their assistants at the various headquarters were busy on the final details of a street parade, and demonstration in the Academy of Music on Friday night, when the women's liberty bell arrives here. Noon meetings were held at different points, while tonight members of the Equal Franchise Society and the Woman Suffrage Party were on Broad Street, conducting ten meetings at points between Portar Street and Erie Avenue.

That the result in New Jersey would only make Pennsylvania suffragists work harder for victory in this State was the opinion expressed by Mrs. Wilfred Lewis, President of the Equal Franchise Society. The outcome, she said, only indicated how hard the task is and what must be accomplished before the coming election.

WOULD DISSOLVE REICHSTAG

German Conservatives Think It Unfit to Discuss War Aims.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 20.—In some Conservative circles in Germany the idea has been suggested that steps should be taken with the object of bringing about the dissolution of the Reichstag. The organ of the Conservatives in Saxony, the Vaterland, even demands a speedy dissolution on the ground that the Reichstag, owing to its composition, is not fitted to discuss terms of peace.

In this connection it should be noted that a Conservative Deputy, Herr von Brockhausen, has proposed the creation of an Imperial Council to be composed of prominent military men, diplomatists, high officials, and representatives of the political parties in the Reichstag, and of great commercial bodies. This council, he says, should discuss the aims of Germany in the war and the terms of peace. These suggestions with regard to setting aside the Reichstag have aroused much discontent in the Liberal and Socialist press in Germany, which asserts that the people will not allow the Reichstag to be eliminated and points out the impossibility, in the event of the Reichstag being dissolved, of holding elections in war time. The Kreuzzeitung, a Conservative newspaper, says that in influential Conservative circles the idea of the dissolution of the Reichstag is not entertained. Count Reventlow's organ, the Deutsche Tageszeitung, also Conservative, expresses doubt regarding the fitness of the Reichstag to discuss the war policy of the country.

HYPHENS TO 'HAZE' WILSON.

B. Ridder Threatens President with "German-American" Disfavor.

Under the auspices of the American Truth Society about 200 persons having deposits in banks or holding insurance policies met last night to protest against the loan to the Allies. Bernard Ridder, Chairman of the Bank Depositors' Committee of One Hundred, said a small group of bankers had turned traitors, and the Administration by its silence had given tacit assent to the loan.

"The President," he continued, "in a moment of peevishness turned on the German-Americans in a thinly veiled speech and urged that they be 'hazed.' Perhaps if the President insists on 'hazing' us we can do a little 'hazing' ourselves."

The decision of Bulgaria to join the Central Powers, Mr. Ridder said, was evidence of the most expert opinion obtainable as to which side was making the best showing. Therefore, in his belief, the people buying bonds of the Allies are "backing the wrong horse."

$50,000 OFFER TO LINDSEY.

Judge May Quit Juvenile Court and Go on Lecture Platform.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 20.—Judge Ben B. Lindsey has received an offer of $50,000 for a three-year contract on the lecture platform.

"I have received a very flattering offer from America's largest lecturing bureau," he said in confirming the news. "It is an offer which no man in my circumstances could overlook. For many years I have been fighting certain interests in this city and State, and as a result I am a poor man. I have spent on an average $40 a month more than the salary I have received as Juvenile Judge to carry on the work of my court, and for years have depended for my living upon the money I have earned on the lecture platform during my vacations.

"I am giving the offer very serious consideration; I have not yet made up my mind whether to accept or reject it. I have until the end of the week to give a reply to the New York people who made it. It is a very serious matter for me to decide, for I love my work here in the Juvenile Court, and I love to fight for it when it is assailed by those whose enmity I have incurred."

It is considered highly probable by Judge Lindsey's close friends here that he will accept.

SING SING OFFICIAL OUSTED.

Supt. White's Dismissal Attributed to Convicts' League.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Oct. 20.—Luther B. White, Superintendent of Industries at Sing Sing Prison at $3,600 a year, has been removed by Warden Osborne. Although no reason has been assigned, the dismissal is said to be a result of the activities of the Mutual Welfare League, the prisoners' organization. Mr. White was discharged last night shortly before midnight by a note from the Warden, which read:

You are hereby discharged from your position, to take effect immediately.

Mr. White would not discuss his removal tonight, saying he had no comment to make until he received official notice of the reason for his dismissal. Warden Osborne was said to be out of town, and Deputy Warden Church had nothing to say.

Warden Osborne appointed Mr. White to his post, saying that he was fitted particularly for the work by virtue of his experience as a manufacturer. Mr. White came to Sing Sing from Amsden, Vt.

DISCUSS CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Speakers Tell How a Municipality May Be Made Attractive.

The union of the useful and the beautiful in city planning was the theme of the first meeting this season of the Municipal Art Society last evening in the galleries of the National Arts Club, 119 East Nineteenth Street.

Charles R. Ashbee of London, England, an architect and art authority, spoke of the work which had been done in his country in laying out villages and towns for workingmen. Although these settlements met every requirement of utility, they at the same time were as attractive as the homes of many of the wealthier classes.

Carl Bannwart, Secretary of the Shade Tree Commission of Newark, N. J., a city which is said to have planted more trees in its streets in the last decade than any other American municipality, made an address, telling how the interest of the public was enlisted in the project.

MELLEN, IMMUNE, STARTS HIS STORY

Former New Haven Head, Smiling at Old Associates, Takes Stand Against Them.

TO TELL HOW SYSTEM GREW

Government Wins Fight for the Introduction of Evidence Dating Back to 1890.

Charles S. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad during its expansion, but now "a farmer," appeared yesterday in the Federal District Court before Judge Hunt as a Government witness in the trial of eleven of his former Directors on a charge of having conspired to monopolize the transportation facilities of New England. He greeted his old associates cheerily when he walked into court.

For two hours in the afternoon Mr. Mellen was on the stand, and his testimony laid the foundation for the tale of financial deals he is expected to unfold. He explained the railroad situation in New England in 1890, the date the Sherman Act went into force. Standing before a large map with a pointer, he pictured the competitive conditions that prevailed at that time with a facility and speed that Frank M. Swacker, of counsel for the Government, who was examining him, found it hard to follow. He expounded to the jury the interconnections of no less than sixty railroads.

It was not, however, without a fight that the Government obtained permission to go back to 1890 in its exposition of the case. At the beginning of the hearing Thomas Thacher objected on behalf of all the defendants against the order of presentation of evidence made by the Government. It could not be contended, he argued, that the defendants could be convicted for anything they had done more than three years before the indictment was found on Feb. 26, 1915. Judge Hunt, however, said the Government's theory was that in 1912 there was a continuing conspiracy, and that the defendants had become Directors of the New Haven knowing the conspiracy existed, and so assented to it. So the Government was within its right in illustrating the nature of that conspiracy before 1912, he said.

Thinks "Child" May Be Dead.

J. G. Milburn of counsel for C. M. Pratt, then said the question of the order proof came up in the trial of Aaron Burr for treason, and Chief Justice Marshall said with great solemnity that it would be a violation of all the understandings of evidence if, when the main charge was treason, the Government, before it gave evidence concerning that, should produce other testimony which would be confirmatory of the treason only if it were found to exist.

"The existence of this child must be shown in 1913. That's simple," he said.

"I will say," said the court, "that the existence of the parent may be proved before the existence of the offspring."

"But, your Honor, in this way you might begin with the great-great-grandfather and then come down to the grandfather and the father, and then, after proving their existence, say: 'We will now consider whether the child was alive in 1912, but I am sorry to find that after all he died in 1911.'"

Judge Hunt, however, quoted the public land cases to show that it was proper to introduce evidence to explain the conspiracy, even though that evidence related to events before the period in which the conspiracy was said to have existed, provided it was also proved later that there was a conspiracy.

R. L. Batts, for the Government, explained that the prosecution wished to proceed in chronological order in order to make its presentation of the case clear, and the objections of the defense were overruled.

The Government then proceeded to identify by means of A. E. Clark, Secretary, and Arthur P. Russell, Valuation Counsel of the New Haven, a great mass of books and papers of the company. Altogether there were more than 1,900 of them, and in some cases it was impossible for the witnesses to identify the signatures. They gave the entire history of the New Haven line from 1890 until the day on which the indictment was found. They included the minutes of the directors of all the companies connected with the New Haven, and agreements and other documents.

Mellen Takes the Stand.

Mr. Mellen took the stand an hour after the court reassembled after luncheon. He spoke in a low voice, which it was hard for the jury to hear. For most of the two hours he was under examination, he stood by a map, picking out with a pointer, the lines over which he once held sway.

Frank M. Swacker, who conducted the examination, first asked Mr. Mellen his occupation.

"Making two blades of grass grow where one grew before," was the reply.

"What was that?" asked Mr. Lindabury.

"I am a farmer—agriculturist"—was the answer.

"How long have you been an agriculturist?" asked Mr. Swacker.

"Since I left the New Haven Presidency."

Then Mr. Mellen was asked to sketch his business career. He told of his beginning in the cashier's office of the Northern Railroad of New Hampshire at Concord, N. H., and how he went in 1889 to Boston, as assistant to the manager of the Boston & Lowell Railroad. In 1883 he was made auditor of the Boston, Lowell & Concord Railroad, and from 1883 to 1888 was General Superintendent of the Boston & Lowell Railroad.

"Then I was general traffic manager of the Union Pacific at Omaha until 1892," he went on. "Then I was General Manager of the New York & New England Railroad at Boston for the last part of the year 1892; then Second Vice President of the New York, New Haven & Hartford until 1897; then I was President of the Northern Pacific Railway Company from 1897 to 1903, when I came back to the New Haven Railroad as President and remained until Aug. 31, 1913."

"What degree of familiarity have you with the railroad situation of New England since 1890?" asked Mr. Swacker.

"Well, I have tried to be posted regarding the whole of it. My connection with the steamboat business, however, was entirely due to my connection with the New Haven."

Mr. Mellen then described for Mr. Swacker the lines in 1890 of the New York and New England, at that time one of the principal competitors of the New Haven and the absorption of which was part of the alleged conspiracy.

Asked as to the lines leased or held by the New England at that time, Mr. Mellen said that the Hartford, Providence & Fishkill became a part of the New England on its reorganization and was merged in the lines between Worcester and Allen's Point. These were known as the Norwich & Worcester, and as it controlled the Norwich & New York Transportation Company, that also came under the control of the New York & New England.

Remarking that Mr. Swacker was giving him "a good deal of a contract," when he asked for a description of other railroad systems in 1890, Mr. Mellen took up the Old Colony Line and other smaller lines, telling where they ran and what they amounted to.

The New Haven in 1890.

Then Mr. Swacker took Mr. Mellen to the New Haven System as it existed in 1890, the date when the Sherman law was passed, and when it only owned or controlled 526 miles. Describing it the witness said:

"It ran from Woodlawn, on the New York & Harlem, to Stamford, and thence had a branch to New Canaan. It ran from Stamford to New Haven, and thence by its main line to Springfield, with a branch to New Britain and a branch to Middletown. Then it had leases of the Shore Line from New Haven to New London, of the Norwalk Railroad to Woonsocket, with a branch to Watertown. It also had leases of the New Haven & Northampton from New Haven to connect with the Pittsburg Railroad, and a lease in perpetuity of the Holyoke & Westfield, and owned the branch at Northampton. It also leased the old New Haven, Wilmington & Willimantic, which was organized as the Boston & New York Air Line. I should also have mentioned the old Hartford & Connecticut, which was owned by the New Haven."

"Did the New Haven have at that time any steamboat lines?"

"I do not think in 1890 the New Haven had a dollar invested in steamboat lines."

Then Mr. Mellen described the Housatonic system, another competitor of the New Haven twenty-five years ago. The Housatonic, he said, had no steamboat interests, but a half interest in the New England Terminal Company, which handled business from Wilson's Point by boat to New York and by transport steamer to Oyster Bay, and thence to Brooklyn by the Long Island Railroad, which had just been started in 1890. The New York & New England owned the other half interest in that concern.

Mr. Swacker then got a description of the Connecticut River Railroad, of the Concord & Montreal, and of the White Mountain Railroad. None of these lines had any steamboat interests except the Concord & Montreal, and of this Mr. Mellen, with his wonderfully detailed knowledge, said:

"It had the steamboat called The Lady of the Lake, which used to ply on a lake in New Hampshire."

The witness said the Rutland Railroad in 1890 controlled the Central Vermont and a leased line from St. Albans. After saying that the Grand Trunk of Canada controlled the Vermont Central, Mr. Mellen took up the Boston & Maine. It ran from Boston to Portland, Me., by two lines, one of its own and the other the old Eastern Railroad.

Describes 1890 Traffic System.

The general railroad situation in New England having been described, Mr. Swacker asked about traffic arrangements.

Mr. Mellen said the New Haven took its Western business from the Pennsylvania at Jersey City, moved it to New Haven, and thence by the New York & New England to Boston. It also had connections with the New York Central at Springfield.

Was there any traffic arrangement between the New Haven and other roads to New York?

"Yes, for traffic to local points on these roads. The New Haven had no through freight connections at New York with through rates with the exception of the Pennsylvania," he said. "The New Haven also had through rates with the Boston & Albany on a portion of the business, and it had through rates with the Boston & Maine over a few of its lines."

What passenger routes were there for interstate business of the New Haven?"

"Only the Federal Express of the Pennsylvania, which used to be a ferry between Jersey City and the Harlem River. There was through ticketing with the Pennsylvania and all lines that came with and the Pennsylvania," Mr. Mellen said.

Mr. Mellen said there may have been ticketing through the Grand Central Terminal, but there was no feasible connection between the roads over which the tickets were issued and two stations had to be used.

As for traffic going north beyond the New Haven territory, Mr. Mellen said tickets were sold to points north of the Connecticut River line, and he thought there was through baggage checking. There were, however, through trains between New York and Boston run on the Boston & Albany, and Mr. Mellen gave the hours on which they were operated twenty-five years ago.

In the same way he spoke of the connections between the New Haven and the New York & New England to Boston, one by Hartford and the other by the Air Line to Willimantic. Also he gave particulars of the Shore Line train which left New York at 5 o'clock and went to New Haven and New London to Boston, and he described the interchange of passengers between the New Haven and the New England at Hartford and Willimantic as the best possible.

In the same way Mr. Mellen went into details concerning the freight and passenger arrangements of the New Haven with the Old Colony, the Fitchburg, the Connecticut River Railroad, and other lines.

As Mr. Mellen discussed the steamboat lines of 1890 he brought out the fact that it does not always follow because three or four lines are running out of a certain port to New York they are competitive. They run to different piers in this city, and they will be selected by the shippers according to whether their piers are convenient for the landing of freight.

What was the traffic status of the Philadelphia, Reading & New England?" was asked.

"Well," answered Mr. Mellen with a smile, "if it got a carload of freight once in a while it tried to get it through. Mostly it failed."

"Did it have any passenger traffic?"

"Well, there were some passengers who could not travel by any other route. It got their business."

Mr. Mellen said that in 1890 the New Haven was of no particular moment in the freight business.

Mr. Mellen was giving technical particulars as to the fast freight lines which in 1890 were known as the Red, White and Blue lines and the Star-Union lines, when the case was adjourned until this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Warren D. Chase, who acted for E. D. Robbins, counsel for the New Haven in many of its intricate deals, and who had been subpoenaed to tell what he knew about them, was in court yesterday. He had not answered his name when it was called on Tuesday.

Señor Arredondo today was notified that reports received in Mexico City recited that Lagos Chagaro, former Conventionist Provisional President of Mexico, had died from wounds received in a recent encounter between Constitutionalist troops and a band of Zapatista irregulars, who were trying to protect Chazaro from capture. The report also said that many former Zapatista leaders were applying for amnesty.

The Carranza Agency tonight issued this statement regarding the manner in which the recognition of the Carranza Government was celebrated in Mexico City last night:

"Every species of noise making signalized the triumph of the cause of Constitutionalist government tonight. Bells were rung, whistles tooted, rifles cracked, pistols banged, and cannon roared. Fireworks were discharged in the plazas and in the streets of the capital, while youngsters enjoyed themselves with firecrackers and squibs. Until dawn the streets were alive with people. Formal parades and informal marches by the populace, with blaring bands of music and rousing cheers for General Carranza and Woodrow Wilson alternately resounded through the city. The season of good feeling and happiness was the source of great gratification to the foreign residents of the city, most particularly the Americans. Secretary Lansing's short but expressive note was later received, and then the Constitutionalist supporters turned themselves loose in a delirium of joy over the consummation of their efforts, which have covered a period of thirty-two months. The celebration, which amounted to an actual carnival, did not end until every participant was exhausted with happiness.

"It was considered an appropriate coincidence that the occasion of the recognition of Mexico in the sisterhood of American Republics should have taken place while General Carranza was at Saltillo, where the first blow for Constitutionalism and in opposition to Huerta was struck."

Mexican Press Lauds Wilson.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 20.—Formal recognition by the United States of the de facto Carranza Government resulted in all the morning newspapers of Mexico City being printed in American colors and containing extremely laudatory articles on President Wilson and the American nation.

On all sides and in all circles cheers and praise for the American Executive and for the people were heard.

Enthusiasm over the recognition of the Carranza Government is growing, and the feeling of pessimism long prevalent is everywhere being supplanted by one of hope for the future.

Salutes Exchanged in Vera Cruz.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 20.—The ringing of bells, the playing of bands, parades, and shouts of "Long live the American Union" were continuous today as a result of the recognition of General Carranza's Government by the United States and the other American republics.

At 9 o'clock this evening the American battleships outside the harbor raised the Mexican flag and fired a salute of twenty-one guns, which was immediately answered by the Mexican gunboat Zaragoza, which raised the Stars and Stripes.

$10,000,000 FOR CARRANZA.

New Orleans Bankers to Make a Loan and Handle Sisal Crop.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—New Orleans bankers announced tonight that as a result of the recognition of the Carranza Government they closed contracts today to lend $10,000,000 in gold to the Mexican Administration.

It also was announced that arrangements had been made to handle the entire Mexican sisal crop through New Orleans; that the sisal operators of Yucatan and Campeche were to erect a million dollar manufacturing plant here for the purpose of handling their raw product, and that Mexican capitalists were to establish a new transportation line operating six steamships between New Orleans and Mexican Gulf ports.

YTURBIDE IS SKEPTICAL.

Doubts Carranza's Success, but Won't Interfere with It.

Eduardo N. Yturbide, who several months ago was said to be the man most favored by the Wilson Administration for the Provisional Presidency of Mexico, announced yesterday that he would do nothing to interfere with Carranza's attempt to pacify the country, although he could not support his Administration.

"I sincerely wish I could believe that the recognition of Mr. Carranza's Government would bring peace to my country," said Mr. Yturbide. "Unfortunately, I cannot do so, as, although Mr. Carranza's conduct toward me has given him title to my personal esteem, I fear that the extreme radical tendencies of the faction he heads, its opposition to a policy of conciliation, its lack of men capable of forming a Constitutional Government which will respect the rights of all, and the extreme difficulty of Mexico's situation from every point of view, constitute obstacles insurmountable for his Government.

"Nevertheless, in view of the danger which has threatened and still threatens the autonomy of our country, in the midst of all its misfortunes, it is the duty of every patriotic Mexican not to hinder or obstruct the new Government so long as there is the slightest chance that it may become properly constituted and thereby save us from further disaster, in spite of my conviction to the contrary. Henceforward such will be my attitude, and if there be any Mexican or any friend of mine who seeks my advice, I will always counsel him to help the new Government in the right direction if he can, and if his convictions prevent him from doing so, as mine do, at least to place no obstacles in its way."

It was understood in Mexican circles yesterday that several other well-known Mexicans now in New York would follow Mr. Yturbide's example and issue statements advising all Mexicans to do nothing to embarrass the efforts of General Carranza.

It is understood that the Villa agency in the Whitehall Building will be discontinued in the next few days.

CALLS CARDEN VICTIM OF AMERICAN INTRIGUE

Pall Mall Gazette Also Blames British Government for Refusing to Support Envoy in Mexico.

LONDON, Oct. 20.—Under the heading, "The Tragedy of Sir Lionel Carden," The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the death of the late British Minister to Mexico, severely criticises both President Wilson and the British Government for the Huerta incident of 1914, relating how Sir Lionel Carden went to Mexico at the request of Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and saved hundreds of British and American lives, only to be subsequently broken, it declares, because he insisted upon the retention of General Huerta as Provisional President at the Foreign Secretary's dictation.

"This proved to be the rock upon which he split," adds The Gazette. "The intrigues of the Washington administration were too strong for him, and as he was not supported by his own Government, he was compelled to return to England.

"Like Regulus, he had kept his oath, going out to Mexico much against his will. Also, like that brave Roman who went back to Carthage to face punishment, Sir Lionel returned home to find his influence undermined, his reputation assailed and his appointment forfeited." The appointment was the post at Rio de Janeiro, which never materialized for him.

"Thus was sacrificed," continues The Gazette, "one of the most able, active and accomplished public servants. * * * By his own Government alone did his great abilities seem to have been undervalued."

TAFT RAISES HUERTA ISSUE.

Our Landing at Vera Cruz as an Act of War.

President Wilson's act in ordering the landing of regular troops of the United States Army in Mexico was an act of war, according to the view taken by ex-President Taft, in a lecture last night in the Horace Mann Auditorium before the Columbia University Institute of Arts and Sciences. The ratification of this move by Congress, he said, avoided the raising of the question of President Wilson's having exceeded his powers under the Constitution.

"It would be difficult," said Mr. Taft, "to explain the landing of our army in Vera Cruz by force as anything but an act of war to punish the Government of Huerta in Mexico for its refusal to render what was deemed by President Wilson as a proper apology for a violation of our international rights in the unjust arrest of some of our sailors. This act was committed before authority was given by act of Congress, but the necessary authority for it had passed one house, and was passing another at the time, and the question as to the right of the Executive to take the action without Congressional authority was thus avoided by full and immediate ratification."

SENTENCE CARRANZA AGENTS.

Three Found Guilty of Conspiring to Violate American Neutrality.

EL PASO, Oct. 20.—Victor L. Ochoa, José Orozco, and E. L. Holmdahl, Carranza adherents convicted in the Federal District Court of conspiracy to violate neutrality laws, were sentenced today to eighteen months each in the Federal prison at Leavenworth. They furnished $7,500 bond each pending an appeal.

The defendants were charged with organizing a Carranza expedition against Villa and shipping munitions to Columbus, N. M., about a year ago.

WIDE HUNT FOR BANDITS.

Rumors of More Executions of Outlaws Along the Border.

BROWNSVILLE, Oct. 20.—Rumors of more execution of Mexicans suspected of being implicated in the wrecking and robbing of a St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico passenger train Monday night were current in Brownsville today. There was no confirmation from any source. Texas Rangers and civilian posses continued their scouting through the brush in search of outlaws who slew two men and caused the death of a third when they wrecked the train.

Virtually 1,000 United States troops continued to search the country near where the wreck took place. General Lopez, Carranza Commander, is co-operating with American troops in patrolling the border for bandits suspects.

FIND ROBBERS' LOOT IN HOUSETOP CACHE

Small Boys Who Planned to Plunder It Disclose Its Position to Police.

$65 AND CHECKS IN SATCHEL

Policeman Burke, of the East 126th Street Station, standing at Madison Avenue and 125th Street before daylight yesterday morning, noticed three small boys darting from doorway to doorway down the avenue. He overtook the youngsters and, when they gave no satisfactory reason for being out made them prisoners. He found an electric flashlight, made to resemble a pistol, on each, but none would explain the intended use of the light.

After the boys had been held in the Juvenile Court later on charges of improper guardianship they volunteered to talk. They said they had been on their way to the tenement house at 312 East 103d Street, on the roof of which was hid a satchel of money which the police decided later had been stolen by robbers from Vincent J. Maloney, messenger for the Chatham and Phenix National Bank branch at 116th Street and Lexington Avenue, who was assaulted and robbed on the morning of Sept. 20 last in 106th Street, between First and Second Avenues.

Detectives Conroy and Kahn went to the roof of the building named and there, in the bottom of an empty water tank, they found $65 in currency, the satchel carried by Maloney, and a number of checks.

How the boys knew the money was in the tank, or whether they had made previous trips to get part of it, the police have not learned. Their theory is that the boys either saw the robbers who attacked Maloney hide the money or saw them going to the tank to get some of it. Evidently, the police say, the robbers, who took $900 in cash and $2,000 in checks from Maloney, feared to keep all of the money with them and used the water tank as a repository, to which they went for money as they wanted to use it.

The police hope to obtain information from the boys that will lead to the capture of the robbers.

The boys said they were Dominic Cirino and Joseph Suozzo of 305 East 103d Street and Antonio Di Nunzio of 301 East 103d Street.

Maloney was robbed in broad daylight as he was returning to the bank from the Harlem Market, where he had collected money and checks for deposit. He was attacked by two men, who bent him on the head with revolvers. He fought his assailants until almost unconscious, and, he said, obtained such a good look at them that he would be able to identify them.

GALLOWAY CAN'T PAY WIFE.

And So Justice Rules Musician May Leave "Alimony Club."

J. Armour Galloway, the musician, is to be released from Ludlow Street Jail. Justice Pendleton of the Supreme Court ruled yesterday that inasmuch as Mr. Galloway was not able to pay the alimony due his divorced wife he could not be kept in jail for contempt of court in not doing something that he was not able to do. Mr. Galloway was sent to jail about three months ago on complaint of his wife, who said that he owed her about $18,000 back alimony, and that he had escaped paying any of it by going to Europe after the court order fixing the alimony had been filed.

Last week Mr. Galloway complained that he was too ill to remain in jail and that further confinement might cause serious results. A physician was appointed to examine him. The report was to the effect that he was not too ill to remain in jail for another three months, when he would be automatically released. Then Otto A. Glassberg, his attorney, applied for his release on the ground that he could not pay the accrued alimony nor even pay the $600 which he was technically charged with owing.

RUNAWAY GIRLS STRANDED.

Found in Park, Three Admit They Are Wanted in Brooklyn.

Agnes Knox, 19 years old; Margaret Clark, 16, and her sister, May, 14, all of 706 Evergreen Avenue, Brooklyn, were sitting on a bench in Madison Square Park last night with only 40 cents left of $10 they had had when they ran away from home last Saturday.

When Detectives Dwyer and Riordan of the Second Branch Bureau recognized them by description sent out in a general alarm, questioned them, they readily admitted their identity, and said they would be glad to go home again. They said they had hired a room at 247 Avenue A and had intended to support themselves by working. None of the three had been able to find employment.

The girls were taken to the Detective Bureau, where Brooklyn detectives took them to their own borough.

KEPT WIFE LOCKED UP.

Husband and Friend Arrested After Mrs. Bouloukis Escaped.

Peter Bouloukis, a peddler, of 241 West 109th Street, was locked up in the West Sixty-eighth Street Police Station last night charged with "detaining his wife, Theodora, and keeping her without proper nourishment." Later Paul Laungas of the same address was locked up at Police Headquarters charged with kidnapping the woman.

Mrs. Bouloukis came from Plattsburg on Sept. 24 at her husband's request, and was taken to Laungas's room, where she was locked up, the police say. Five days later she escaped from a rear window down a rope made from her bedclothes, which broke and dropped her two stories to the ground. Her right leg and several ribs were broken, and she was taken to the Knickerbocker Hospital. After recovering from her injuries she told her story to the District Attorney, who assigned Detective George Moran to the case.

Little Boy Crushed by Auto Truck.

Louis Sacco, 5 years old, of 333 Seventeenth Street, West New York, N. J., was crushed to death last night when an auto truck skidded into the telegraph pole against which he was leaning. The truck had collided with the motor car of Dr. Tedesco of 326 West Twenty-fourth Street, which caused it to swerve out of the road. Dr. Tedesco was arrested, because his motor was alleged to have been running too fast, and held in $1,000 bail, which was furnished late last night. Both machines were badly damaged by the collision, but beside the little Sacco boy no one was hurt.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES IN NEW CONSTITUTION

Merchants' Association Hears from Stimson and O'Brien of Financial Reforms.

PRAISE FOR BUDGET SYSTEM

Short Ballot to Give Concentration of Policy Responsibility and Management.

Henry L. Stimson and Morgan J. O'Brien told 1,200 members of the Merchants' Association at a luncheon at the Astor yesterday why it was good business policy to adopt the new Constitution on Nov. 2. Mr. Stimson pleaded with his hearers to answer for themselves whether they would permit their own money to be spent in the slipshod manner now in vogue in making up the State's appropriation bills, or whether they would contract to pay interest for fifty years on a loan for improvements that would be worn out in five years. He pointed to the budget system and other features of the proposed Constitution as the remedy for these conditions.

Mr. O'Brien advocated the short ballot and the conservation articles as good business policies.

"As Senator Root said, this State has outgrown its machinery; it is trying to do a railroad business with a stage coach equipment," began Mr. Stimson. Twenty years ago this State had practically no State debt. Today it has the largest debt both in the aggregate and per capita of any State in the Union. Its local indebtedness, of its cities and villages, and towns and counties, is very much larger than that of any other State. The per capita debt of New York, taking in all these factors is $109. Twenty years ago it cost $7,000,000 a year to run our State Government, now it takes $42,000,000.

Responsibility First Principle.

"The first principle we tried to apply was responsibility, the principle that to make a business go right it must be some one's duty to see that it does go right. The Constitution attempts to solve the problem of the State finances by an application of this system. We found the sinking fund system was not working well because it permitted fifty-year bonds to be taken care of by other hands. The convention decided that State debt shall be incurred only upon serial bonds, which provides for the administration incurring the debt to make provisions right off for the payment of the first installment. If the $118,000,000 in bonds for the Barge Canal had been issued in the new form instead of the old, it is estimated that the State would have saved $46,000,000 in interest.

"Also it is provided that the life of State bonds shall not run beyond the life of the improvement. As business men you can see the importance of this when I tell you we have outstanding $53,000,000 of fifty-year bonds for highways, the life of which has been less than five years.

"But the most important new thing in the Constitution is the budget system. The Executive is put under the responsibility of proposing a budget and the Legislature of granting the money. That will take the place of the present atrocious system. The estimates now are made by subordinates and shoveled into the Legislature without revision. Under the new system it is made the business, first of the department heads, and second, of the Governor, to decide upon a plan which must be submitted to the Legislature early in the session, before the first of February, and then must be discussed in the open, instead of in committee rooms.

"That means that everybody in the State has a chance to know the amount and purpose of proposed expenditures. The budget reform is the centre of the system of responsible government."

Home Rule and Short Ballot.

Mr. O'Brien pointed to home rule and the short ballot as two great reforms, and said that good citizens of all parties should support them. "You know about the home rule provision," he said, "let me say something about the short ballot.

"The growth of office has got to a point in this State where there is no relation of one department to another. There has grown up in commissions, departments, bureaus, and officials, more than 150 in number, which in order to produce responsible and efficient service we have reduced to seventeen. That is a long step toward good government.

"Again under the new Constitution the Governor can inaugurate a policy and he can carry it out. Now he can only suggest. In the past he could urge but he could not force the enactment of reforms."

At the conclusion of Mr. O'Brien's address, William Hamlin Childs, who presided, said that inasmuch as the taxation article had been drafted on behalf of New York City, there could be no excuse for any of his hearers neglecting to vote for it.

HOME RULE PROVISION UPHELD

Wallstein and Hedges Defend Revision of Constitution.

The home rule specifications in the proposed new Constitution were defended last night by speakers at a dinner at the City Club, who maintained that the responsibility which the provisions would throw on the voters of the city would be such as to increase their capacity for self-government. Leonard M. Wallstein, Commissioner of Accounts, supported the home rule clauses as marking a distinct improvement, though he thought they might have gone further; Nathaniel A. Elsberg apparently was afraid that if anything the convention had intrusted the city voters with a little more than they could handle safely, and Job E. Hedges favored the new provisions because they would "increase the power of the minority—the men who have the power of affirmative thought—as well as of the great majority to whom things have to be explained."

"The business of men such as are gathered here is to stop arguing about the home rule article and get together to pass the Constitution," Mr. Hedges said. "Nobody in the convention was trying to put up a game on this great State. They were only trying to make a State out of it. Home rule will give this city so many intricate problems that ultimately they will have to be decided by people who can and will give thought to them, and the great problem of this city and this country is to get the majority of the people to think about anything.

"Prima facie the Constitution should be adopted because the majority of all elements of the convention voted for it, and they were sent there to do something which was to be approved by the people unless they did something outrageous. But one of the arguments that will carry it, if it is carried, is the conviction that if we don't take this we'll have to keep what we have. And the man who accepts that argument doesn't know what we have."

Mr. Elsberg said that the removal of permission to make legislation for some cities and not for others wipes out nine-tenths of the legislative interference with cities, most of which originated with representatives from the cities themselves.

Commissioner Wallstein said he did not believe any legislature would dare to veto a charter passed by the city, and said that the home rule provision cleared the way for a tremendous advance over present conditions.

Sportsmen Urged to Vote "No."

In a circular recently sent out by the New York State Fish, Game and Forest League, from its headquarters at Watertown, hunters, fishermen, and sportsmen are asked to vote against the amendment of the Constitution, which would substitute for the present Conservation Commission, one of nine unpaid members, with exclusive power to make fish and game laws. The circular says that this amendment was fathered in the constitutional convention by the lumber interests, being introduced by Ferris J. Meigs, President of the Santa Clara Lumber Company, which is now being sued for damages by the Conservation Commission. Mr. Meigs was a delegate to the convention and a member of the Conservation Committee.

Marsh Attacks Constitution.

At a meeting of the Stationary Engineers' Association last night in Moose Hall, 114 West Fourteenth Street, Benjamin C. Marsh, Secretary of the New York Congestion Committee, attacked the proposed new constitution as an instrument directly opposed to the interests of working men. He said it would facilitate grafting and log rolling; that it would place the State in the hands of corrupt corporations; that it repudiates the pledges of the Republican and Democratic parties to grant substantial home rule to cities, and that it continues a discrimination against New York City in the Legislature.

FISH AT $14 A POUND.

Chicago Epicures Buy Fast Train Ticket for Rare Atlantic Product.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Two well-known Chicago epicures today enjoyed fish at approximately $14 a pound. It was the first time this kind of fish had been put on the table in Chicago; it has only recently returned to the Atlantic coast waters after a long absence.

The specimen which arrived in Chicago weighed two and one-half pounds, and was prepared for luncheon by the chef of a fashionable restaurant.

The fish arrived on the Twentieth Century. To get it on this train, the men who enjoyed it at luncheon had to buy a straight single-trip railroad ticket from New York to Chicago; they had the fish put on the train as a passenger, as the train carries no express. Thus the fish cost about $14 a pound.

ABSCONDER GIVEN UP BY BRIDE OF 3 WEEKS

Girl Who Eloped with Ticket Agent Who Had Stolen $5,000 Causes His Arrest.

TEARS BREAK HER STORY

Knew Nothing of Theft Till After Honeymoon Had Begun, Then Urged Restitution.

There was a telephone call late yesterday afternoon for Edward F. Walsh, for many years a baggageman at the Grand Central Station, and the father of young Edward F. Walsh, Jr., who disappeared on last Oct. 1 from his post as a ticket agent in the station simultaneously with the disappearance of almost $5,000 from his safe. A girl's voice, shaking with sobs, came over the wire, to Walsh telling him:

"This is Mollie. Mollie Donovan. Your daughter-in-law. Oh, don't you know? Ed and I ran away and were married. And I just found out today. I never knew the police were looking for us. I never knew they thought he had stolen the money. I never knew anything about it until I saw our pictures in a newspaper today. Please come and get him. We're here at 570 West 156th Street. Please come. Oh, I was so happy and now—"

The girl's voice died away over the 'phone, while the father, heart-broken himself, turned away to notify Chief Charles Stein of the New York Central Railroad detectives. Stein got Detectives Armstrong and Van Twistern and hurried to the flat. They found Walsh awaiting them. His bride had gone, where, Walsh couldn't say, though the detectives believed she had gone to her mother at their old home, 768 East 156th Street, from which she eloped with Walsh before daylight on the morning of Oct. 1.

Walsh, according to the detectives, was heart-broken, not so much over his own troubles as at the trouble he had brought on his wife. He told how she had tried to persuade him to give himself up and face the music after she had read of their case in the paper, and how finally she had told him she meant to notify his father. Then she had gone away.

Walsh and the girl, who was formerly a telephone operator in the 125th Street station of the Central, had been sweethearts for some time. He was a frequent visitor at her home, but even so Mrs. Donovan, the girl's mother, thought it a little strange when he called so early in the morning of last Oct. 1. However, she summoned her daughter to speak to him and returned to bed.

When she awoke she found her daughter gone, and she did not hear from her again until a letter came from an Indiana town telling how happy the girl was on her honeymoon and how they intended visiting the San Francisco Fair. Why they turned back the police do not know.

Walsh said they went first to Philadelphia, where they were married and then kept on to Pittsburgh, Chicago, and Denver, turning back from there to this city, where he rented the apartment in 156th Street. He had nearly $[illegible] in his pockets, but he could not or would not tell what had become of the rest of the money. He was locked up, charged by Stein with grand larceny.

Today, and every day this week, is a day of celebration for Mr. Edison's great scientific achievements. Everywhere in this country people are bowing their thanks for the benefits which his genius has brought them.

What Is Edison's Greatest Invention?

Electric light? The phonograph? Motion pictures? Improvements in the telephone and the telegraph? Which of these or his many other inventions do you consider the greatest? Perhaps it is hard for you to decide. But one thing is sure. Mr. Edison's pet and hobby for 38 years—the invention to which he gave most of his time for the last four years is the

HARDY TO SWING AXE ON CITY LAW STAFF

Corporation Counsel Will Drop 9 Assistants, 17 Clerks, and Cut 71 Salaries.

BLOW WILL FALL ON JAN. 1

Means $105,980 Saving a Year, Budget Examiners Hear—Bronx Payroll Is Taken Up.

That an entire reorganization of the Corporation Counsel's office is to be made by Jan. 1 became known last night when that department's budget request for next year was approved by the sub-committee as recommended by the examiners from the Bureau of Standards. For the coming year Corporation Counsel Lamar Hardy asked for $1,015,410, or a slight decrease under the 1915 allowance of $1,042,913. The budget examiners recommended that only $968,465 be allowed, or $46,945 less than was requested.

Mayor Mitchel was present with the members of the sub-committee when the request of the law department was taken up. Director Tirrell of the Bureau of Standards explained to City Chamberlain Bruere. Acting Chairman of the sub-committee, that the Corporation Counsel had agreed to all the recommendations made by the examiners. Mr. Hardy, who has been in office less than two weeks, said the estimates of the examiners were satisfactory to him. On these grounds the Chairman moved that the budget be accepted as prepared by the examiners, and it was adopted without discussion.

The reorganization of the department will entail the abolishing of the posts of nine Assistant Corporation Counsels, receiving a total of $32,450 a year. Reductions in salaries of seventeen other assistants are included in the reorganization, with a further saving of $45,410 a year. In addition seventeen clerical positions will be abolished and the salaries of fifty-four other similar positions will be reduced, these two recommendations making a possible additional saving of $28,120. The total amount to be saved is $105,980.

Hardy Keeps Plan Secret.

One new Assistant Corporation Counsel will be appointed at $1,020, and increases in salaries will be granted to thirty other members of the legal staff. Corporation Counsel Hardy would not discuss the reorganization plan. He explained that none of the members of the department knew just what posts were to be abolished, and that he wanted to talk to the members of his staff personally before they found out that their places were to be abolished. He said he would deal with the subject at length today.

At yesterday's session of the main Budget Committee the Mayor, Controller Prendergast, and President McAneny had frequent controversies over the salary reduction plan. Although the Mayor and the Controller have been voting together on most of the proposals for reductions, there were times at the session when even the Mayor and the Controller disagreed. As usual the Controller voted in the negative on motions either to keep the salaries at the present figure or to effect a compromise.

Frank W. Smith of the Court of Special Sessions appeared, and protested the cutting of the salaries of the Chief Clerk from $6,000 to $5,100, John P. Hilley from $5,000 to $2,820, and William M. Fuller from $4,000 to $2,820. The committee came to no decision, but laid the question over. When the office of the President of the Bronx was taken up, President Mathewson had most of the cuts either replaced or compromised them, so that the salaries of his staff will not be reduced materially.

The first recommendation Mr. Mathewson objected to was the reduction of the salary of John Osborne, general bookkeeper, from $4,000 to $3,660. Mr. Mathewson thought that as Mr. Osborne had been thirty-four years in the service of the city a salary of $3,750 would be about right. The Controller objected to the compromise, and Mr. Mathewson said:

"Well, then, leave it at $4,000, so long as my efforts at standardization are not to be seriously considered."

"I think it had rather be put at $3,750, rather than $4,000," suggested the Mayor, and the compromise was accepted, the Controller voting in the negative.

Mathewson Wins Point.

The salary of Charles J. McCoy, contract clerk, who has been in the city's employ eighteen years, was recommended to be cut from $2,400 to $1,800, but was kept at the present figure, the Controller alone voting to have it reduced. President Mathewson had another fight to keep the salary of Wilson S. Custard, a clerk, from being reduced from $1,350 to $1,200. He said the clerk's services were worth the money paid him and that his grade was the same as that of other clerks receiving the same amount.

"It is very hard to deal with those cases and deal with them fairly," said the Mayor, and on the Borough President's motion the salary was not reduced.

The salary of Henry Haffon, general inspector, was reduced from $2,400 to $2,100, Mr. Mathewson recommending the cut. At this point the Mayor said he was willing to take the judgment of a head of a department that a salary should not be reduced.

"Where department heads have admitted that cuts are right, I agree," said Mr. McAneny, "but I cannot accept cuts by yard measurement."

"I know that," responded the Mayor. "We did not intend that these cuts should be made all in one year, and we are doing this because of the direct State tax."

"Now, Mr. Mayor, don't put it on the State," said the Controller, "because standardization was decided upon two years ago, long before a State tax was thought of."

Judges Rosalsky and Crain of the Court of General Sessions protested against a cut in the salaries of thirteen court clerks from $4,000 to $3,000. The matter was laid over.

"FAIRY GODMOTHER" WORKED AS A COOK

Alleged Mrs. Flagler Makes No Defense to Charge of Swindling.

After a witness had identified her as a cook and laundress, Assistant District Attorney Minton yesterday rested his case against Mrs. Zora Emma Johnson, on trial before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions for swindling Frank Mahoney, a telephone boy, out of $4,000 by pretending to be the widow of Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil man, and promising to be the boy's "fairy godmother." The prosecution's star witness as to Mrs. Johnson's past life was Ada O. Viall of Painesville, Ohio.

Mrs. Viall looked at the alleged "Mrs. Flagler" and recognized her as a woman whom she had employed to do her laundry work in 1909. She said the woman came to her home as Emma Johnson, seeking employment as a domestic. She was with her husband, for whom she also sought a job. Mrs. Viall engaged both of them, Mrs. Johnson to do cooking and laundry work and Mr. Johnson to take care of the stable. Both of them lived until they left Mrs. Viall in a room over the stable.

In summing up for his client, Abe Levy, who interposed no defense, contended that the State had failed to make out a case. An adjournment was taken until this afternoon, when the case will be sent to the jury.

KING'S LETTER BRINGS $120.

Good Prices Paid at Joline Library Sale.

He paid $120 for an official letter signed by Henry VIII., dated Greenwich, May 27, 1535. It is addressed to Pope Clement VII. and is signed "Henricus." This is an unusual example of his autograph, his general signature being "Henry R." A document signed by Edward IV. of England, dated April 26, 1468, and relating to Richard Beauchamp, Bishop of Salisbury, brought $115. His autograph is very scarce. A quittance delivered by Edward III. to his son-in-law, John, Duke of Brittany, sold for $41.

A letter signed by Queen Elizabeth, written in French, in May, 1594, and addressed to the Duke of Wirtemberg, went to Mr. Smith for $112.50. He also obtained for $21 a letter of the poet, William Cowper, dated Jan. 11, 1759, and written in his most graceful manner. For a receipt, Aug. 23, 1697, signed "Jno. Driden" (John Dryden) he gave $21. An original manuscript poem, "Chivalry at a Discount," by Edward Fitzgerald, of "Omar Khayyam" fame, brought $15.

An autograph letter signed by George III. addressed to Frederick, Duke of York and dated Dec. 5, 1796, in which he says, "The subject of your letter is another proof of the very slovenly method in which business is carried on in this country," was obtained by Mr. Smith for $21.

John Heise of Syracuse paid $17.50 for a document signed by Georges J. Danton. P. F. Madigan gave $29.25 for two letters of Thomas De Quincey.

The sale will be continued this afternoon. The total to date for this part of the library is $3,279.

MILLIONS MORE IN TAX CUT.

The Tax Commissioners yesterday examined 394 persons who are on the 1916 tentative personal property tax roll for $28,754,800. Sixty were held for a final assessment of $312,600. Fifty swore they were exempt on the ground of non-residence, while it was found that three had died since the assessment was made. Since Oct. 1, when the Manhattan books were opened, 2,572 persons have been examined. Their total tentative assessment amounted to $201,618,300. Out of the number 414 have been held for a final assessment of $2,751,791.

MAY ASK GERMANY FOR SHIP FUGITIVES

Our Government Likely to Request Return of Officers Who Fled from Norfolk.

SEARCH SEAS FOR ECLIPSE

No Trace of Craft in Which Six Escaped—Navy Instructed to Keep Sharp Watch.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Secretary of State Lansing and Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Acting Secretary of the Navy, conferred informally this afternoon regarding the disappearance of six warrant officers of the Kronprinz Wilhelm and two officers of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, auxiliary cruisers of the German Navy now interned at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

After the conference Mr. Roosevelt sent to the State Department an official report giving the circumstances of the disappearance of the eight officers. This brought the matter to the official attention of Secretary Lansing, who is now considering the case from every angle and determining the action to be taken by the Government.

The indications are that the State Department will call the matter to the attention of the German Government for its information, with a request that if the officers return to German jurisdiction they be returned to the Norfolk Navy Yard. In calling the matter to the German Government's attention it is probable that a summary of the Navy Department's report will be sent to Ambassador Gerard for delivery to the German Government.

When the Kronprinz Wilhelm and the Prinz Eitel Friedrich were interned the commanders of these vessels, understanding the laws and customs governing internment of belligerents in neutral ports, gave assurances that none of the officers or enlisted men of either vessel would be permitted to leave their ships except with the consent of the United States Government. This consent was to be obtained from Rear Admiral Beatty, the Commandant of the Norfolk Navy Yard.

From time to time officers and enlisted men have been permitted to leave the interned warships. In each instance their names were given by the German commanding officers to the authorities at the Norfolk Navy Yard and permission was obtained for the men to leave, with the understanding that they would return to their respective ships by specified dates.

The six warrant officers who left in the sloop Eclipse and now are missing were scheduled to return to Norfolk on Oct. 11. The two officers who are missing from the Eitel Friedrich were scheduled to return to their ship on Oct. 17. On Oct. 14 strict orders were sent from Washington to Rear Admiral Beatty to permit no more officers or men of either of the interned vessels to have leaves of absence. This order was not issued until after the two men who are missing from the Eitel Friedrich had disappeared. It was learned today that these two men obtained their leaves of absence and were permitted to leave before the six missing men of the Kronprinz Wilhelm were due to return. Consequently the leaves of absence were not in violation of the order.

It was also learned to day that Dr. Kruger Kroneck and Lieutenant Koch were seen in Norfolk and Newport News on Sunday, Oct. 17, the day they were due to return to their ship. When they returned to Norfolk, it is understood, they heard of the order which permits no more leaves of absence and they refrained from going back to their ship.

Captain Thierichens, commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich has expressed to Rear Admiral Beatty his regret over the disappearance of the men from his vessel. He has indicated that he has no sympathy with their failure to return.

Instructions have been sent to all naval vessels and other Government vessels in the Atlantic Ocean and Gulf of Mexico to be on the lookout for the sloop Eclipse and the six missing officers from the Kronprinz Wilhelm. Since their departure the Government has had no authentic information concerning them. There was an unconfirmed report that they had been seen near Sparrow's Point, at the entrance to the Patapsco River, near the Chesapeake Bay, and also that they had been seen off Hatteras. This information was sent by Rear Admiral Beatty but has not been confirmed. A press report indicated that a sloop resembling the Eclipse was seen along the Brazil coast. It was pointed out at the Navy Department today that since the Eclipse was capable of making only seven knots an hour the missing men could not have reached the Brazilian coast by this time.

The missing men were not prisoners of war. The vessels were interned partly as an act of hospitality to a friendly nation, but mainly because international law does not permit belligerent vessels to make neutral ports a base of operations. Under international law both these warships and their men must remain intended and refrain from participating in the present war.

During the war between Russia and Japan in 1904 three Russian vessels were interned at Manila, and the Russian auxiliary cruiser Lena was interned at San Francisco. Several officers of one of these vessels, on parole, returned to Russia. The Russian Government was notified and the officers were returned. The Russian Ambassador to the United States asked that the officers and crew of the Lena, except five officers and 100 seamen who were necessary for her care, be permitted to leave the United States. The Japanese Government asked that all the officers and crew be detained in the United States until the termination of hostilities. President Roosevelt decided that it would not be consistent with neutrality to grant the request for the repatriation of any of the officers of crew of the Lena unless both belligerents agreed to it. Without such an agreement he regarded the position of the men as being identical in principle with that of a military force entering neutral territory and there necessarily held to be neutral.

None of the officers or men of the interned German cruisers can be permitted to return to Germany without the consent of the belligerent with whom Germany is at war. In the war between Russia and Japan, a sub-Lieutenant of the Russian naval vessel Aurora, interned at Manila, was, as a favor, permitted to return to Russia on his parole that he would not take further part in the war against Japan. This request was not granted until after the Japanese Government gave its assent.

WINS SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Chauffeur, Who Names Noble Employers, Convicted of Theft.

Arthur Edward Thorne, a chauffeur who was convicted of grand larceny in the first degree, won a suspended sentence in General Sessions yesterday after writing a letter asking Judge Rosalsky for another chance. The complainant, Louise Alexander Strang of the Hotel Cumberland, who charged him with stealing her $6,000 limousine, also urged clemency.

Thorne came to this country from England four years ago. He asserts he was employed in England as chauffeur by Queen Alexandria, the Earl of Saltoun, Lord and Lady Belper, and Baron de Forest. He also gave Judge Rosalsky the list of his employers in this country, naming Vincent Astor, Mrs. John Astor, Mrs. Edward N. Breitung, E. S. Salzberger, Vernon Castle, and Isaac Guggenheimer.

Before he was arraigned for sentence, Thorne informed the court that he was employed now by W. J. Ormond of Prides Crossing, Mass., who was willing to take him back and who was hurrying down from Boston to intercede in his behalf. Mr. Ormond did not appear in court.

DROP HORSE AMBULANCES.

City Hospitals in Manhattan and Bronx to Use Motors Only.

Motor ambulances will replace the horse-drawn vehicles at all the city hospitals in Manhattan and the Bronx tomorrow morning, which include Bellevue, Gouverneur, Harlem, and Fordham Hospitals. Efficiency and economy are the objects of the change. It is expected that territory may be covered more speedily with the automobile ambulances and with fewer of them.

Some of the horses have been in the service twenty years. The animals will not be sold, but are to be transferred to more easy work or none at all at the city's inebriate farm at Warwick, N. Y. Other work will be found for some of the oldest drivers who are not chauffeurs. Among them are John Collins, Superintendent of the ambulance service at Bellevue, and J. J. O'Neill.

William Allen Recovering.

William Allen, referee in bankrutcy, who has been dangerously ill for a week at his home, 51 East Sixty-fifth Street, has passed the crisis and is on the road to recovery.

$800,000, His Widow's Share, Must Pay a Double Tax to the State.

SURVIVED HIM ONLY A DAY

57 to 61 Cliff Street Appraised at $400,000—Paintings Valued at $22,575 to Brooklyn Institute.

Most of Mr. Schieren's real estate, which was appraised at $1,009,000, is in Manhattan. The factory property of the Charles A. Schieren Company at 30 Ferry Street is valued at $70,000. Other realty holdings in Manhattan are three parcels of property, one at 67 to 71 Cliff Street being appraised at $400,000. Mr. Schieren owned three parcels of property in Brooklyn and the Schieren country estate at Islip, L. I., which is valued at $65,000.

The largest holding of his personal property consisted of 5,400 shares of stock of the leather business of the Charles A. Schieren Company, which the Transfer Tax Appraiser's report values at $540,000. The entire personal holdings of Mr. Schieren were appraised at $1,519,385.55. He had $100,000 invested in New York City bonds, and he owned bank and railroad stock.

While the children of Mr. Schieren receive the bulk of his estate, there were several charitable bequests in his will. The Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences receives the Schieren collection of paintings at the institute museum, valued at $22,575, and 100 shares of stock in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. This stock was appraised at $1,200.

Mrs. Louise Schieren, wife of the testator, survived her husband by a day. Her share of her husband's estate was $800,997.25.

This inheritance will be taxed twice by the State of New York. While the first inheritance tax is to be collected on the property left to Mrs. Schieren, the second tax will be collected on the same property which she left to her heirs. Her estate has not yet been appraised.

Railway Surgeons Elect Officers.

The Railway Surgeons' Association of the Pennsylvania Lines East, which has been in convention at the Hotel Martinique, held its annual election of officers yesterday and chose Dr. J. B. Siggins of Oil City President. Drs. J. B. Henderson and C. J. Roberts were elected Vice Presidents, Dr. A. W. Colcord Secretary, and Dr. J. C. Egbert Treasurer. A clinic for the visiting surgeons will be held this morning at the New York Post-Graduate Hospital.

MAY LET MELBA INTO CLUB.

Taft, Bryan, and Other Circumnavigators to Decide the Question.

The question of admitting women to membership in the Circumnavigators Club was the principal topic of discussion at a special meeting of the around-the-worlders at the Reform Club in South William Street yesterday. The matter became an issue in the club because of the application of Mme. Nellie Melba of Melbourne, Australia, who asked to be allowed to join the Australian branch of the club. After discussion it was decided to hold it over until the annual meeting of the club next month, when a vote of the entire membership can be taken. Among those members of the club who will be asked to express an opinion on the subject will be ex-President Taft, William Jennings Bryan, Thurlow Weed Barnes, W. Tyrie Stevens, Richard Harding Davis, and Poultney Bigelow.

A new constitution was unofficially adopted to be presented at the annual meeting. The question of permanent quarters for the club occupied a part of the session, and a number of plans were considered. Several uptown clubs have offered their quarters to the circumnavigators under certain conditions. Other propositions came from hotels.

It Is a School's Work That Counts

CONCENTRATION is the keynote of our work. Before a boy leaves here he has learned once for all to keep his mind on one thing at a time. It is not a cramming process. It is simply utilizing the moments a boy wastes if he lets his mind wander. These records are more than isolated cases. They are representative of the type of work we do. Names and indisputable records on request.

SAYS SWANN BIDS FOR CRIMINAL VOTE

William D. Guthrie Attacks His "So-Called Humanitarianism" Before Lawyers.

PREDICTS WIDE-OPEN TOWN

George W. Wickersham and William Rand, Jr., Praise District Attorney Perkins at Meeting.

George W. Wickersham, William D. Guthrie, and William Rand, Jr., addressed a gathering of several hundred lawyers at 27 Cedar Street yesterday in the interest of District Attorney Charles A. Perkins. All attacked Judge Edward Swann, the Tammany candidate for District Attorney, and accused him of being under Tammany influence.

"In the case of a tremendous city like New York, with its great accumulations of wealth," said Mr. Wickersham, "there is no office more important to the well-being, prosperity, and safety of the citizens than that of District Attorney. It is long since Tammany Hall has ventured to reach out its hand for that prize; in fact, not since the days of Gardiner has Tammany Hall been able to boast possession of it—and Gardiner, you may remember, was removed from office by Governor Roosevelt.

"As for Judge Swann, Mr. Perkins's opponent, it can only be said that he is a respectable nonentity, exactly the kind of man behind whom Tammany always seeks to cover its reputation. It is for you to decide between the two, and I cannot help believing that the quiet voters of New York will do what those quiet men did in New Jersey yesterday, who let their wives do the talking, but quietly decided the issue in their own way."

Mr. Guthrie discussed at length the qualifications of Mr. Perkins and then launched an attack on Mr. Swann.

"It is a truism," he said, "that if the criminal laws, however sufficient and comprehensive in themselves, are feebly, inefficiently, or sentimentally enforced, the community is at the mercy of the lawless. Let politics again re-enter that office and control its policies, as was the case during the last Tammany administration, and at once we shall have the wide-open town and comparative immunity to those criminals who have political influence. I venture to say that there is not a professional criminal in the city today of any class who does not want a political District Attorney and who will not work from now until election day for the success of such a candidate.

"Now, if the people of the city after fifteen years of competent, impartial, non-partisan, and incorruptible District Attorneys desire that the criminal laws shall continue to be strongly and effectively and impartially enforced, then they should vote to continue in the office of District Attorney the man who now occupies that office.

"If, on the other hand, the people want a lax administration of the criminal laws under the feeble direction of a candidate who openly bids for the votes of the criminal and law-breaking classes by professing so-called humanitarianism, by suggesting that he will mitigate the rigors of the law or put himself up as wiser than the law, by intimating that he will liberally exercise the power of dismissing indictments found by the Grand Jury, and if the people want a District Attorney who has been affiliated with Tammany Hall the whole of his political life, not only under Murphy but under Croker, and who is reasonably certain to fill the great office of District Attorney and his numerous staff of assistants with what are known to the disgrace of the bar as Tammany lawyers and Murphy henchmen, let them vote for the nominee of Tammany Hall."

Mr. Rand said that while no one doubted that Judge Swann was personally honest, personal honesty was but a small part of the qualifications required in the position of prosecuting attorney of this county.

District Attorney Perkins spoke last night at six meetings in various parts of the city.

Frank Moss, Progressive candidate, spoke at six noonday meetings and last night at twelve meetings.

At Tammany Hall tonight Judge Swann, Alfred E. Smith, Senator Robert F. Wagner, and John Godfrey Saxe will discuss the new Constitution.

Boy Romancer's Picture for Movies.

Two weeks ago a thirteen-year-old boy was picked up by the Yonkers police. To date he has given six different names and addresses, all of which have proved fictitious. The lad's latest story is that he is a cousin of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. In hopes of finding the parents or guardian of the romancer, City Judge Beall had a photograph of the lad sent to several moving picture syndicates in New York, with a request that they be shown throughout the country.

STREET ROW BETRAYS WOMAN IS SPIED ON

White, She Argues with Negro, Who Later Explains Her Protector Employs Him.

A group of men watching the demonstrator of a patented article in the display window of a drug store at Broadway and Sixty-fifth Street last night heard a dispute between a negro and a well-dressed, white woman nearby. Two men in the crowd by the window resenting the negro's remarks to an apparently refined white woman, interfered in the altercation and told him to leave the corner. When he insisted on talking to the woman one of the men gave him a light push.

The crowd began to take notice of the incident, and the negro, as he explained later, feared that the white men would turn against him in a body. So he called out for a policeman, and Policeman Kiernan of the West Sixty-eighth Street Station appeared. On the negro's complaint Kiernan arrested the man who had pushed him. In the confusion of the arrest the woman slipped into a taxicab, in which she was driven away.

At the police station the negro said he was Samuel M. Gibbs of 306 West 119th Street, and the prisoner said he was Gordon McGregor, 38 years old, of 148 West Sixty-seventh Street. As soon as the two men entered the station Gibbs withdrew his complaint against McGregor, saying that the man had not harmed him, and that he had caused his arrest only to "get the jump on" the crowd of white men.

McGregor was released, and the incident was closed as far as the police were concerned, but when asked by newspaper reporters why he had been in altercation with the woman, Gibbs said that he had been employed to watch her by a man well known in society. His employer, he said, told him early in the evening that the woman was drinking in a restaurant in Columbus Avenue, and that he should induce her to return to her hotel, or at least watch her until she returned of her own volition. She was stopping, the negro said, at a hotel in Madison Avenue.

The woman left the restaurant at 9:30 o'clock, according to Gibbs, and went to the office of a physician in West Sixty-fifth Street, where the negro, after following her from the restaurant, urged her to go to her hotel. She refused, he said, and walked to Sixty-fifth Street and Broadway, where he once more remonstrated with her. It was when he was talking with her this time that the interference occurred.

The negro refused to give the name of the woman, but declared that she belonged to a well-known family of Wilmington, Del., and had been in trouble once before because of her liking for the night life in restaurants. The man by whom the negro said he was employed could not be found last night.

JOHN D. JR.'S GIFT TO MINERS

$100,000 for Y. M. C. A. Building in Southern Colorado Camps.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Oct. 20.—The Rockefeller Foundation, at the request of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has arranged to give $100,000 for the erection of model Y. M. C. A. buildings in the coal camps of Southern Colorado to further Mr. Rockefeller's plans to better the living and working conditions of the employes of the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company.

This was announced today by men connected with the Y. M. C. A. Ever since Mr. Rockefeller's visit to the State it has been known that he was contemplating such a move, and was only hesitating until he had decided upon the best way to make the donation.

These structures will not take the place of the club houses which the company now has or is erecting in the principal camps. The Y. M. C. A. buildings will be separate and will belong outright to and will be maintained by the Young Men's Christian Association. The buildings, it is said, will be models for their size. There will be a gymnasium and a library in each, and in a few of the buildings in the larger camps there will be swimming pools.

It is hinted that if the $100,000 donation is not sufficient to equip these buildings as Mr. Rockefeller wants them equipped, another contribution will be forthcoming.

7 FIREMEN SAVED BY RESCUE PARTY

Ludgate and Companions Found in a Cellar, Overcome by Smoke and Gas Fumes.

ARE REVIVED BY PULMOTORS

Explosion of Meter the Cause of the Mishap—Fire Drives Sixty Tenants from Building.

The members of Engine Company 221 dropped into the cellar of the four-story brick double tenement at 281 Wythe Avenue, Williamsburg, at 8 o'clock last night through a sidewalk grating after they had found the cellar stairs eaten away by a blaze which had filled the house with smoke and driven the sixty tenants to the sidewalk by stairs and fire-escapes. Acting Assistant Chief Isaac Ludgate was at the head of his men when a gas meter exploded and the cellar was flooded with fumes.

Ludgate shouted for the men to save themselves, and there was a rush for the ladder which had been dropped into the areaway, but when some of the men reached the sidewalk it was found that Ludgate and six companions had not come up. Men of Engine Company 212 went after them and brought the seven to the sidewalk senseless from the smoke and gas they had inhaled.

Dr. Nathanson from Williamsburg Hospital, Dr. Horowitz from the Eastern District, and Dr. Matthews from the Greenpoint Hospital worked over the men with two pulmotors and resuscitated all except Henry Gallagher, who was hurried to Williamsburg Hospital. There it was said later that he would recover, though his condition was serious.

There have been fourteen fires in the same neighborhood in the last two weeks, most of which have been of suspicious origin, and Fire Marshal Brophy announced after an investigation last night that he could not account for this fire on any natural cause. It was confined to the cellar and, except for the dense smoke, did little damage.

SIGNS FOR 17 BULL MOOSE.

Florindo S. Polo, an insurance agent with an office in the Equitable Life Building at 120 Broadway, was held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Cobb in the Tombs Court yesterday on the charge of falsely acknowledging a petition indorsing J. J. O'Connell for the Progressive nomination for District Attorney. He was arrested on the affidavit of Ciro Arrigo of 322 Bowery. Arrigo said he met Polo on Aug. 31 last, and, being a Progressive himself, willingly signed the petition which Polo presented to him. According to Arrigo, Polo then said:

"You seem to have a very good handwriting. Won't you kindly write these names on the petition also?"

Arrigo said Polo gave him a list of seventeen names, which he copied into the petition, and which were duly acknowledged by Polo as a Commissioner of Deeds.

SEVEN PLEAD GUILTY OF "MOONSHINE" FRAUD

Abandon Defense in Whisky Conspiracy Cases—Two Former Federal Employes Own Up.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Oct. 20.—Seven men, charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government in the manufacture of so-called moonshine whisky, pleaded guilty in the United States District Court today. They will be sentenced tomorrow. The case against Fred Bowles of Fort Smith, the eighth defendant, was dismissed. The cases went to trial yesterday, and the action taken by the defendants today was a surprise.

Those who pleaded guilty were: John L. Casper, Kansas City, alleged head of the conspiracy; George Hartman, Charles Brewbaker, and John Farrabee, all of Kansas City, employes of Casper; J. Henry Brown, Harrison, Ark., formerly a Government gauger; S. L. Williams, Winston-Salem, N. C., former revenue agent, who resigned from the Government service to enter business with Casper, and John Coffey of Fort Smith.

The Government authorities predict that out of the cases may grow a prosecution of many other men who it is alleged have swindled the Government out of $15,000,000 in the last ten years. The Fort Smith plant, the basis of the present prosecutions, the Government found was connected with a large sewer, with outlets so arranged that the contents of its eight 10,000-gallon tubs could be discharged into the Arkansas River within a few minutes.

CANCER REMEDY PUTS BEBEE OUT OF CORNELL

College Objects to Doctor's Exploitation of Autolysin and Ends His Department.

Dr. Silas P. Beebe has been eliminated from the Faculty of Cornell University Medical College, according to a statement made yesterday by the Dean, Dr. William M. Polk, on account of his alleged "commercial exploitation" of autolysin, sold as a remedy for cancer.

He had been at the head of the department of experimental therapeutics for six years and is an alumnus of the college. In connection with his experiments he investigated a poultice powder composed of various herbs and compounded originally by an Austrian physician. An extract was made from the mixture and under its new name of autolysin was used by Dr. Beebe in the form of an emulsion for injection into the blood.

Dean Polk said last evening that the department of which Dr. Beebe had been in charge had been discontinued, and that the connection of Dr. Beebe with the institution had thus been automatically severed.

"The issue between Dr. Beebe and Cornell," said Dr. Polk, "is merely that he announced it as his intention to exploit a remedy which was not indorsed by the Medical Board of the General Memorial Hospital. There was a difference of opinion concerning it. Whether or not this remedy has any virtue is not the point at issue. The point is that, as he was then one of our professors, we did not consider it in accordance with ethics that he should enter into the exploitation of the remedy on a commercial basis. The by-laws of the General Memorial Hospital also provide that no publication of the results of any experiments there are to be made without the approval of the Advisory Board. The publication concerning this preparation was made without that consent and before the staff had reached any conclusion."

Dr. Beebe said last evening that although he had reason to believe that the Cornell authorities were displeased with the manner in which the remedy had been employed, he had never received any official communication to that effect. He declared that all that he knew was that the President of Cornell University, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, had told him that the department of experimental therapeutics had been abolished. He had not gone near the college since, he said.

Always Be Sure of the Number

There are two ways to call a telephone number.

The wrong way is to call from memory: to "take a chance," to trust to luck that your memory doesn't play a trick on you, with the fickle figures in a telephone number.

The right way is to consult the Telephone Directory and make sure you have the right number.

The right way saves annoyance to yourself and to the persons you might have called by mistake. It helps build up a higher grade of service for yourself and others.

RECOVER LOUDEN PASSPORT

"Count" Max Lynar Louden was arraigned before Judge Crain in General Sessions yesterday and pleaded not guilty to two indictments charging him with bigamy. He was remanded to the Tombs for trial, bail remaining fixed at $10,000, although his lawyer requested that the amount be reduced. The three women who say they are wives of the "Count"—Mrs. Fred Arnold, Mrs. Rose O'Brien, and Mrs. Lalia Florence Jansen, were not in court.

Agents of the Department of Justice succeeded yesterday in recovering the passport which was issued to the "Count" last July under the name of Chimang. They will also try to recover the passport issued to his present wife, Lalia Florence Jansen, who since the "Count's" arrest has disappeared.

Several persons appeared yesterday and confirmed the reports of Louden's operations as a swindler. One man declared he was the inventor of at least three of the devices for which the "Count" appears to have claimed the credit. These were the unsinkable battleship, the armored automobile, and a pontoon bridge. He said he intrusted his ideas to the "Count" with the hope that Louden could interest the United States Government in purchasing the inventions. The Department of Justice has also been informed that "Louden" was not the inventor of the patent army kit and the "self-starting lantern" and the flying machine in which he is said to have induced persons to invest substantial sums of money.

BOARD OF EDUCATION
FORD BUILDING

July 13, 1915.

The Grolier Society,
New York.

Gentlemen:

I have had a set of the Book of Knowledge in my family for about five years. As fast as the children learn to read, they find their way into these volumes, partly through the aid of the numerous and remarkable illustrations. At all times, but of course especially on rainy days, my four children, now ranging from 7 to 16 years of age, have found pleasure and instruction in the Book of Knowledge.

Believing, as I do, that school education should as far as practicable prepare the way for self education, and also believing that suitable books in the home are the surest means of self education, I look upon the Book of Knowledge as being one of the most serviceable and satisfactory means that I know of to that end. The text is well adapted to the minds of children and the pictures so appealing and informing that children seem to develop rapidly in their powers to use and enjoy both text and illustrations in their combination.

My experience has convinced me, too, that the material contained in the various volumes is well organized and accurate.

You are at liberty to make any use of this letter which you see fit.

Very truly yours,

THE NEW JERSEY VOTE AGAINST SUFFRAGE.

After his defeat in 1872 HORACE GREELEY found, or, as the tale has been told, there were found for him, "grumbs of comfort." In the returns of the vote in New Jersey on Tuesday, when the woman suffrage amendment was lost by an adverse majority of 55,000, the champions of the cause profess to find whole loaves of consolation and encouragement. They are gratified that so many as 135,000 New Jersey voters should have voted for the woman suffrage amendment; they insist that from the vote in New Jersey no particular inference is to be drawn as to the coming vote in Pennsylvania, in New York, and in Massachusetts; anyway, though States may deny them they will go to Congress and get a Federal amendment.

It is all very well to keep up a stout heart, but the wisest politicians of the male sex make it a practice to look the facts and the figures in the face. The figures tell their story with unmistakable plainness. There were in approximate numbers 133,200 votes cast for the amendment, 184,400 against it, giving a majority against of 51,200, a proportion of practically 3 to 2. The total vote was 317,600. In the Presidential year of 1912, the total vote cast in New Jersey was 432,000, although in 1908 the total had risen to the record figure of 467,000. The total vote for Governor in 1910 was again 433,000. This may be taken as about the measure of the New Jersey vote in years when the people are aroused. It appears, therefore, that something more than 100,000 qualified voters of New Jersey did not vote on Tuesday. The workers in the suffrage cause insist that the two party organizations ordered out the faithful to vote against the women, and that this accounts for the large majority against them. But the organizations certainly did not command men to stay at home, and the inference as to the 100,000 absentees is reasonably plain. Voters who sincerely believe that the ballot should be given to women would pretty certainly have had interest enough to go to the polls and vote. It is fair to conclude that of the 100,000 who did not vote, a very great majority are against the amendment. On a full vote the women would have suffered a more severe defeat.

The vote for the amendment, 135,000, is less than one-third the number of votes cast at the election of 1912. If comfort can be found in that fact, the women are entitled to it. In some of the Western States they have won in years when a small vote was cast, suffrage receiving the support of far less than a majority of the voters. On a small vote in New Jersey they were beaten. As men figure in their political prognostications, that fact is one from which no encouragement can be drawn. The majority against the amendment was a greater majority than has been recorded in New Jersey for either party in a generation, with the exception of the Presidential years when Mr. BRYAN was a candidate—for Mr. BRYAN New Jersey is distinctly the enemy's country—and in 1904 when Mr. ROOSEVELT had a majority of 80,000. Mr. WILSON'S plurality in 1912 was 32,000, and in 1910 his plurality for Governor was 49,000. In 1913, in a total vote of 375,000, Governor FIELDER had a majority of 32,000.

To the cold and critical male judgment not affected with a tender sympathy for the suffrage cause, or by undue prejudice against it, this New Jersey defeat seems to take its place with the decisions against suffrage of States like Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. It was not to a Wyoming, a Colorado or a California electorate that the question was submitted on Tuesday, it was an Eastern electorate. Western States, with their vast areas and sparse populations, have given the suffragists an opportunity to construct maps that are more impressive geographically than they are in the accompanying tables of population. In the more densely settled Eastern States the cause encounters an evil fortune. Ocean County was the only New Jersey County which gave a majority for the amendment, and in Ocean County the settlers are few and far between. Whatever the advocates of the cause may say or feel, the inference from New Jersey to the three other Eastern States in which a vote is to be taken next November, is very direct, and it can hardly be denied that it foreshadows the future. The minds of the men of the East have not been convinced that it is well for the State that women should vote; they appear to believe that it is not well for the women themselves. In New Jersey the cause cannot have another trial for five years, as the amendment which would have allowed another appeal to the people in two years was also defeated.

Nevertheless the women of New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts will keep up the fight. They ought to continue their campaign in order that when they have done their best the decisions may have some meaning. It remains for them to say whether, when the judgment has been rendered, they will accept it or will continue to fight against it, to keep up their agitation for rehearing and further votes. Their striving will end some time, for they will either win their cause or lose it beyond hope. The result in New Jersey cannot be said to justify the hope that the East is a favorable field for their endeavor.

THE RECOMMENDATION.

What citizen would employ a plumber or a painter who hadn't learned the trade? Who wouldn't prefer an experienced physician or lawyer to a novice whose sheepskin was still fresh? Tried skill is what we are all looking for in all skilled employments.

The same rule obtains, or should obtain, in public employments. Between a District Attorney who worthily and admirably fulfills the duties of that office, who by long service as an Assistant in that office is intimately familiar with its workings, and an untried man who has all to learn; between a highly qualified candidate and another transferred for political convenience from a different post, what voter who does not surrender his judgment to party orders can hesitate?

What District Attorney PERKINS has done is his sufficient and authoritative recommendation.

THE MONEY MARKET.

The sequel to the floating of the Anglo-French loan is more surprising than the fact itself. London in its prime could not have been more imperturbable than New York in its failure to reflect the largest transaction of the sort in financial history. The newspapers reported unprecedented figures as part of the current news, but the money market was unruffled and the commentators have been silent. Instead of being baled out of funds this market continues to accumulate them. There is announced the receipt of $25,000,000 more of British gold, and a like amount is expected today. That makes an addition this year of $300,000,000 in gold to banking resources, which are in no need of them.

This accumulation of cash is in addition to the growth of domestic credits. The Anglo-French commercial credit is spoken of as huge. In fact, it is less than half of the increase in New York Clearing House business since New Year's. This growth is the reflection of the Anglo-French loan in small part only, and the banks are doing their best to make it smaller yet. Each of them wishes to realize the handsome investment return in full and dislikes to pay the usual 2 per cent. for bank balances for interior customers, whose funds swell the funds here. Since August, at the period when it has been customary for the country banks to ask accommodation to move the crops, they have sent here $130,536,000, and the movement before August was of the same sort. To complete the picture it is necessary to recall our huge excess of exports over imports of merchandise at the rate of more than a billion a year. England has long surpassed this country in volume of foreign trade, but seldom, if ever, has it had such credits on movement of goods as now are due us. The best trade is that which approximately balances itself and requires small loss of liquid banking funds. Traders who take too much of a customer's cash are in a way to discourage further purchases. In fact, we have seen that our exports would stop if we did not give commercial credits in the manner of the Anglo-French loan.

Today the Bank of England is borrowing money from the open market in a futile effort to correct the exchanges, the key to which lies no longer there. The world's money market is where the world's business is done, and that is here. Only the money acceptable here is world money. The funds which congest the London money market, although in less degree than Berlin, are of the sort to which we were accustomed when we were flooded with paper issued illimitably when business was declining, and needed no such facilities of exchange. What London needs is what it is parting with valiantly at a time when its means of filling its stores are smaller than customary. We need nothing less than what we are compelled to take, and in fact would suffer if we were forced to keep what we are exporting. We could not eat eleven billions' worth of farm produce, and have no use for war supplies. The situation, in short, is such as to recall the prayer to be delivered from too much prosperity.

It is almost too much good fortune to add that the corrective of the dangerous situation exists and is in operation. We are passing from security banking to commercial banking, and the beginnings of excesses upon the security market are discouraged by bankers who once would not have known what to do with their idle credits. The same bankers who now are discouraging a merely speculative use of the funds in their care are seeking to turn them to manufactures and trade, under the leadership of the Federal Reserve Board and the Federal Trade Commission. The Federal banking system is for the little man, the trader or manufacturer who has been accustomed to hundreds of personal credit where he might have thousands of commercial credit if he kept accounts to show his solvency. Our banks formerly did business too much on securities. That, with an inelastic currency which refused to contract, was the root of our alternate orgies and collapses. We now face the singular experience of credits which fail to be absorbed, and of restraint in speculation in face of the war's great incentives. If the bankers will keep the funds out of Wall Street, and if traders will only take the funds which the Federal system is pressing upon them, we are likely to see a commercial stimulation which would stimulate Wall Street better than unlimited credit. A trade revival is the best corrective to speculative excesses. If a time of expansion lies ahead, still further ahead lies the means of contraction without panic and collapse. Our bankers are keeping their heads, and our business men are almost too calm. It would be almost too much to hope that the lawmakers and prosecutors also should take a course of sanity and safety. Then, indeed, there would be an outlook needing no gilding because pure gold.

A GERMAN INTERVIEW.

"Then why keep up this senseless slaughter of humans?" asks MAXIMILIAN HARDEN, the brilliant, sometime inspired German journalist, in an interview with the Berlin correspondent of The New York World. All must see that the Central Powers have not been crushed, that the situation of their enemies was never more discouraging than is now the case, that events political and military portend the beginning of the end. Why, then, go on with the killing? The editor of Die Zukunft asks the correspondent. Why are there yet no indications of peace? Why will not Russia, France, Italy, and England realize that they are defeated? The questions are self-serving. The answer is forthcoming. England is the obstacle. She is not ready to talk peace, and peace depends wholly upon England. Having failed to defeat Germany in the field, she wants to drag the war out interminably, hoping to wear Germany down economically until she shall be willing to accept better terms. In the meantime, HARDEN insists, for England's obstinacy Europe is "bleeding to death."

Yet there is hope. One man in England is of a peace-loving nature, has high ideals, received the gifts of reason and sense, and doubtless knows what the situation is. He is Sir EDWARD GREY, Minister of Foreign Affairs, who is believed in Germany to have said to the German Ambassador that England, by entering the war, might ultimately be in a position to do more for Germany and for peace than if she kept out of it. "I am inclined to think," says MAXIMILIAN HARDEN, "that he [GREY] sees the "utter uselessness of letting Europe "bleed itself to death, as it is doing."

It is the most interesting utterance out of Germany for some time, and, if inspired, as is possible, it may be also the most significant. The correspondent added at the end: "HARDEN was "of the opinion that people of every "country involved—men who fight "and bleed and die, women and chil-"dren who at home work and suffer—"are praying for peace." That is to say, the people of Germany pray for peace, all the more earnestly, perhaps, in consideration of the fortunes of war to date. The aggressor alone can afford to stop where he is. He possibly now is at the very pinnacle of his achievements. True, as HARDEN says, the Central Powers have not been crushed. True, also, even as he says, Europe is bleeding to death. The allied enemy has more blood to spare. That was probably what the editor of Die Zukunft was thinking of and did not say.

Germany undoubtedly wishes to parley for peace. She has won everything so far that has been lost on land. She has spoils to trade. If she should succeed in opening a corridor to Asia, that might prove to be of no great strategic value, but it would be something more to trade. And meanwhile one recognizes certain psychological phenomena. There is first the desire, then the strange, egotistical expectation of its direct and immediate gratification, and, thirdly, the delusion that the world is diabolically and wantonly resolved to withhold the very thing Germany wants. She wants peace. Therefore, why shouldn't all this hideous killing immediately stop? Let the whole world hear. Germany is willing. England is not. Therefore, according to HARDEN, England is the monster.

CHICAGO'S PURITAN MAYOR.

The closing of the Chicago saloons on Sunday seems to have been received without excitement by most of its citizens. A State law provides that "whoever keeps open any tip-"pling house or place where liquor is "sold or given away upon the first "day of the week, commonly called "Sunday, shall be fined not exceeding "$200." Until this October the tippling houses of Chicago have been open under a city ordinance. Mayor WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON, having discovered that the statute in question has been on the books for some seventy years, that the Chicago tippling houses are not closed to Sunday tipplers, and that Chicago is in Illinois, issued an executive order directing that the law be enforced, and enforced it has been, to the satisfaction of a large part of the community, the amazement and envy of cities less virtuous and law-abiding.

Whether Chicago will not backslide from its present moral elevation, is another matter; but nothing can take from her the distinction, the very rare distinction, of carrying out the provisions of a law offensive to local habits and that treads on many toes. In New York, such a task is regarded as hopeless, is only sporadically undertaken, and is assumed to be beyond the energies of the police.

Whatever views, rigid or tolerant, men may hold of sumptuary legislation, whatever concessions some of them may be willing to make to elements of the population whose practice in respect to the use of strong or mild drink is different from theirs, the habitual disregard of law by a great city is a sorry spectacle. No matter what we may think of "Puritanical" laws, a good citizen should be willing to put up with more than a slight inconvenience for the sake of upholding the law. Chicago deserves to think well of herself; and even if her conversion should not be durable, only hardened sinners will gibe her.

Yet, as in most things mortal, the bitter goes with the sweet. WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON is one of the practice squad of Republican candidates for the Presidential nomination in 1916. New and strange to the East, he appeals to the hospitality of every unprejudiced or uncommitted Republican mind. Will it be believed that the friends of illicit thirst have published facsimile prints of certain promises said to have been made by him in March? For instance:

> That he will oppose all laws known as "Blue Laws," and that he especially declares that he is opposed to a closed Sunday, believing that the State law referring to Sunday closing is obsolete and should not be enforced by the City Administration. And that he is opposed to all ordinances tending to curtail the citizens of Chicago in the enjoyment of their liberties on the weekly day of rest.

No doubt this is a forgery, begotten of the wicked. It reveals "the desperate straits" to which the anti-Thompsonians are "forced to resort." But suppose it to be true? Doesn't it show that Mr. THOMPSON is an experienced and a capable politician, who knows all the difference between long promise and short performance? We should hate to see the waiting list bereaved of his august name.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Really Was Candy of Babies.

Small as seem to have been, in comparison with the operations of the now almost forgotten CASSIE CHADWICK, those of the "fairy godmother" whose exploits are now having revelations in General Sessions, they nevertheless almost as brilliantly illustrate the amazing possibilities of human credulity when large amounts of unearned or easily earned money are promised as a lure to faith.

The several and various young men and older ones who lent trusting ears—and all the money they had or could borrow—to the MRS. JOHNSON who said she was a MRS. FLAGLER, were not unsophisticated rustics of the sort so often described as "gaping." They were all well-broken urbanites, and metropolitans as well, presumable readers of the newspapers, and more or less acquainted with the ways and wiles of a wicked world. Yet they asked no credential except a name associated in their minds with millions; they did not notice the ludicrous disproportion between the rewards offered and the services rendered, and never a one of them was once struck by the unlikeness of "MRS. FLAGLER'S" behavior to that of any men or women with real money whose habits they had been privileged to observe from near or far.

They believed her because they wanted to believe. They were not the first nor will they be the last to do that in matters even more important than those in which they thought themselves concerned. One wonders whether their elderly deceiver has a sense of humor and smiled as she worked her charms, or whether the explanation of her strange efficiency lay in the fact that before she convinced others she had convinced herself.

Were They Helped by a Swede?

Latest and perhaps most plausible of the several theories in regard to the fugitive officers of the German ships interned at Norfolk is that they boarded a Swedish ship well out to sea, sinking as they quitted it the boat in which their flight began.

This would account for the otherwise mysterious disappearance of the small but stanch and well-equipped Eclipse, and it is not impossible that arrangements for the taking of such passengers in such a manner could have been made with one of the many Swedish captains using that port. His consent to undertake the rather ticklish job might have been a matter of money alone, or of money combined with the sympathy which not a few Swedes—the majority of them, however, not in the seafaring class—feel for the German cause.

Of course the Captain who took a hand in laying a plot to break our laws, and to bring upon us heavy responsibilities and serious embarrassments, would incur some risk of future penalties for himself and his owners, but the danger is not great. Proof of his participation in the conspiracy would be next to impossible, while it would be the easiest thing in the world to tell a story colorable if not convincing of having encountered the Germans in a disabled boat far from land and of having taken them aboard in common humanity.

That tale might even serve the missing officers as an answer to the charge that they have committed the deeply disgraceful crime of breaking parole. Nobody would believe it, but probably none could demonstrate its falsity in court. It's a long road, however, from Norfolk to Germany, or even to Sweden, and there are British as well as American cruisers looking eagerly for these men so forgetful of the plighted word. Their conscience may not be saying much now, but a lot will be heard from it should the voyage so ill begun end in capture. Then, even though they should evade remorse, regret would certainly overtake them.

Massacre Reported Officially.

That the Germans should charge the Russians with showing ferocity in ways unauthorized by the laws of war as set down in the books was to be expected, partly because of the peculiar and interesting sensitiveness shown by the Germans whenever they are themselves the victims of "irregular" conduct, and partly because few of us doubt the tendency of Russia's wild horsemen to ignore the amenities of military conduct. What is surprising is that an official Russian report should, at least in seeming, admit a slaughter by Russian troops of captured German soldiers.

Such a report did that yesterday; or almost did it, for after describing the taking, in the Styr River region, of 700 men and twenty-eight officers of the First Kronprinz Grenadier Regiment, the account went on to say that "owing to the exasperation caused among our men by an almost general use of explosive bullets by the Germans, a large number of men from the above regiment were bayoneted." This is not quite the same thing as saying that the bayoneting took place after surrender had been formally made and formally accepted. It might be interpreted as meaning that the killing was done as the last act of a triumphant rush on the enemy, and in refusal to recognize surrender rather than in violation of the claims to mercy which its acceptance is supposed to create for civilized conquerors. To give that significance to the words, however, puts charity under severe strain—more severe, indeed, than it can bear quite safely.

The fact of the bayoneting of men in one way or another helpless, and as an act of reprisal, remains on either theory of the grisly episode, and the best that can be said for it, perhaps, is that the military authorities at Petrograd, who know very well the need to make the world believe, if they can, in the thoroughness of Russia's civilization, did not see harm or danger in telling about what happened to the German Grenadiers.

Similar massacres have been charged again and again to German soldiers since the war began, and what seemed to be documentary proof that they were the result of orders issued by a commanding officer of high rank has been presented in at least one case. There are so many black pots in the Europe of the day that none of them can well afford to discuss either loudly or at great length the dark color of the other kettles.

Ghastliness In Movies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I say a few lines regarding pictures passed by the National Board of Censorship?

My little boy, being very fond of animal pictures, I thought I would take him to one of our best moving picture houses uptown. We thoroughly enjoyed the Hearst-Selig Weekly and the comedy films. The headline picture, "The Campbells Are Coming," featured Miss Grace Cunard, who was splendid, but of all the terrible, blood-curdling details of the several battles taking place, the awful sight of men nearly dead from loss of blood and still fighting, women of their families frantically fighting among themselves right amidst the men—all this in front of a door on the other side of which we saw the enemy in a similar condition of combat—men biting and tearing each other literally to pieces—really, it was the most atrocious affair I have ever witnessed, and in order that the audience might be duly impressed the same frightful scene was flashed two or three times at intervals. I was horrified to look around me and see the expressions of horror on the faces of some of the small tots, my own included.

Stonehenge.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I beg to differ with Ernest P. Horrwitz in reference to the meaning of Stonehenge. He states that it is from "Stan Hengest, that is, stone horse." Hengest and Horsa were, as he states, the first Saxon invaders of Britain, and, in their language, stan was certainly stone, but horse was simply hors. In the Anglo-Saxon chronicle, entry of 894 A. D., in an account of one of the wars of Alfred the Great, the statement is made that (the besieged army) "haefdon micine duel thara horsa freten." That is, they "had the greater part of their horses eaten."

It would be interesting to learn the real derivation of Stonehenge.

THE CHANTY MAN.

Where is the chanty man of yore?
(Heave ho, we're outward bound!)
Where is the chanty man of yore,
So versed in songs of deep-sea lore?
His time is swiftly passing;
(The wild winds roar!)
The chanty man is passing—
He'll sing no more.

Now man the capstan, sailors all!
(Heave ho, we're outward bound!)
Now man the capstan, sailors all,
The chanty man will heed our call
For one more song together,
(Now, heave and haul!)
In fair or stormy weather,
He'll heed our call.

Oh, sing us sailors "Mobile Bay,"
(Heave ho, we're outward bound!)
Oh, sing us sailors "Mobile Bay,"
Or "Whisky! Johnny!" (heave away)
And "Sally Brown" is pretty.
So sing, boys, sing!
All hands, a deep-sea ditty!
Now, let 'er ring!

Where is the chanty man today?
(Heave ho, we're outward bound!)
Where is the chanty man today?
Oh, let some merchant seaman say,
The while we sing together—
(Now, hands all round!)
In fair or stormy weather,
(We're outward bound!)

BEATRICE BARRY.

MR. McANENY'S WORK.

Editorial Comment on His Change from Public Life to Journalism.

From The Evening Post.

George McAneny has won such a hold on the confidence of this city that it will not doubt that good reasons and high motives actuate him in resigning his office. Yet this morning's announcement of his purpose must have been felt by thousands to be a piece of depressing news. Besides meaning a break in the Fusion Administration, it seems to imply Mr. McAneny's definite retirement from public life. This, we may hope, does not necessarily follow. That a private enterprise should have sought to enlist the kind of ability he has displayed is but natural. THE TIMES is to be heartily congratulated on having secured him; and he, on his part, will surely find an ample and congenial field of labor with that newspaper. But the regret will linger that the city is to lose his official services. No man in recent years has revealed a greater aptitude for public affairs. His clear head and power of lucid statement have more than once guided perplexed citizens through tangled municipal questions; while his industry, his imperturbable good temper, and his gifts of persuasive speech have also shown him fitted for political life. That he should now be irrevocably lost to it would seem a grievous thing. The public has no right to expect a man to go on indefinitely making sacrifices in order to serve it; yet when it has its eye upon one so markedly qualified for office as Mr. McAneny, and whom it had been thinking of as a man who could not fail to be called upon to go up higher, it cannot be blamed for feeling sorry that he is giving up to private business—even a business in which useful work for the public may be done—what was meant for the Commonwealth. Even so, the State may yet apply conscription to him!

A Loss to Public Life.

From The Brooklyn Eagle.

George McAneny announces that he will be associated, after Jan. 1, with Adolph S. Ochs in the publication of THE NEW YORK TIMES, and that his resignation as President of the Board of Aldermen only awaits the final disposal of some questions now before the Board of Estimate. For six years Mr. McAneny has served the city. As Borough President of Manhattan he had two votes in the Board of Estimate. As President of the Board of Aldermen he has three. His place will be filled for a year by the vote of the Board of Aldermen to be chosen next month.

The city loses much in the retirement of a faithful, diligent, and clear-headed public servant. Utterly incapable of being swayed by party or faction politics, always with an eye single to the establishment and maintenance of business efficiency, broad in his views of education and of social service, kindly and courteous to those with whom he had radical disagreements, George McAneny has been appreciated and applauded by our most intelligent citizenship.

Mr. Ochs and THE NEW YORK TIMES gain much by the acquisition of such a man. The administration of a great newspaper has many phases. Mr. Ochs has always realized that success lies in the choice, the securing, the retaining of the strongest men; men who will not be echoes of the voice of any chief, though loyal to policies after policies have been fixed. The vanity of omniscience has been conspicuous by its absence in his control of a newspaper which deserves its prosperity.

Is the field that Mr. McAneny enters broader and with more opportunities for usefulness than the one he leaves? That is hard to determine. It was Burke who coined the expression, "The Fourth Estate," holding the newspaper press as co-ordinate with the lords spiritual, the lords temporal, and the Commons. Macaulay said: "The gallery in which the reporters sit has become the Fourth Estate of the Realm." Carlyle said: "The press is the Fourth Estate of the Realm." To Napoleon the Great is attributed the apothegm: "Four hostile newspapers are more to be feared than a thousand bayonets." Our own Wendell Phillips declared: "Let me make the newspapers and I care not what is preached in the pulpit or what is enacted in Congress." That the newspaper in America has greater power than anywhere else is probably true.

At any rate, we are sure Mr. McAneny honestly believes he has chosen the better part; not for himself, but for his usefulness. He is one of those men who are capable of subordinating self, and do subordinate self, to the accomplishing of what will best serve the community in which they live.

Congratulations.

From The Brooklyn Standard-Union.

After twenty-three years of active service outside the ranks of newspaper men, where he began his career, George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen and formerly Borough President of Manhattan, at the age of 46 announces his prospective return to his former field of activity. It was as head of the Transit Committee of the Board of Estimate that Mr. McAneny did his most notable public work, co-operating with the Public Service Commission in the successful effort to secure the Dual Subway System from which so much is hoped for in all parts of the city. His retirement from the office he holds, which he took with reduced salary to continue his public work, will be a distinct loss in many ways. But in his association with the guiding policy of a great newspaper even more effectual efforts for the general good may be anticipated. Most sincere and hearty congratulations to George McAneny, President of the Board of Aldermen; most sincere and hearty congratulations to THE NEW YORK TIMES, and most sincere and hearty congratulations to Mr. Adolph S. Ochs. All are gainers by their business combination, and let us hope the people of the City of New York will not suffer by the loss of Mr. McAneny from the Board of Estimate.

A Story of Greaves.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a fellow reporter with Arthur Greaves on THE TIMES in the old quarters on Park Row, under City Editor Henry Loewenthal, twenty-six years ago, permit me to pay a tribute to the memory of a man who, even then, in the strenuous old days, evinced the qualities that marked him as the born newspaper man and later insured his success. Among these qualities chiefest was honor—a rather delicate sense in the matter of keeping faith with his associates. One important assignment of his I recall when he covered it in conjunction with a friend on another paper, a form of collaboration discountenanced by City Editors, but much in vogue, particularly among old cronies. His friend failed to show up at the appointed time and place to exchange notes, but Greaves had the whole story. He wrote it while waiting, and turned it in. It was then getting late and still no sign of his friend. Finally he knew it would be too late if he waited longer, so he rewrote the story and handed it in to the City Editor of the other paper, as coming from his friend and with plausible excuse for the delay. Next day he found his fellow reporter unconscious in a hospital. He had been run over the night before, but Greaves had covered him.

England to a Britisher.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me, as an Englishman first and a Britisher afterward, to correct your correspondent, Mr. Edward Howard, of Ottawa, Canada, in regard to his meaning of the terms English and British.

The word English is a national term; the word British is an imperial one. The natives of every British possession are British but not English. The Singhalese and the Canadians, the Fijians and the Australians, the Kaffirs and the Irish, the Bermudians and the Hindus, the Jamaicans and New Zealanders are all British, but not English. Britain proper is the island of England, Scotland and Wales. An Englishman never calls himself a Britisher in an imperial sense.

WE ARE AS OTHER PEOPLE, ONLY MORE SO.

Generous When Excited and Until the Novelty Wears Off, Then Frankly Selfish, Seeing Where Our Interests Lie.

By GERTRUDE ATHERTON.

New York, Oct. 19, 1915.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Baroness Leonie de Rauch, an eminent European author and humanitarian, made an eloquent appeal in a recent number of The Tribune in behalf of an armistice among the European belligerents. Recognizing that all hope of an immediate peace is out of the question, she builds her own hopes on a three months' armistice, and asks us to use our influence to bring it about. She has now been several months in this country and has conceived a most exalted opinion of it, an opinion founded largely on the early history of the United States, on what a country of such beginnings and achievements should be, and upon the reasonably large number of highly civilized friends she has made since her arrival. She finds it hard to understand why such a people have not revolted against the barbarous condition of affairs in Europe, boycotted the belligerents, visited them with our wrath. It is not only our duty, as she conceives it, to use our concerted influence to force the warring powers to call a halt and take three months to think it over, but it should be our master and our universal inclination.

But alas! if we are Americans we are all the descendants of Europe, we have her traditions in our blood, and are made up of precisely the same mental ingredients which in their sum is called human nature. We are greedy, extravagant, sentimental, practical, generous when our imaginations are excited, and quite ingenuously selfish when the novelty has worn off—as witness the slow response to the sufferings of Poland—and, in spite of much tall talk, for ourselves first, last, and all the time. So is every other nation on earth, only we are less hypocritical about it—or shall I say more naïve? We have surface virtues and rooted divergences from the higher ideals, and we have an infinity of surface faults and sound, immovable principles underneath. We go our own way, and it is a national policy to let Europe manage her own affairs.

Therefore, and for the following reasons, I do not believe that the United States, either centrally or generally, will put its full deliberate strength into a demand upon the warring powers to declare an armistice:

(1) Great Britain never would consent. No one knows better than she that with a Russian Winter coming on an armistice would give Germany more satisfaction than anything else except victory. Moreover, the Germans do as they are told and the British do not. When the armistice was over, the central powers, refreshed and recuperated, would march back to the trenches singing "Deutschland über alles," and Tommy Atkins, after three months' loafing and drinking, or enjoying the delights of home, might have come to the conclusion that the game was not worth the trenches and refuse to return. He might, indeed, employ his leisure in remaking internal history. Great Britain knows perfectly well that, avoiding revolutions, there is no question of which side will win in the end, and she will do nothing so stupid as to give the enemy such a magnificent advantage as an armistice.

(2) It would be opposed, silently perhaps, but still opposed by the business men of this country. Last year, just as the United States, after several years of depression, was on the turn, it was almost paralyzed by the outbreak of the European war. For nearly a year this gloomy condition prevailed, but now the turn has come and business is booming. And by no means in war supplies only. The other day, when buying furniture, I asked how soon I could have certain things that had to be specially made. "Not for three weeks, and, indeed, you may be lucky to get them in six," the man replied. When I demanded why it should take so long for comparatively simple work, he replied: "Well, prosperity struck the country suddenly, you see. The factories are running day and night, and can't begin to supply the demand."

There you are. Figure to yourself the American business man consenting to a condition that would paralyze the country a second time. An armistice would mean that every sort of factory would slow down. Thousands of men, moreover, would be flung out of work. The laboring class would be the first to oppose an armistice which threatened to prolong itself into a permanent peace. For that is the truth of the matter: the moneymakers of this country no longer want peace.

All this is very terrible, of course. It should not be, but it is; that is the point. The reasons are not complicated. Only a select few in the world today are really civilized; the masses, even the educated masses, are almost primitive, driven by the primitive emotions and desires. Moreover, only the densely ignorant are unfamiliar with history, and what is history but warfare? What are the pictures that leap into the mind when recalling any period of history? Battles. Therefore, as soon as we recovered from our initial horror—the result of that fine veneer which a laudable desire for civilization has spread over the surface of life—we unconsciously settled back into the belief that war, not peace, is the normal condition of mankind, realized that we happen to be living in great history for once instead of reading about it between calf. Moreover, from being outraged, we have become intensely interested—unless we happen to be unintelligent—and even wonder if we shall ever be able again to take the same interest in the first page of our daily newspaper after the war is over.

And when will that be? Has it occurred to any of the prophets that we may be entering upon one of those war cycles, so familiar in written history? Heaven knows I am no prophet, but I recognize this possibility, for the tangle in Europe grows more complicated daily. Germany cannot win, but it will take many years to crush her. We will grow more philosophical, and more so, even the peace-at-any-pricers. Nothing is so blunting as habit, and Europe fighting will become Europe normal. And if at any time we are threatened—to the extent of actual war—our one idea will be to win, to kill, to annihilate, and we could witness the burning of the enemy's fleet in flames of oil without turning a humanitarian hair. I am sorry that the Baroness de Rauch will be disappointed in us, for she has a noble mind and a noble style, but she will accept us as we are and like us none the less.

PREHISTORIC ENGINEERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question of the slide at Panama is more serious than is realized. It is becoming apparent that other methods might be employed with advantage.

Sir William Willcocks, K. C. M. C., who designed and built the great Assouan Dam on the Nile, stated while on a visit to this country, we, meaning the engineers, could learn something from the Mesopotamians mentioned in Biblical times about the care of our flood rivers. This was a jolt to our sensitive professional feelings, and some of us still feel the shock. Now, it would appear that we could learn something in preventing landslides on our Panama Canal if we would study the work of the prehistoric people in South America, for the want of a name we call Incas.

The geological formation of the towering hills at Culebra is quite common in all the foothills in the mountain range near the Pacific Coast. Having devoted some time in explorations and mining in the locality mentioned, numerous examples of sliding hills have been met with where large areas on slopes have slid down after a downfall of rain. At Buenaventura, south of Panama, there is a tradition among the inhabitants that a landslide took place years ago at a place which is now quite level; a high hill existed which gradually slid into the sea. While mining somewhat further south our plant disappeared during the night and was engulfed by a landslide on the slopes of a hill of a considerable area. This occurred after a heavy rain. Later we reached the ore bed by means of a tunnel. We advanced some distance into the hill. Whole trees were found imbedded therein reduced to carbon by the immense pressure and heat. This material we used in our forges in place of charcoal. The occurrence of whole trees imbedded a long distance in under this hill was evidence of other slides having taken place at remote periods.

The unknown prehistoric people left unmistakable evidence of their mining operations in this locality. This led to examinations of extensive workings and their methods. Parallel ditches were found placed on terraces raised one above the other on the slope from top to bottom. The rain was conducted away and probably utilized. This was evidently to protect the hill from sliding. It prevented seepage into the lower strata, which is the main cause of all slides. The evidence also indicated coverings of clay in the ditches, and also on the slope, hard enough to stand for centuries. This clay had been baked by building fires on top of it when it was spread out, and had resisted erosion up to the time of our examination. We resorted to prehistoric methods such as described. The laugh was on us, we had to admit.

The policy employed now at Culebra to let it slide and dredge it out has proved a failure. To go back and adopt methods used ages before revives the recollection of what Sir William Willcocks intimated, even if it is sad to realize.

The Family Weasel.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE SUNDAY TIMES I noticed the inquiry regarding the following:

> Up and down the City Road
> In and out the Eagle,
> That's the way the money goes,
> Pop goes the weasel.

The explanation of this is that the people, especially those from the country, who had gone to London, quickly spent their money by frequenting the Eagle Hotel and when it was gone they popped the weasel, pop being cant for pawning and weasel the family plate, another slang term.

THE RED CROSS RELIEF.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The American Red Cross is receiving many urgent appeals from Europe for hospital supplies. From the American Relief Clearing House, Paris, H. O. Beatty, the Director General, writes:

> I think it will not be amiss to call to your attention the present situation in hospitals, in view of the coming Winter campaign. The hospitals that have benefited so largely through the generosity of the American Red Cross are beginning to find themselves in a condition of real want for the common necessities. The demand for sheets, pillow cases, and shirts is greater than ever. This is due to the fact of hard usage, and we should like to ask you to let us have as much of a supply as possible. The hospital organizations are much better than they were last Winter, when in process of formation. The supplies, however, have been used up, and we make as strong an appeal as possible to your generosity for the common articles that I have mentioned. We have a never-ending list of applications also for absorbent cotton, cotton batting, and gauze. Of these we can never have enough. Chloroform and iodine, of course,

SOCIETY WOMEN JOIN ART SCHOOLS

Mrs. A. C. Wellman Among Those Studying House Decoration and Costume Designing.

MISS McALPIN A STUDENT

War Conditions In Europe Give Opportunities for Developing American Ideas and Ideals.

Young women prominent in society, it became known yesterday, have entered art schools this Autumn for the purpose of studying interior decoration and costume designing.

Some of them are to use their knowledge in the adornment of their own homes or in giving individuality to their own wardrobes, while others intend to embark on professional careers. Their attention has been drawn to this new phase of activity largely through the European war, for they see before them opportunities of developing American tastes and American ideals in both fashions and in the furnishing of their homes.

Miss Allen Gouverneur Wellman, daughter of Mrs. William Alexander, has entered the New York School of Fine and Applied Art, where she is making an intensive study of house decoration in all its forms. She intends to devote three years to preparation for a life work along these lines. Similar instruction is received by Miss Dorothy McAlpin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George L. McAlpin of this city, who is studying with the intention of directing the decoration of her own home.

Among the students who are attending lectures at this school are Mrs. Alexander Dallas Bache Pratt, a granddaughter of the late H. H. Rogers, who, as far as her many home and social duties will permit, is studying the history and development of decoration.

Another enthusiastic student is Miss Gertrude Mali, daughter of Pierre Mali, the Belgian Consul in this city.

Miss Louisa A. Ceballos, the daughter of Mrs. J. M. Ceballos, a member of a prominent Spanish family, has just entered the school, where she will learn artistic dress designing in all its forms, as she intends to become a professional designer of creations for women.

Frank Alvah Parsons, the director of the school, said yesterday that in every direction this Fall women of well-known New York families were showing their interest in practical work along artistic lines to a degree which he had never known. This was, in his opinion, due to the many changes which were developing from the European conflict and the wish to find a substitute for merely social activities.

Other schools where the practical arts of decoration are taught are also receiving students of social prominence from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries as well. This is due to the fact that the opportunities for study in Paris and other European art centres has been cut off by the conditions which now prevail on the Continent.

MISS MARY PYATT A BRIDE.

The marriage of Miss Mary Pyatt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Pyatt of Euclid Hall, Broadway and Eighty-sixth Street, to Harold Frederick Jung took place at 8 o'clock last night at the St. Regis. The Rev. Dr. Henry Lubeck officiated.

The bride, whose father gave her in marriage, wore a gown of white satin trimmed with old point lace that had been in the family for four generations. A court train depended from the shoulders and over this fell a tulle veil, which was caught up with sprays of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Miss Lois Owsley acted as maid of honor. Among the bridesmaids were the Misses Gladys Moon, Jane Christian, Edith Koch, Sara De Long, and Dorothy Allen. All of the attendants wore gowns of yellow and pink tulle. Short veils of yellow tulle were caught at the waist with tiny bouquets of pink roses and they carried arm bouquets of pink and yellow roses.

GERMANS IN SOMBRE PLAY.

Three Flawlessly Act "The She-Devil" in Irving Place Theatre.

"Der Weibsteufel," ("The She-Devil,") a drama of unusual force and novel construction, was acted for the first time in America in the Irving Place Theatre last night. It was written by Karl Schönherr, whose "Glaube und Heimat" was presented in the same playhouse several years ago, and when it was first produced by Max Reinhardt in his Kammerspeil Theatre in Berlin about a year ago, it created a deep impression. It ran for more than 200 performances there and was subsequently performed in the Hofburg Theatre, Vienna. The Irving Place is the third theatre in which this excellent specimen of modern German drama has ever been acted.

Aside from being a fine genre study, it has the novelty of presenting only three characters to commend it. They are a country tailor, his wife, and a customs officer on duty at the point of the frontier where the action of the five acts passes. The tailor is also a smuggler, and in order to carry on his illicit trade with greater safety he instructs his wife to interest the officer by making love to him and so hold his attention from his duty. This she does to such good effect that the guard falls madly in love with her. He returns repeatedly and pleads his case so effectively that the wife in turn falls in love with him and tells her husband's secret. The husband, returning unexpectedly, discovers his wife's perfidy, and draws his knife, but is cowed by the lover.

The wife now urges the jäger to kill her husband, but he refuses to do this, and finally, to extricate himself from the difficult position into which he has been unwittingly drawn, he plans to leave the district. But the woman has now turned against him. She manages to bring the two together and with drink to embroil them. The descending curtain shows the husband killed, the lover a murderer, and the she-devil free to go to the city home her husband had purchased with his illicit wealth.

Here is no happy ending, and scarcely a word in the five acts to brighten the sombre gray of the tragedy. But it is thoughtful, compelling drama, and the audience followed it rapt attention. The performance was without a flaw. Christian Rub acted the husband, Grete Meyer the wife, and Direktor Rudolf Christians was the grenzjäger. Arnold Korff was to have acted the last-named rôle, but illness prevented, and Direktor Christians assumed it on short notice. There was nothing in his finished performance to indicate this, however. The one setting, a room in the house of the tailor, was realistic.

CAPTAIN STAVER MARRIES.

Illinois National Guardsman Weds Mrs. Cornelia H. McLaughlin.

Mrs. McLaughlin, in a reception gown of silver brocade, carrying lavender orchids, was attended by her sister, Mrs. Cohen, as matron of honor, and the little Misses Frances Josey and Elizabeth Kendall, in pink frocks, carrying old-time nosegays as flower girls.

The best man was Charles S. Hart of New York, and the ushers were McCall Lanman and Victor Hilton, and Major Adam F. Casad of the Ordnance Department, Washington, D. C.

After their honeymoon trip in the Far West Mr. and Mrs. Staver will live on the North Shore in the Lake Forest section of Chicago.

HAMMERSTEIN'S DAY SAW BIG VAUDEVILLE

Testifies to Taking $6,250,000 a Year in the Victoria and of $650,000 Offer for Lease.

FORCED INTO THE 'TRUST'

Says B. F. Keith Made Varieties Respectable—Sticks to Hat He Made Famous.

Oscar Hammerstein told yesterday why he, as owner of Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre, did business with the "Vaudeville Trust," and also the attempts made to buy out his theatre, in his testimony in the Federal District Court before Judge Learned Hand in the Sherman law suit for $300,000 triple damages, which Clifford C. Fischer is prosecuting against the United Booking Offices and others. Mr. Hammerstein gave credit to B. F. Keith for making vaudeville houses reputable amusement places.

The impresario of insurgent opera in New York had one of the famous Hammerstein hats in one hand and the big cigar of the old days in the other. He looked much as he did before his long sojourn in the hospital, possibly a little older, but hearty and good for many more turbulent years.

"I have no occupation at present," said Mr. Hammerstein as he took the stand. "I was for twenty-seven years in the theatrical business, and eighteen years ago, and then ten years ago, I was in the vaudeville line. Vaudeville began as variety, and was originally put on only as interstitable resorts, and it is to the late B. F. Keith that credit is due of having made it a respectable family entertainment. Twenty years go there were many continuous performances, and the show, which began at 11 in the morning, was repeated over and over until 11 at night."

Then Mr. Hammerstein told how his son, William, who is now dead, became the manager of the Victoria, which was the property of the Hammerstein Amusement Company, of which the witness was the sole proprietor. At that time all the performers were engaged through agents, and the business amounted to from $100,000 to $125,000 a week, or approximately $6,250,000 a year. He was informed later of the organization of several managers for booking purposes and he was asked to engage his acts through them.

"I had," went on the witness, "a talk with Percy S. Williams about the organization of the United Booking Offices of America was being formed. Mr. Williams told me that the combination could fix salaries, extend vaudeville and stop actors from going to our rivals. We were doing well enough, however, and we decided at that time to leave it alone.

"A few days later my son William told me the managers had united and had divided New York City into zones. Then I threw up my hands. I couldn't help myself any more, and I went in."

The zone allotted to the Victoria, said Mr. Hammerstein, was all the territory west of Fifth Avenue, between Thirty-eighth and Fifty-sixth Streets. Later he obtained another zone for the Manhattan Opera House. Managers under the contract were to run their theatres as they pleased, but must not go outside their zones, and the number of theatres that might be opened was limited. The contract was for twenty years and the penalty for each violation was $25,000.

Several offers were made to Mr. Hammerstein for his Victoria Theatre. In 1910 Martin Beck wanted to take over its lease and zone for $650,000. He got a refusal and renewed the offer several times, promising to give William Hammerstein a 10 per cent. interest in the house. When that was also declined he built the Palace Theatre in Mr. Hammerstein's zone.

Mr. Hammerstein will continue his testimony this morning.

William Morris, who had been on the stand for a day or two, concluded his evidence yesterday. He defined high-class vaudeville as a show that cost from $2,500 to $7,500, with from eight to fifteen acts, and for which the admission charge was from 25 cents to $1.50 or $2. At the opening of Harry Lauder at the Manhattan Opera House, he said, he put on twenty-two acts, a number of the artists volunteering their services. Popular vaudeville, said Mr. Morris, cost $750 a week on the stage, and the admission prices varied from 10 to 50 cents. However, the nature of shows differed with the terms in which they were given, and any manager might give away what he pleased.

The suit will continue this morning.

DANA CENTENARY OBSERVED

Choate Extols the Civic Services of the Teller of Sea Tales.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Richard Henry Dana, Jr., author of "Two Years Before the Mast," was celebrated tonight by a meeting at Memorial Hall, Harvard University. Bishop Lawrence presided and Joseph H. Choate, former Ambassador to Great Britain and a legal associate of Dana, spoke of the latter's great achievements as a lawyer in abolition days. Mr. Dana, who was, at the cost of social position and profit, he sided with abolitionists and conducted, without charge, the cases of fugitive slaves before the Federal courts.

Professor Bliss Perry of Harvard discussed Mr. Dana's contributions to literature, which, apart from his speeches, consisted of two books on the sea. Moorfield Storey reviewed Mr. Dana's achievements as a leader in the fight against slavery.

The centenary celebrated was held under the auspices of the Cambridge Historical Society, which has placed on exhibition in the Widener Memorial Library, to remain there through Friday, a large collection of paintings, books, clothes, letters, medals, and other articles of interest associated closely with Dana's life. The collection includes a silver plate which Wendell Phillips and other abolitionists presented to Dana for his eloquent defense of Anthony Burns, a fugitive slave. There are paintings and a model of the ship Alert in which Dana went to sea in 1834 as a common seaman at the age of 19, in preference to finishing his course at Harvard.

"Belgian" Baritone, Erstwhile Wilfred Douthitt, Gives Recital.

There was a recital at Aeolian Hall yesterday afternoon distinguished above other events of its kind by the fact that a ticket carried not only the right of hearing the singing but, free of additional cost to the audience, the privilege of guessing whether the singer was the man the program announced him to be, or another. The advance notices had gravely set him forth as Louis Graveure, a ("newly discovered") Belgian baritone, yet there are those who say this identity is but a reincarnation of the spirit of a young Englishman who appeared in musical comedy here last season under the name of Wilfred Douthitt. Since there might be a feeling on the part of the sponsors of Louis Graveure that future audiences should not be deprived of the same privilege of guessing that lent an additional zest to yesterday's recital, it would be ungracious to contribute anything here in the way of speculation that might tend to deprive them of it.

Mr. Graveure, to grant him at once the personality he advances, sang a program composed of a group of Schubert's songs, another of old English songs, three songs of Bemberg and von Felitz's song-cycle, "Eiliand," concluding, as is the custom of Belgian baritones, with a group of modern English ballads. In this program he displayed vocal gifts that were considerable when applied to stirring and impassioned matter, but less marked when the mood was purely lyrical. He has a powerful voice that can thrill and impress by its virility, both in its lower range and in its pealing high notes. But it is not distinguished for warmth or color, and at times it is unpleasantly hard.

The singer has the power to sing authoritatively and interestingly when his material comes within the scope of his best powers. When atmosphere is to be conveyed or a quiet mood to be sustained it is felt that his style is less a matter of feeling than a matter of mechanical principals. His German diction was good, his French excellent, his English unimpeachable. On the whole, Mr. Graveure is an interesting artist, whose recital showed a distinct improvement in aims and methods over the single concert appearance of his British ally, Mr. Douthitt, last season. The accompaniments were excellently played by Francis Moore.

The first acting done by Sarah Bernhardt since the loss of one of her legs by amputation last Summer was shown in motion pictures exhibited privately yesterday afternoon at the offices of the Universal Film Company in the Mecca Building. The film was a screen arrangement of Tristan Bernard's drama, "Jeanne Dore," and was taken in France.

It was in this play that Mme. Bernhardt was appearing in her theatre in Paris when the trouble with her leg forced her to leave the stage. Mme. Bernhardt's rôle is that of a middle-aged woman, and while she appears a trifle older in the performance, than on her last visit here, otherwise she looks the same wonderful artiste of other years. Her great visual charm and her marvelous facial expression are still potent.

The film itself was so arranged before it was sent to this country that all evidences of the actress' lameness because of her artificial leg have been deleted. So the film, as it reached America, never shows the actress walking. In every scene in which she appears she is shown either seated or standing, and whenever she starts to walk the scene is immediately changed through the devices of the switchback, the cut-in, or the printed legend. Thus, if Madame rises from a chair and starts to walk across the room to a window, she is seen to rise, the picture is snuffed out for an instant, and when it again covers the screen the actress is shown at her destination.

The effect is no more confusing than in the average picture, which often baffles and irritates all but the incorrigible movie fan. The picture is so focused that the feet of the actress do not appear, or if they do only for short intervals, so there is nothing in the many scenes of the protodrama, which is melodramatic in the extreme, that would appraise the uninformed of her misfortune.

According to the motion picture people Mme. Bernhardt will never be able to act again on the legitimate stage. The directors who took the film so informed the company controlling the American rights. But William F. Connor, Mme. Bernhardt's personal representative, denies this, and insists that she will make her American tour this Winter as planned. "Jeanne Dore" has been announced as one of the new offerings of her répertoire when she arrives. The picture shown yesterday, after further excisions and rearrangement, will be exhibited publicly within the month.

FORDHAM PRACTICES WITH N. Y. U. ELEVEN

Teams Well Matched in Scrimmage on Ohio Field—No Scoring Allowed.

The New York University football team went through another strenuous workout yesterday, when the regular Fordham University eleven lined up in opposition on Ohio Field. The Violet and the Maroon players scrimmaged for over three-quarters of an hour and the teams were well matched, both showing brilliant work at times along offensive lines. Although the scrimmage contest was opened by a kick-off and had all of the formalities of a regular game, it was previously agreed that neither eleven was to cross the other's goal line.

On the attack the Violet proved a difficult proposition for the Fordham team to handle and gave another demonstration such as was seen at the conflict with Union on Saturday and against the Columbia eleven in Tuesday's workout. Coach Reilley made an important change in the 'Varsity lineup before commencing the work with Fordham when he shifted Sokolower, the regular centre, to right tackle, where Captain Somers had been playing. The latter was put in at right guard in place of House, who in turn went in at centre. The shake-up, however, only affected these players on offensive playing, as the line-up was the same as usual when the Fordham team had the ball.

Yule, who made the longest gains for the Maroon team, hit the Violet line and gave the New York offensive some hard work in tackling. On one occasion, he worked his way through left tackle and evaded the secondary defense for a distance of thirty yards. Captain Dunn of the Fordham eleven also put the New York defense to a severe test, when he repeatedly circled the end or shot through the right side of the line for long gains. When the Violet began its attack, Kendrick, te Maroon left guard, made several effective tackles and frequently prevented the University Heights players from advancing their position.

The practice was closely followed by many students of both institutions who filled the Violet grandstands and side lines to witness the first clash between the two Bronx institutions that has taken place in several years. Coach Reilley is depending upon the scrimmages against both Columbia and the Fordham elevens as a test for the 'Varsity which is in need of a more formidable opposition than the scrub players offer in order to develop a strong defensive aggregation. The line:

New York.	Position.	Fordham.
Williams	Left tackle	Mulcahy
Sokolower	Centre	Delehanty
House	Right guard	Benson
Somers	Right tackle	May
Egan	Right end	Conklin
Manly	Quarter back	Dunn
Cann	Left half back	Cantwell
Swift	Right half back	Butler
Bernstein	Full back	Yule

Substitutes. New York—Waldman for McCullough, Fordham—Maguire for Kendrick; Mercaldi for Dunn; Gallia for Cantwell; Donnelly for Butler, Zutler for Yule.

CORNELL DEFENSE BRITTLE.

Second Team Crashes Through 'Varsity Line.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The Cornell second team waded through the 'Varsity in a defensive scrimmage this afternoon and showed up the weak spots of the defense as they have not been revealed at any other time this season.

Jack O'Hearn, who has been working with the scrubs for a couple of days, drilled them in a number of Harvard formations, and when these were tried on the 'Varsity big gains resulted. From the twenty-five-yard line the second team went over for several touchdowns, frequently getting by the main line of defense by sending the ends, foiling them by feints and passes, and were not caught until nabbed by Schiverick, Schlicter, or Mueller on the secondary defense.

The 'Varsity exhibition was far from satisfactory, and although they improved toward the end of the game, the coaches decided that another long defensive work-out would have to be staged early tomorrow afternoon before the men packed up for the trip to Cambridge.

The scrubs' plays were new to the 'Varsity and they fooled the regulars often. Lewis, Benedict, and Shock circled the ends or got by the tackles for long gains on a number of occasions. Though the 'Varsity line broke through vigorously, it could not reach the man with the ball, while neither Shelton nor Eckley were at all sure in getting him, either. This part of the work occupied most of the time today, the 'Varsity not being allowed to take the offense at all. Every regular was in the line-up today, and Dr. Sharpe said that he would start the same team against Harvard that played Bucknell and Williams.

Wet Ball and Field Retard Army.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Loose handling of the ball marred the work of the Army eleven today in its workout. The men found some excuse for the fumbling from the fact that the gridiron was wet and soggy and the ball slippery. One touchdown, from which a goal was registered, was the 'Varsity's only score after a hard forty-minute scrimmage with the scrubs. Excellent work by Walker, Bringham, and Oliphant led up to the tally, the big team starting at midfield in its drive for the score. Walker took it across and Oliphant kicked the goal. More changes were made in the line-up. Coffin and Ford were in togs, but slight injuries kept them idle. Mitchell was in at half back for a while and did the punting. The handling of punts was better today in spite of the wet ball, the 'Varsity backs had trouble in holding on to the leather in the line drive plays. Meacham also rested and Engeldinger, Holmes, and Knight were all tried out at guard. The latter was brought over from the scrub eleven when O'Hare was hurt. Goodman and Timberlake, teh latter who returned to the squad today after a week's absence on account of classroom work, were both used at tackle. Goodman afterward went to centre for McEwan, who retired after the first period. Britton and Neyland were the ends.

Ninety-Yard Run for Navy Player.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 20.—Spectacular football was exhibited by two backs from the new fourth class at the Naval Academy this afternoon. Von Heimburg started the good work by receiving the opening kickoff and running through or around every player of the scrub, scoring a touchdown after a run of ninety yards. Martin, a classmate, made gain after gain throughout the practice, while Von Heimburg did some excellent punting, in which line he shows improvement every day. It is now felt that the time has come to begin winning games, and every effort will be made to defeat the eleven of Virginia Polytechnic Institute on Saturday. Captain Miles returned to his old position at quarter back this afternoon, handling the team well and doing his part in carrying the ball. Westphal, a rugged and fairly fast man, completed the backfield, and, barring accidents, it is the one which will probably start Saturday's game.

Grade at Fordham-Holy Cross Game

At a special meeting at Fordham yesterday plans were completed by representatives of Holy Cross and Fordham for a joint reunion of the old grads of the two big Catholic colleges at Saturday's game. The Rev. Joseph Dinand, S. J., President of Holy Cross, will attend the game as a guest of President Joseph Mulry, S. J., of Fordham. Special sections have been reserved for both the alumni bodies, and they will each march to the field behind a brass band. After the game a reception will be tendered to the Holy Cross team and graduates by their Fordham rivals in the Alumni Hall.

HARVARD TEAM BACKWARD.

Scrubs Drive 'Varsity Almost to Its Own Goal Line.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 20.—Soldiers Field was soft and slippery today, but this did not prevent the Harvard coaches from sending the first team out for a driving scrimmage against the scrubs. The session was not as long as had been planned, but was long enough to convince Percy Haughton and his assistants that this year's team is still a great distance behind last year's team in its midseason stride. Try as they would, the 'Varsity men could not score against the scrubs, who, in turn, and with the Cornell attack, made some big gains through the regulars' line and drove them almost down to their own goal.

The 'Varsity was held at the blackboards longer than usual today and then went out to the baseball cage for signal drill and defensive instruction. The limits of the cage would permit little hard football, and this was reserved until the eleven came out onto the stadium field. In the cage Enwright got back into the first string back field, running through signals with King and Mahan. He is not likely to play against Cornell, although he is getting about in fairly good fashion. Horween is more likely to be in the back field Saturday. His weight of 188 pounds is much needed, both on attack and defense. The continued presence of R. Curtis, last year's substitute tackle in the regular line-up, indicates that he, rather than Parson, the veteran, will start on the rushline against the Ithacans. Parson, however, is ready to play and will get into the game. Bigelow's work at guard was watched closely. He will not displace Cowan on Saturday, but he looks better at guard than he did at tackle.

Wallace's case remains unsettled, but there seems much more chance than before that last year's centre rush eventually will be allowed to play. Harvard figures on using him providing Yale and Princeton make no objection, and neither is expected to protest. Wallace's return to the line-up may mean placing Taylor at guard, but no shift is likely until after Harvard meets Cornell. Harte was back at end today and Willcox directed the play as quarter back. Watson is still under the weather and Wilcox has a big lead over the field of quarter backs, who are working for a regular place on the team.

PRINCETON NEEDS ENDS.

Present Candidates Lack Weight—Team's Biggest Problem.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 20.—John Rush, the Tiger football coach, has not been entirely satisfied with the work of the ends in the last few games, and is consequently devoting a great deal of his time to these positions. The squad is in need of ends with more weight, and this fact probably influenced the Tiger coaches in their decision to shift Moore from behind the line to end. There is a scarcity of end men that possess weight and at the same time can use their feet to advantage. Highley and Wilson, the two best ends on the 'Varsity squad, are both fast and quick in diagnosing plays, but both are lacking in wéight and are not built for heavy work.

Harold Brown possesses an ideal build for an end, and is one of the hardest fighters on the squad, but is a trifle slow on his feet and in diagnosing a play. Moore is the fastest man on the Princeton squad, but is not very shifty in carrying the ball, and the coaches figured that he could make better use of his speed in covering the lengthy kicks of Law and Driggs and in getting down under the long forward passes.

Ham Andrews, who handles the end candidates, had his men out on University Field at 2 o'clock this afternoon, and worked them until it was difficult to follow the ball on account of the darkness.

The coaches took both the 'Varsity and freshmen squads down to the stadium today and had them engage in a fifteen-minute tussel. The offensive of the 'Varsity was in good working order, and the 'Varsity succeeded in crossing the cub goal line four times. Dave Tibbott was back in the scrimmage and was responsible for three of the 'Varsity's touchdowns. Tibbott broke loose for several sensational runs of the same nature that allowed him to score on Rutgers. The fourth touchdown came when "Red" Gennert, the first team centre, blocked a kick, recovered the ball and ran fifty yards for a touchdown. Gennert is an accurate passer, and is also an alert, aggressive player on the defensive.

Scrub Holds Union 'Varsity Safe.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 20.—For sixty minutes today Union's 'Varsity and scrub elevens battled to a scoreless tie. It was one of the most gruelling scrimmages of the year. A muddy field reduced the chances of scoring, and perhaps saved the scrub from a couple of touchdowns, for the 'Varsity backfield combination of Stoller, Rosecrans, and Girling tore up the line repeatedly. Mallen, Tavis, and Deleplant, the backfield for the second team, did some hard charging on their own account. It was difficult to decide which line played the stronger football, and the only edge, if any, was in the backfield. The squad spent over two hours in all on Alexander Field, the first half of the time being devoted to a general drill. Union is anticipating a hard game with Stevens Tech Saturday, since reports state that the Jersey team has the strongest eleven turned out at Hoboken in fifteen years.

New Plays for Lehigh Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 20.—Lehigh's heavy work for the Muhlenberg game was finished today on a soggy field during two hours of hard work. The new plays that Coach Keady has been feeding the men for several days were tried out for the first time today in a dummy scrimmage and, taking into consideration the state of the playing ground, coupled with the fact that the scrubs knew what was being pulled off, the new plays were satisfactorily worked out. There seemed, however, to be a tendency today on the part of the men to get signals mixed, so a night signal drill has been called for tomorrow. There is not an injured man on the team today, even Jim Keady having recovered so nicely that he will start against Muhlenberg. Halstead also getting into he game at full back. Tomlinson, a quarter back, got a chance to prove his ability as a 'Varsity half back today, and Kennedy, a scrub back field man, was shifted to 'Varsity end. Both look promising.

YALE DEFEATS TWO TEAMS ON GRIDIRON

'Varsity Makes Four Touchdowns Against Ineligibles and Scrubs in Scrimmage.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—Yale's 'Varsity eleven today faced two opponents, the ineligibles and the scrubs. They were treated impartially, the regulars scoring two touchdowns against each team in twenty minutes' scrimmaging, of which ten minutes were devoted to each opponent.

When the Yale coaches on Sunday evening outlined plans for the week they decided to handle the eleven cautiously in preparation for the game next Saturday with Washington and Jefferson. Just two days of hard scrimmage work was decided upon, for Tuesday and Wednesday, with protracted signal drill on the remaining afternoons. Today's scrimmaging closed severe practice for the Washington and Jefferson game, although a few minutes' scrimmaging tomorrow is possible. The two Sheldons, Jim and "Chub," were detained by recitations today, Schmidt playing in "Chub's" berth, and Kent taking Jim's place. Otherwise the line-up has remained unchanged this week.

Today's practice, which was entirely in secret, consisted of straight football, the lateral pass being used twice and the forward pass three times. The attack gained ground almost irresistibly, however, the backs rarely failing to puncture the opposition defense for ten yards.

Scovil crossed the line for two touchdowns, and Kirk Smith and Joe Neville once. Neville, as the successor of Harry Legore, has developed rapidly this week. He will do Yale's punting on Saturday, and will be used mostly in end running. Instead of playing full back, however, he will be used as right half back, Scovil being placed in the full back position to do the heavy plunging. Neither the ineligibles nor the scrubs were able to make much impression through the 'Varsity line.

The promotion of Church to right end on Monday will be continued through the week. Frank Butterworth, full back on three winning elevens twenty or more years ago, joined the coaches today, and Johnny Kilpatrick and Jack Field were also present as visiting advisers.

Harry Legore joined the ineligibles in the backfield, and said that he would play regularly on that eleven all the season in the hope of helping to develop the 'Varsity. Billy Easton, the other football star who was disqualified by playing baseball at Quogue last Summer, will assist Billy Marting in developing the freshmen the remainder of the season.

Yale Captain Very Optimistic.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 20.—Captain Aleck Wilson of the Yale eleven tonight in talking to 2,000 undergraduates in the first football mass meeting of the season said that Yale would be victorious this season because nothing could stop a fighting eleven. He added:

"We're just getting together. The team is a unit now and is a fighting team, and nothing can whip us. We have had our reverses. Lehigh had us 3 to 0 and we went back and trimmed them up, with three new men in the line at the time. That was the greatest that's been in Yale in years. Against Springfield we were penalized 150 yards, and you never heard a complaint from us."

Dartmouth Priming for Tigers.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 20.—With the Princeton game only three days off, Coach Cavanaugh has been putting the finishing touches on the Dartmouth squad. Hard scrimmages and signal practice have been held late every afternoon, though darkness has made the use of a whitewashed football necessary. Particular attention has been devoted to the ends and quarter backs. McDonough, Worthington and Holbrook have been working steadily under the direction of "Curley" Boyle, the star quarter back of 1900, and great improvement has been shown. McDonough has recovered entirely from the effects of his recent injury, and Worthington has been showing up well. Holbrook, as a broken-field runner, Emery and Hagar have been playing the end positions on the 'Varsity since the Vermont game. Both are light but fast and hard-working players. Baxter has recovered from his injury and was back at centre today. Signal rehearsal and practice in defenses for Princeton plays constituted most of the Varsity's work today. Coach Cavanaugh has been working the punters and drop kickers constantly, and considerable advancement has been made along this line. Gerrish leads the punters, both in distance and accuracy.

Investigating Minnesota Captain.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 20.—Lorin Solon, Captain of the University of Minnesota football team, charged with playing professional baseball at Havre, Mon., last Summer, today asserted the charge was false. He said:

"In September I took a trip to Glacier Park. On the way back I met a number of the Havre ball players on the train. Later a number of Chicagoans, whom I knew, boarded the train. They evidently jumped at the conclusion that I was a Havre ball player. On reaching Minneapolis they then spread the false report that I had been playing ball."

Members of the Faculty, beyond admitting the case was under investigation, refused to make any comment.

Undismayed by the chance that they might have to play without Saturday without their star and captain, the Gophers this afternoon went into an extra practice. Bernie Bierman was generally believed to be the man Coach Williams would play in the place of Solon, should the Eligibility Board decide against the captain.

Hard Work for Williams Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 20.—Four touchdowns were scored by the Williams 'Varsity football eleven against the freshman this afternoon on Western Field. Coach Daly kept the men working for nearly two hours, with only an occasional substitution of players. Hard and repeated line drives were the telling factors in the regulars' offense. J. A. Wright took Captain Tomkins's position at right tackle. Jones played quarter back and Cochran full back. Several new formations were introduced, emphasizing the thin style of play. A short signal drill in the dusk concluded the 'Varsity workout for the day.

Hard Practice for Stevens.

Stevens Tech had a long scrimmage yesterday in preparation for the game with Union next Saturday. The 'Varsity was strong at running around the ends, and the scrubs were unable to stop them when they used this form of attack, but the line seemed unable either to hold the scrubs on defense or open up holes on the offense. All this season the right side of the line has been a constant source of worry, and as a last resort Coach Rodgers is trying out Musk at end and Grymes at tackle, both of whom are far below the size of the men who have been playing these positions. The team realizes fully that it will have to play better football than it has so far shown to defeat a team of Union's class.

Indians "Preping" for Bucknell.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 20.—In preparation for the largest home game of the season, that against Bucknell here on Saturday, the Carlisle Indian football coaches, Kelley and Welch, put the 'Varsity eleven through a hard scrimmage against the scrub and reserve elevens. The field was rain-soaked, and it gave the aborigines a chance to handle a wet pigskin. Considering the conditions there were few fumbles, and the substitutes acquitted themselves creditably, making several gains both in line plunging and end runs. Forward passes did not work successfully, as it was almost impossible to get a good grip on the ball.

Yale Freshman Eleven Leader.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 20.—Charles A. Comerford of Brookline, Mass., was elected Captain of the Yale freshman football eleven to-night. He prepared for college at Exeter Academy and has played end rush for three seasons.

TEAM LACKS QUARTER BACK.

Columbia Regular and Substitute Disabled—To Try Calder.

Secret practice was ordered for the Columbia football squad yesterday afternoon on South Field for the first time this season. Some new formations and plays got a practical tryout for the first time, and after the usual signal drill the 'Varsity and scrubs went through a short scrimmage practice.

Columbia finds itself on the eve of its first game in a decade without a first or second string quarter back. Howard Miller, the 'Varsity man, has been nursing an injured knee for several days and did not get into the scrimmage with New York University Tuesday. He appeared on the field yesterday for a short time and was replaced by a substitute. Coach Nelson Metcalf will use every endeavor to save him for the opening, but another bruise on his knee would be likely to keep him out.

Dink Stover, who has been alternating with Miller and who was regarded as a close second for the job of running the Blue and White eleven, received an injury Tuesday that will keep him out of practice for at least two weeks. In tackling a New York University runner he was crushed beneath a pile of players and when he was helped to his feet it was found his right shoulder had been dislocated.

In scouting around for another quarter back yesterday in place of Miller and Stover, Coach Metcalf was obliged to make an entire rearrangement of the left side of the line. Calder, basket ball star, who had been placed at left end, was brought back to call the signals. Healey, the acting Captain, was moved over from left tackle to end, and Kennedy was taken from left guard to Healey's position. Van de Water, a husky substitute lineman, took Kennedy's place. The changes appeared to work satisfactorily, but it will be a couple of days before the men can accustom themselves to the new combination. Captain Simonds was still unable to return to practice on account of his recent illness, and it is improbable that he will play Saturday. Wadleton was at left half back yesterday and Donoho went back to the scrubs.

Prominent students engaged in the monster campus campaign to arouse Columbia spirit held a meeting last evening in the Commons. Nearly 400 new subscribers for the athletic association have been obtained this week and the goal of the campaign is 1,000 undergraduate members for the cheering section at football games. A mass meeting will be held Friday to tone up spirit for the St. Lawrence University game on South Field Saturday, the first football game since the 1905 'Varsity beat Cornell at Ithaca 12 to 6.

Lafayette Has an Easy Opponent.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 20.—Lafayette made a fitting climax to her inauguration season by defeating Delaware State College in a football game this afternoon on March Field by a score of 31 to 0. Many of the guests of the inauguration witnessed the game. Lafayette scored at the start of the opening period, and never threatened the goal for the Maroon and White except once, when Smart took a fumbled forward pass from Hill in midair and ran to the 150-yard line. Lafayette's play was featured by successful long forward passes and long runs through the broken field. Despite the fact that the Delaware team was not a powerful one, Lafayette's line showed considerable improvement, which is due in part to the coaching of Harold Bailin, the Princeton coach, who has come to Lafayette to take charge of this department of the game. The line-up:

Delaware State.	Position.	Lafayette.
Fitzpatrick	Left end	Blackburn
Newton	Left guard	Gulick
Crothers	Centre
T. Wilson	Right guard	Overton
D. Wilson	Right tackle	Mummert
Smart	Right end	Hartman
Fildance	Quarter back	Taylor
Taylor	Right half back	Weldon
Hendy	Full back	Lake

Touchdowns—Lake, Taylor, Weldon, Hill, and Blackburn. Goals from touchdown—Luhr. Substitutions—Lafayette, Diamond for Weldon, Smith for Diamond, Martin for Lake, Haynes for Gulick, Ryan for Overton, Williams for Smith, Harris for Mummert, Woodruff for Hartman, Stegman for Luhr, Brown for Williams; Delaware, O'Daniel for Fildance, Flanagan for O'Daniel. Referee—Mr. Boswell of Swarthmore. Umpire—Mr. Zeigler of Pennsylvania. Linesman—Mr. Price of Swarthmore. Time—Four periods of ten minutes each.

What Hamilton Is Doing.

CLINTON, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Coach "Pete" Reynolds, the former Syracuse star, is drilling Hamilton's eleven for the Hobart game at Clinton Saturday. Hobart is not rated as a hard opponent for Hamilton, and the locals expect to score as clean a victory as the 26 to 0 score on Rensselaer Poly last week. Hobart is lighter than in many seasons, and aside from a 6 to 0 win from St. Lawrence has shown little strength so far. For Hamilton Captain Pope and Right Half Back Schwartz are playing stellar games, Pope's best work being done in line plunging. Schwartz's ability to circle the ends has won him a reputation. Reynolds has drilled the team into rapid attack, and is making a successful season with a light squad to work with.

Cycle Champion Killed in War.

The name of Leon Hourlier, the French bicycle champion, has been added to the list of prominent athletes killed in the European war. The French cyclist was killed in an aeroplane battle in the Champagne district last Sunday, says the report. Hourlier was popular with the European cycle enthusiasts and was the possessor of an enviable reputation as a rider. He was not unknown in this country, and in 1913 it was thought that he would be seen in competition with Frank Kramer, the American champion, in a race for the world's title. His friends requested him to remain in France for the title races, however, and finally induced him to abandon his proposed trip to this country. Hourlier, who, like other bicycle riders, joined the aeroplane corps when the war began, has distinguished himself several times since his enlistment for gallantry and daring. He was among the first to answer the call to arms.

New Way to Keep in Limelight.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The members of the Chicago team of the Federal League will be presented with medals by the league, declaring them champions of the world for 1915, according to a letter received today by Joe Tinker, Manager of the team, from James A. Gilmore, President of the league.

"Inasmuch as the National Commission failed to accept our challenge for a series to decide the championship, your team is the unquestioned champion of the world," says the letter.

College Wants Physical Director.

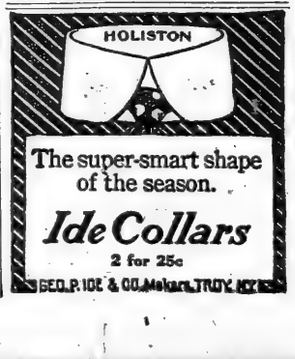
Several baseball men, college graduates, are being considered for the position of Physical Director of the University of the South. Cy Williams of the Cubs is spoken of for the place. The term of service is for the Winter season so that it does not interfere with baseball playing. Bishop Knight, head of the university, has asked Captain Huston of the Yankees to select a man for the position.

San Francisco Club Champion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—By winning today's game from Oakland, 9 to 4, the San Francisco Club won the championship of the Pacific Coast League. Should San Francisco lose all the remaining games of the season, which closes this week, they still would continue at the head of the percentage column.

No Yankees Playing Here.

At the Yankees' offices yesterday it was said that there was only one member of the baseball team in this city and that Yankee players were not participating in any games in New York or its vicinity.



JOHNSON TO STOP ALL BARNSTORMING

American League Leader Says Players Make Hippodrome of the Sport.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—The post-season tour of picked teams of the American and National Leagues, which was to open today at Oshkosh, Wis., will be the last in which American League players will be allowed to take part.

President B. B. Johnson of the American League, in making this announcement today, said that the players gathered together to represent the American organization were a "joke team" and that the practice of continuing baseball half through the Winter is an injury to the sport and to the players themselves.

"We will stop this masquerading," President Johnson said, "as there is too much baseball now in the regular season. I am strongly opposed to it. The only way to increase the public's interest in baseball is to reduce the quantity and improve the quality, instead of increasing the quantity and reducing the quality.

"Nothing like a representative team has been picked from either of the major leagues. The one gathered to represent the American League is a joke."

President Johnson said that the present tour was being made without the consent of the National Baseball Commission, only the consent of the club owners whose players were selected having been obtained.

These club owners, although opposed to their players making post-season tours, preferred to give a reluctant consent rather than make an individual stand against it, Mr. Johnson said. Consequently the National Commission will draft legislation to forestall plans for future post-season tours.

McGRAW AND THE CUBS.

Once Before Wished to Buy Interest—Chicago Sale Denied.

It was denied yesterday by Charles P. Taft, owner of the Chicago National League Club, that he had sold his interest in the Cubs. But this rumor was no sooner silenced than it was supplanted by another which still connected the name of John J. McGraw with the Chicago club. This was to the effect that McGraw next season would join the Cubs in some official capacity, not specifically indicated, but possibly as a successor in the club's affairs to the position which was one time held by Charles Webb Murphy, who is even now presumed by many to be a directing force. At the same time it was implied that McGraw would receive the privilege to buy a minor interest in the club. As is the case with most baseball rumors nothing definite could be learned either in affirmation or denial and even though there was the one or the other, judging from the past, it would probably not be dependable.

Some credence is lent to the rumor by the fact that it is known that John J. McGraw as a partner with Captain T. L. Huston, now one of the owners of the Yankees, tried to purchase the Chicago club about fifteen months ago. The deal failed then, only because McGraw found it impossible to sever his connection with the Giants. This would indicate that McGraw has for some time been thinking of leaving the New York club. His manner during the past season, when he was seldom on the playing field, may be another straw to point the way of the wind. Also it is known that the Giant's manager said recently that he was tired, mentally, of baseball and he did not attend any of the games of the World's Series. This may presuppose that he is at least tired of the active managerial duty.

Practically nothing is known as to McGraw's contract with the Giants, but it is assumed that if he was thinking of withdrawing fifteen months ago that it must then have been drawing to a close, else he would hardly have thought of purchasing an interest in the Chicago club. Perhaps with its close of this season his contract expired, or that it is due to expire before another playing season begins, thus giving him the opportunity of making a connection with the Chicago club. In the denial by Charles P. Taft, the name of McGraw is not mentioned.

While as far as official statement goes, Charles Webb Murphy is out of the Chicago club, the fans in the Windy City and elsewhere, for that matter, have been prone to consider that he still has a power behind the throne. In view of Murphy's unpopularity in Chicago following the dropping of Johnny Evers as manager of the Cubs in 1913, it may have been considered advisable to engage McGraw or give him a part interest in the club in a capacity not so much managerial as that of a practical director.

Another Yankee Pitcher Signs.

The Yankees yesterday received the signed contract of Bert Shocker, a right hand pitcher, who was drafted by the New York Club from Ottawa of the Canadian League. He has made a great record during the past season in the Dominion League. His most recent feat was to strike out nineteen men in a game against the All-Leaguers at Milford, Penn., on Sept. 29. Pitching for the Redford team he allowed only four hits, and the contest was won by a score of 4 to 1, due to his excellent work. During the past season Shocker pitched a total of 303 innings. His opponents scored 95 runs and made 186 hits. He gave 45 bases on balls and struck out 188 men. He won nineteen games and lost ten. Shocker also proved himself a success as an outfielder, taking part in 23 games. He had a fielding average of .938, and his batting average in the 54 games in which he participated as a pitcher was .277. Shocker is 24 years old. During 1913 he was with the Windsor Club and with Fort Wayne and Ottawa during the season of 1914.

New Players for White Sox.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—Secretary Harry Grabiner of the Chicago American League team announced today that the White Sox had obtained Outfielder Chappell and Pitcher Shackelford from the Milwaukee team of the American Association. He denied, however, that "Nemo" Liebold, outfielder, would be sent to Milwaukee as part of the deal. It is rumored that Chappell is to be turned over to Cleveland in part payment for Joe Jackson. Roth, and Klepfer, already having been turned over in connection with the trade.

COLUMBIA ROWS WELL

Crew Developing Rapidly for Race with Yale on Nov. 12.

Columbia crews took advantage of the smoothest water of the Fall rowing season yesterday for a long and stiff row. Coach Jim Rice had the 'Varsity pull more than six miles and was very optimistic over its showing. The Blue and White oarsmen have developed greatly the past week despite the many changes in the boating and will enter the dual regatta with Yale at New Haven on Nov. 12 with a well-balanced boat of experienced men.

The Yale rowing authorities have asked the Columbia management for permission to enter two shells in the race three weeks from today. The Columbia answer will probably be in the negative. Coach Rice would ordinarily enter his junior boat but for the fact that several of the oarsmen have had to leave the squad on account of sickness, ineligibility, and parental objections, and that the present combination could not be developed in time for the race. The Blue and White crew will go to New Haven two days before the race and will go over the course in New Haven harbor on Thursday, Nov. 11. An invitation has been received from the Yale authorities inviting the Columbia men to stay over for the football game with Princeton on the day after the race.

HIPPODROME DOG SHOWS.

Competitions Will Be Held on Three Afternoons Next Week.

Dog show competitions may be made a permanent feature at the Hippodrome. The first events will be held on the afternoons of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week. The size of the entry will determine the future of the events which promise to take the place of the dog show teas which were so popular last Winter.

Charles Dillingham offers the prizes for the best dogs of any breed exhibited. These awards are expected to stimulate the interest of owners, breeders and fanciers of high-class dogs. All dogs exhibited in the Hippodrome will get an opportunity to be seen by the audience in the Fifth Avenue scene of "Hip Hip Hooray."

Two silver trophies will be awarded on each of the three days, one to the best dog of any breed and one to the reserve winner. No formal entry is required.

Columbia Tennis Tourney.

The first round of the annual Fall tennis tournament at Columbia University was finished yesterday afternoon. Seventeen players will pass into the second round of play, and the unfinished matches will be called off because of the regulation made last week. The doubles will begin today and must be finished by Saturday. The summaries:

H. P. Guller defeated A. H. Frey, 6—1, 6—1; O. Hammerstein defeated A. Mayer, 0—6, 6—2, 7—5; W. F. Cornell defeated J. F. Gardiner, 6—1, 6—0; G. James defeated G. R. Kenyon, 4—6, 8—0, 3—5, 6—0; F. Conger defeated N. Alexander, 6—0, 6—3; E. T. Dana defeated L. L. Feiss, 6—4, 6—0; W. M. Chester defeated G. E. Jones, 4—6, 6—8, 8—4; H. W. Greene defeated S. M. Kempner, 6—3, 6—3; J. F. Condon defeated W. J. Manion, by default; J. C. Hegeman defeated H. Binski, 6—1, 6—0; A. F. Von Bermuth defeated W. F. Collins, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4; W. R. Chapman defeated R. E. Wilson, 6—3, 6—2; W. D. Cunningham defeated C. Funke, 6—2, 6—1; R. Shaw defeated P. Shaw, by default; R. Haines defeated L. Knox, 6—2, 6—2; T. A. Clute defeated E. T. Appleby, 6—3, 6—0; F. S. Appleby defeated D. J. Richer, 6—2, 7—5.

Jamaica Bay Y. C. Election.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Jamaica Bay Yacht Club was held at their club house, Holland Station, Rockaway Beach, last Sunday. The popularity of Commodore Effingham Wilson was demonstrated by the large turnout of members and his re-election without contest. The reports of the Board of Directors and various committees proved the club to be in better condition than ever before, and by a unanimous vote the dues were reduced to $20 per annum, payable quarterly, and the old initiation fee of $25 was restored.

The fact that the club had added trap shooting to its activities caused much enthusiasm, as there are many devotees of that sport in the club. The election resulted as follows: Commodore, Effingham Wilson; Vice Commodore, John J. Hanson; Rear Commodore, William T. Wheeler; Fleet Captain, Stanley C. Fowler; Recording Secretary, Harold E. Wilson; Treasurer, Charles B. Paul, Jr.; Financial Secretary, Charles Donaldson; House Committee, Edward E. Blohm; Membership Committee, C. H. Dykeman; Entertainment Committee, William Wood; Regatta Committee, George H. Fletcher, Jr.; Directors, George Emener, John A. Still, A. O. Hoddick, Thomas A. Brennan.

Basket Ball Dropped in Newark.

Basket ball as a Winter sport received a severe setback when the executives of the Newark High Schools' Athletic Association announced at the conclusion of their recent meeting that they had decided to drop the sport from the calendar and, as a result, there would be no basket ball league this season. The game has been played on the courts of the Newark high schools for the last fifteen years. Early in the year Barringer High School surprised scholastic supporters in Newark by the announcement that it would drop the indoor game from its schedule of athletics. Central and East Side High Schools announced their decision at the meeting. The general attitude taken by the Principals was that basket ball caters to a few and that the rest of the student body derives small benefit from the gymnasium.

First "Kill" in Long Island Hunt.

The first kill of the season was made yesterday by the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. Forty riders participated in the hunt, twenty of them being women. The chase covered a course of forty miles and lasted for four hours. The first fox was jumped on the estate of Harry Payne Whitney, but the fox went to cover and was lost. Another fox was jumped on the same estate and led the pack and hunters a pace so rapid that the party became separated in the chase. Only five of the party were in at the kill. M. Simon, a French army officer, here on official business, secured the brush. J. F. Cooley, Master of the Hounds, took the head. Huntsman Allen and the two whips were also in at the kill. Among those who participated in the hunt were Harry Payne Whitney, Mrs. Julien A. Ripley, Harry T. Peters, Mrs. A. M. Tinkin, Harry F. Medew, Mrs. Ambrose Clark, Miss Marion Hollins, F. S. von Stade, and Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden.

Stevens Freshmen Win Flag Rush.

The freshman class at Stevens Tech took just fifteen seconds yesterday to wrest from the top of the flag pole the flag that the class of 1918 had hoped to keep flaunting for sixteen minutes. The lower class formed a flying wedge, and while the weight of nearly a hundred of their men behind it, swept the sophomores away from one side of the pole and boosted one of their lighter members, Zobel, to the top, whence he wrested the pennant which had been nailed there but a few minutes before. Although this officially terminated the rush, it was only the beginning of a struggle for the possession of the flag, and the battle continued for nearly three-quarters of an hour.

UNIVERSITY CLUB GOLF—BILLIARDS

COLLEGE GRADS PLAY GOLF ON TWO LINKS

Ellis Knowles of Yale Wins Chief Honors at Piping Rock and Nassau.

Ellis Knowles of Yale, former intercollegiate golf champion, won the chief honors of the day in the 36-hole medal play competition of the University Club of New York over the Nassau and Piping Rock links yesterday, with rounds of 83 and 78 for a total of 161. His first round was played at Piping Rock and the second at Nassau.

Probably for the first time near this this city, two courses were used for one tournament. Half of the field played at Nassau in the morning, and the other half at Piping Rock, while the second rounds were played in the opposite manner, the players being transported from one links to the other in automobiles.

It was the first time that Knowles has competed in the events of the University Club. His chief difficulty came during the early round at Piping Rock, for he got away to a bad start and his ill luck lasted through several holes. Thus he needed 46 for the outward journey. He braced on the last nine, however, and came in in 37. Outside of a seven on the fifth hole at Nassau, little fault could be found with his round there, except that his putting and the darkness cost him two sixes at the finish.

There was a triple tie for the best eighteen hole gross, no player being permitted to take two prizes. George T. Brokaw, Percy R. Pyne, 2d, and S. Clifton Mabon were those involved, each having 83. This will be decided later. Knowles was the leader for the first net award, with 161, 6—155, but the trophy went to H. L. Lord for his 207, 45—162. W. Willis and Dr. J. A. Miller tied for second and third net, with 177, 16—161 and 191, 30—161, respectively. E. Q. Trowbridge had the best net in the afternoon at Nassau, a 74, while A. I. Smith, Jr., fared similarly at Piping Rock with 80.

A special train carried the golfers from New York to Glen Cove and Locust Valley and return. The experiment of using two links probably will be attempted again next Spring, for it was a success. An entry of 111 was obtained. The scores:

Ellis Knowles, Yale, 161, 6—155; H. S. Lond, Stevens, 207, 45—162; W. Wills, Cornell, 177, 16—161; J. A. Miller, Yale, 191, 30—161; E. Q. Trowbridge, Yale, 191, 28—163; J. J. NEWS FOR THE ATHLETES.

The investigation of the amateur status of Abel Kiviat and Hjalmar Lindberg will be continued by the Registration Committee of the Amateur Athletic Union at the headquarters of the American Express Company Employes Association, 67 Madison Avenue, and will not be postponed until next week as requested by John T. Dooling, counsel for the accused athletes. Dooling applied yesterday to President Rubien of the Metropolitan Association to have the case heard at another week, but Rubien did not even bring the request before the Registration Committee. Roscoe C. Campbell, the Troy handicapper, who will be the chief witness for the Amateur Athletic Union, can come to-night, but it would be impossible for him to come down next week.

Newark's contribution to the James E. Sullivan memorial fund in the form of a big athletic meeting will take place at the Federal League baseball park at Harrison, N. J., on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 7, instead of Election Day, as first announced. This was decided upon yesterday at a conference between Patrick T. Powers, owner of the Federal League baseball park at Harrison, N. J., chairman of the Newark Committee, and F. W. Rubien, Secretary-Treasurer of the Amateur Athletic Union. The committee in charge of the sports will communicate once to arrange what is expected to be the largest athletic meeting ever held in New Jersey. Eight handicap events, one novice, and three special events, as follows, will make up the programme: Handicaps—Sprints, 300 yards, 600 yards, 1,000 yards, mile run, mile walk, throwing the javelin, 800-yard novice run; four-mile special race, standing jump contests, and an all-round weight throwing competition. Invitations have been sent to Ted Meredith, Tom Halpin, Joe Higgins, Willie Gordon, Roy Morse, Hannes Kolehmainen, Eddie Renz, George Bender, Jim Lincoln, Platt Adams, Eddie Emen, Pat McDonald, Pat Ryan, Matt McGrath, and John Cahill to compete.

Frank Zuna, the long distance runner of the Irish-American A. C., who recently triumphed in the Brockton marathon, has been added to the athletic staff of the Fourteenth Regiment. John F. O'Hare, of Brooklyn, Lawson Robertson, the winged foot trainer, is coach of the Fourteenth Regiment.

The Monument Club has cancelled the 10-mile professional race it had scheduled for Nov. 7, and has substituted a 25-mile team bicycle race, for which two sets of watches will go to the first, second, and third teams. The race will be conducted under the same rules which govern the six-day race in the Garden. In addition to this race there will be a championship gaelic football match between two teams from the big four, probably Kerry and Kilkenny.

The entry for the amateur boxing tournament at the New York A. C., in which the preliminaries will be decided tonight and the finals on Saturday, is so large that two rings will have to be used to weed out the list. One hundred and ten boys are entered in the four classes.

Paul Pilgrim has recruited a number of new harriers for his New York A. C. cross country squad and will give them a trial Sunday morning at Van Cortlandt Park. Already the Mercury Foot Organization has excellent runners in Strobino, Ackerman, Henohan, Bailey, and a number of other youngsters and veterans.

Boys' High Outclassed in Soccer.

Soccer elevens representing Boys' High School and Erasmus High School played in a championship game of the High School Soccer League at Prospect Park yesterday afternoon. Erasmus, playing a very fast game, snowed under the opposing eleven, 5 goals to 0. Two were shot in the first half and three in the second. Of the points scored, however, two were put into the net by members of the B. H. S. team.

English Breeding Horses Arrive.

Ten English horses arrived yesterday at Philip Hexamer's stable, 211 Hudson Street, Hoboken, valued at $100,000, which have been imported for breeding purposes, and after completing the ten days' quarantine they will be shipped to Reno, Nev. The pride of the bunch is Honeywood, a fine stallion, which is valued at $30,000. The next is King George, said to be worth $20,000, and the others are all fine animals of pure English racing stock.

HOPPE LEADS YAMADA.

Champion Billiardist at 14.1 Wins First Block of Match.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—Willie Hoppe, the champion, led Koji Yamada, the challenger, 500 points to 396, at the end of the first of three blocks in a match for the 14.1 balk line billiard title tonight. Neither player was in his best form.

Hoppe had a high run of 123 in the sixth inning, which gave him an early advantage. His opponent narrowed the margin in the twentieth, when he ran the balls for a high mark of 118, but was unable to maintain this high play.

The second and third blocks of the match will be played tomorrow and Friday nights, respectively.

SPORTS NEWS IN BRIEF.

Pat Moran thinks a lot of his big chief, Alexander. "There never was a better loser than Alexander," says Moran. "Most pitchers sulk when they lose, and if it happens to be the fault of their team mates they howl like a wounded sea lion. But Alexander is different. After a defeat he's just as good-natured as after a victory. If the boys bobble away a game behind him Alex never says a word. If the boys come up and start to tell him how sorry they are he just laughs and tells them to forget it and that such things are part of the game."

"You may talk about your greatest pitchers," said Gavvy Cravath in a discussion of slabmen, "but I will tell you of one who never was classed as a great pitcher, but he was the greatest and the worst that ever pitched to me. He was Charley Smith, a big, lanky chap with the Cubs two years ago. I could hit most any of them once in a while, but off that big fellow I could hardly average two foul tips a game."

California is grooming another high jumper to take the place of George Horine and Eddie Beeson. He is Ira Jacobs, an 18-year-old schoolboy, who has cleared more than six feet consistently.

George Lowe, the professional golfer of the Baltusrol links, was approached by the wife of a man who was about to purchase about fifteen golf clubs from Lowe. "Mr. Lowe," she said, "I don't mind if my husband gives all his spare time to golf. I have no objection if he spends a certain portion of the family funds in the purchase of golf balls, but please, Mr. Lowe, don't sell him any more golf clubs. If you do you are only inviting trouble for yourself. He has 187 clubs cluttering up this house now, and if he buys any more I won't have any place to put my hats."

Mike Kehoe of Cincinnati, the Boston Braves' scout, says that promising ball players are harder to find this year than ever before. Most of the players who eventually prove best after getting to the big league clubs come from the little minor league teams, and there are a lot of minor league—twenty-three or twenty-four of them—that are out of business this year. This makes the supply of material for the inspection of the scouts limited, and there are really very few players in sight worth considering for the big league.

Pauline Siebenthal, a student in the junior class of Indiana University, broke the world's record for woman's pole vaulting recently. At a meet at Bloomington she broke the record for girls pole vaulting 6 feet 1 inch, excelling the best record by 5 inches. When Miss Siebenthal first vaulted for height she cleared the bar at 5 feet 6 inches.

Coach "Speedy" Rush, the new tutor of the Princeton football eleven this year, is nothing if not original. One of the many new methods introduced in Princeton football training by Rush has been discovered by a visitor to the new field house at the Palmer Memorial Stadium. In the dressing room of the football players hangs a big placard, headed "Things to remember," it includes bits of advice on how to tackle and how to carry the ball. At the top of this sign are two significant lines; "Harvard, 20; Princeton, 0. Yale, 19; Princeton, 14."

Eight new three-year-old trotters in the 2:10 class this season indicates the trend of the times in harness racing. Horsemen are now predicting that the time is close at hand when two-year-olds and three-year-olds will dominate the programs, as they do on the running tracks. The first three-year-old entered the 2:10 list in 1898. The newcomers thus far this year are: Deruche, (2:07¾,) by John A. McKeron (2:05¼;) Boudelia, (2:07¾,) by Walnut Hall, (2:08¼;) Rusticoat, (2:08¾,) by Axworthy, (2:15¼;) Mary Putney, (2:08¾,) by William Fraser, (2:07¾;) Kinsella Todd, (2:08¾,) by Jim Logan, (2:08¾;) Bacolli, (2:09¾,) by Bertini, (2:22¾;) Colorada Range, (2:09¾,) by Colorado E., (2:04¾,) and Henry Todd, (2:10,) by Henry Seltzer, (2:10¾.)

Norman Tabor, who ran a mile in 4:12 3-5, breaking the professional and amateur records, gives this advice upon training: "If you would make a success of anything, concentration and stick-to-itiveness are necessary. I doubt if I could have gained my ambition of breaking the world's record for the mile had I not devoted much time to training. To be a mile runner one must realize that he cannot go out on a track and run the distance without some preparation.

Poor old Hans Wagner may be entering his forty-second year, but for faithfulness and a consideration for his employers and the public he shows up many players years his junior. Hans is the club's full strength and representation should be shown all the time. Honus never misses an exhibition game away from home. He cares not whether he is playing in a handsome park before 300 fans or more, whether he is snaring them up or slamming 'em out in the Polo Grounds before multitudes. He gives them all his best though he is reaching 42.

Fred Clarke's mother still chides him about the evils of baseball, and prefers to link it with gambling and horse racing. As a boy Fred found the job of painting a monotony, particularly when the people of Carroll, Iowa, wanted to pay him $40 a month to play ball. At the age of 19 he ran away from home and took the job. With $40 a month for playing Saturdays and Sundays, and $3 a day for painting on other days, the youngster amassed a little bank roll by the close of the season. Fred protested that baseball was a legitimate profession, with great earning powers. Even now "Ma" Clarke shakes her head and will not admit that baseball is a good thing for the boys.

Playing managers are disappearing from major league baseball. In the National League now there are only three, while the American League has only two. In the American League Carrigan of the Red Sox and Donovan of the Yankees play only occasionally. Huggins of the Cardinals, Herzog of the Reds, and Bresnahan of the Cubs are the three playing managers in the National League.

"I always considered Clark Griffith among the best pitchers of the last twenty years," says Honus Wagner. "Grif wasn't what they call a 'smoke king,' but he had an assortment of good curves and a wise old head. I don't wonder that they called him 'The Fox.' There never was a headier man in the box."

Harvard will invite the Intercollegiate Association to hold its annual championship track and field meeting in the stadium next Spring. Undergraduate Manager Clement has said that the Crimson team would go to Ithaca for a dual meet with Cornell on May 6, and meet Yale a week later.

Al Shrubb, coach of the Harvard cross-country team, expects the Crimson to have one of her strongest squads this year. No less than seventy-five candidates are reporting daily for the harriers. There are no stars in the bunch. Shrubb will follow the Moakley plan of trying to develop a team of consistent performers, instead of relying upon individual performers.

$1,000 for Sullivan Fund.

The committee in charge of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Fund games at Reservoir Park, Jersey City, N. J., on Sunday had not made a financial report to Secretary-Treasurer Rubien up to yesterday, but Tom Cassidy, secretary to the committee, announced that he expected $1,000 would be realized from the meet. This includes a number of donations from friends of the late athletic chieftain. Eugene F. Kinkead, Sheriff of Hudson County, and a member of the Games Committee, contributed $100 to the fund, while $20 was received from "an old has-been," who requested that his name should not be mentioned.

Union Settlement A. C. Activities.

The Union Settlement A. C. has completed plans for a busy Winter season. The annual handicap doubles handball tournament is now under way with twenty-one teams in competition. The monthly indoor members' games will start Saturday evening, Nov. 13. Five cups have been donated for the members scoring the most points during the season. The Games Committee, of which J. V. Hoole is Chairman, is arranging a number of interesting athletic features for the Winter.

SLOSSON DROPS BACK IN BILLIARD MATCH

De Oro Wins Third Block and Now Leads at Three Cushions, 150 to 137.

Alfred De Oro retained his lead in the third night's play of the three-cushion billiard match against the veteran George Slosson at Doyle's Academy last night, taking the third block by a score of 50 to 41. The total scores for the three nights' play are: De Oro, 150; Slosson, 137. The match is for 250 points.

The Cuban's vigorous stroke, which has carried him to the three-cushion championship so often before, was much in evidence last night, and although the play was close most of the way and once or twice Slosson was in front, De Oro's splendid judgment of angles and his accurate execution gave him the advantage. Slosson played very carefully and had four safety plays, while De Oro did not once have to resort to safety play.

The Cuban reached the end of his string of 50 in seventy-four innings, and his best runs were 5 and two 4s. It was the run of 5 in the sixty-seventh inning that decided last night's play and gave him an advantage which "the Student" could not overcome. Slosson made several carefully studied shots when he resorted to the use of four and five cushions before registering his carroms. Two of his bank shots were unusually spectacular.

Three-cushion play seemed like second nature to the Cuban, and he was quick to chose his plays and carry them out. In the twenty-seventh inning Slosson, with a run of 8, went to the front by a score of 18 to 15.

For several innings after that the advantage see-sawed from one player to the other until the fifty-third inning, when De Oro, after executing a difficult play around the table, went into the lead by a score of 30 to 28, and from that time until the end he held a slight advantage. De Oro had clusters of threes in the fifty-sixth, sixty-first, and sixty-sixth innings, and a run of 5 in the sixty-seventh.

The match was witnessed by a large gallery, which included many of the well-known figures in various branches of sports. The score by innings follows:

Alfred De Oro—(100)—0 1 0 1 1 0 0 0 2 1 1 0 0 0 1 1 0 2 2 1 0 0 1 1 0 2 2 1 3 0 0 1 1 0 2 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 1 2 1 2 1 0 8 0 — 50. Total—50.

Consistent playing on the part of Claude R. Lewis gave him a victory over Charles Worcester in their game in the amateur handicap 18.2 balkline billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Academy in Brooklyn last night, the score being 185 to 60. The men were playing on equal terms, each having to score 185 points to win, and Lewis completed his string in thirty innings. This gave him an average of 6 5-30, and he had high runs of 18 points twice, and one of 16. Worcester's best run was 14, and he made an average of 2 points. This evening Dr. H. D. Jennings will attempt to score 215 points before Lewis can tally 185.

A handicap of 1 point accounted for E. Cohn's defeat by B. Cohn last night in the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom tournament at the Morningside Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue. The former was playing for 200 points, while E. Cohn needed 14 to win, and the latter won by the score of 14 to 14. He completed his string in fifty innings, making a high run of 2. E. Cohn's high run was 3.

E. Sulzer failed in his endeavor to concede a handicap of 6 points to Dr. H. M. Pope last night in the amateur handicap three-cushion carrom tournament at the Audubon Academy, and lost by the score of 28 to 25. Sulzer had agreed to score 34 points before Pope could tally 28, and the latter ran out his string in eighty-three innings. Pope had three runs of 3 points as his high mark.

Australian Athletes Killed in Battle.

Most of Australia's crack swimmers have enlisted in Britain's army. Beaurepaire, Healey, Longworth, Boardman, Adrian, and Fox are all soldiers. Some of these men were competitors in the Olympic games at Stockholm, and were pitted against Kahanamoku in Sydney less than eight months ago. McEvilley, not long ago a winner of the Diamond Sculls at Henley, has also enlisted.

In Rugby football ranks the loss in battle of international and Australian players has been heavy. D. R. Bedell-Sivright, one of the greatest of forwards, has been killed in action. "Darkie" Bedell-Sivright captained a British team that toured Australia and New Zealand in 1904. He played for the Scottish international team against England, Ireland, Wales, New Zealand, and South Africa, and for nine seasons he played in nine consecutive years. Before that he had played for both Cambridge and Edinburgh Universities.

Blair I. Swannell, Major in the Australian force which first reached the Gallipoli peninsula, and Harold George, another member of the same unit, were killed in battle recently. Swannell was a player of wonderful dash and skill, and had been a member of Sivright's team. George was well known among Rugby players in California. A few days later Fred Thompson, another international, was also killed on the Gallipoli. Dr. Brian A. C. Pockley of Sydney, the first Australian killed on the expedition against the Germans in German New Guinea, was a Rugby player. Other players killed in action were: A. Downing of the famous "All Blacks" of New Zealand, T. M. Grace, a New Zealand forward of the Maori; B. Rodgers, who was a member of Bedell-Sivright's team that visited Australia in 1904; Ronald Poulton of England, one of the best three-quarters; Basil Maclear, an Irish player, and Kenneth McLeod of Scotland, who almost gave his team victory over the "All Blacks" in 1906.

Foster Delights "Home Folks."

When the news of the victory of the Red Sox in the second game of the world's series was telegraphed to Bonanza and Bokoshe, Okla., both towns declared a holiday. George Foster, Boston's pitcher, had fulfilled the prediction of the "home town boys" that he would be a great pitcher some day. Even when Foster's admirers learned that he was going to do the twirling, business in both places ended abruptly so that the baseball enthusiasts could discuss the probable outcome of the contest. No one in either town could see how the Red Sox had a chance of losing with Foster in the box. At Bonanza the returns of the game were received at the company store. A drug store proprietor "bulletined" the game for the crowd at Bokoshe. When news of the Boston victory was flashed over the wires a telegram of congratulation bearing the names of more than a hundred enthusiastic admirers was sent to Foster.

Foster and Tom Wilson, now playing for Galveston in the Texas State League broke into the game together as a reversible battery. Foster pitching one day and Wilson catching, and vice versa. In 1911 they joined an independent team at Stigler, Okla., exchanging positions every day. The Muskogee (Okla.,) team of the Western Association stopped off at Stigler for an exhibition game, and Manager Lon Ury decided to hire the "reversible" battery. The association failed before the schedule had been completed, and Foster and Wilson, with Pitcher Jim Sewell, were sold to the St. Louis Browns. They remained with St. Louis until the season closed. In 1912 Foster and Wilson went to Houston of the Texas League and helped that team win the league pennant.

Foster was then sold to Boston for $5,000.

Scarlata Leads in C. C. N. Y. Run.

J. Scarlata, Captain of the College of the City of New York cross-country team, led the team over the 177th Street course yesterday in the tryouts for the run with Lafayette at Easton on Saturday. Scarlata was followed closely by Cohen. The remainder of the team finished in good condition. J. Landis, who was third, is ineligible, due to academic standing. The prospects for victory over the Easton boys is excellent, as the first three men this year are much faster than the men last year who defeated Lafayette. The times of the first eight men are as follows: J. Scarlata, 33:15; S. Cohen, 33:45; E. Landis, 34:45; A. Schroeder, 35:15; I. Natapoof, 35:50; R. Guinness, 38:05; A. Soos, 40:05.

Drug Prices Shoot Upward.

Weekly Drug Markets will say today that quinine, opium and glycerin led in the sensational price advance recorded in the drug market in the last week. Increasing shortage of supplies, together with an active speculative demand, are forcing prices still further upward. There was activity also in quicksilver, salicin and other products, and sharp gains are noted. It is generally conceded by leading drug and chemical interests that so long as the war demand continues there is no hope for a return to anywhere near normal prices.

East India Wools Can Be Had.

The Textile Alliance, Incorporated, of this city, has received the following cable from England: "The war trade department will be prepared, subject as hereinafter stated, to consider applications for licenses to export to the United States East India wools purchased at the forthcoming Liverpool wool sales, up to a maximum of 10,000 bales. Licenses will not be granted to these classes of wools, which are required for military purposes: black, gray and brown wool, yellow pieces, low and medium hard, white blanket wool and ginned wool."

Passing of Style Uniformity.

Women's wear manufacturers ascribe much of the prosperity enjoyed in the various trades to the passing of the idea that every woman should be dressed in a uniform. The styles this season offer an exceptionally wide assortment and, if this individuality grows, there are manufacturers who believe that Paris will lose much of its prestige in fashions. While the uniform idea prevailed, the Parisian dressmakers could control the situation, since the models were restricted to modifications of one general design originating in the French capital. With a wide range of fashions the manufacturers here will become much more independent.

About the Spring Shoes.

There is a division of opinion at present among manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers concerning the proper style of women's boots for Spring wear. The majority favor the one-color shoe, such as is selling now—with the exception of small changes—though many claim that black vamps with colored tops will sell again. One thing is settled, however, and that is that the height of the Spring shoes will be eight inches or over. As for current styles, some of the new gypsy patterns are now made with heel foxing. This does away with the extreme plain effect on the sides and gives the shoe a better appearance. African brown shoes are selling very well. Fur cuffs are now worn around the ankle instead of the top of the shoe.

Chance for Domestic Fabrics.

The great amount of dissatisfaction expressed by users of foreign fabrics in the women's apparel lines makes it doubtful if the manufacturers will rely on the importers in the future. Orders placed as far back as last Spring have failed to bring the supplies contracted for, although the importers promised to make prompt deliveries. The opportunity afforded the domestic fabric producers is the best they have ever had to branch out into lines they have permitted the foreigners to monopolize for one reason or another in the past. The cutting up trade as a whole is inclined to believe that some of the importers have acted in bad faith by selling the goods they received to other firms than those that originally ordered them, so that they might get better prices.

Will Buy Japanese Cotton Goods.

A clipping from The London Times of recent date, reproduced in a commerce report, calls attention to the fact that an interesting experiment is about to be made by obtaining from Japan certain goods of the kind formerly imported from the Continent. A prominent English firm some months ago sent a representative to Japan to visit the leading manufacturing centres, and the result has been that fabric gloves and cotton wear have been purchased and are expected to reach England in a short time. The goods are coming from Osaka, Kobe, Tokio, Kyoto and Yokohama. The cotton underwear is not of very high grade, and is not trimmed, but it is said to be good of its kind.

Organdies Dispute Settled.

A long standing dispute between the customs officials at this port and Levor & Igstaedter regarding the values at which organdies from St. Gall were to be admitted was ended yesterday by the Reappraisement Division of the Board of General Appraisers when it was held that the entered prices were correct. When the goods, which were from Stoffel & Co., St. Gall, reached here, the Government officials made heavy advances on the theory that there was no wholesale market value for the fabrics in St. Gall. The Government finally conceded that there was a market. The board held that regardless of cost of production the entered values must be upheld, thereby reversing the advances imposed by the port officials.

Linoleum Makers Optimistic.

Reports from makers of linoleums and floor oilcloths indicate that they view the coming season with optimism. While little is being done at the moment in the booking of orders, the factories are still busy making shipments of goods previously bought. One interesting feature of the trade is that the demand for battleship linoleum has become so heavy that higher prices are being asked for it. There have been no further advances in commercial linoleum, and the chances are that the opening of the new season will find goods at their present levels in spite of the increasing cost of raw materials. An order for wide burlaps, which are used for backing linoleum, was placed very recently in Dundee for quite distant delivery at the highest price the firm ordering the goods has ever paid.

Ready for Carpet Opening.

Quite a few jobbers and some retailers are reported in this market already in preparation for the Spring carpet opening, which will occur next week. It was said yesterday that a fair volume of orders for the new merchandise had been placed to date, even though it has not been officially shown. While it was said that it was not definitely known where opening prices would stand in comparison with those now in existence, it was thought that advances were imperative because of the higher cost of production. Whether an advance of any consequence would hold in the face of impending trade happenings, on the other hand, was thought to be questionable. As indicated by the orders already placed, a wide variety of merchandise will be taken freely during the coming season.

Sheetings Were Wanted.

The feature of the gray goods demand in this market yesterday was the call for sheetings from the converting trade. Some liberal sales were told of, especially on four-yard 56-60s, for which the market was 6 cents. A good demand was also told of for four-yard, 48-square sheetings, at 5½ cents, these goods having also sold well on Tuesday. Drills were quiet. The call for printcloths was none too heavy, though a fair business for spot and nearby delivery was reported on 39-inch 68-72s, 39-inch 56-44s, 38½-inch 64-60s, and 38½-inch 80-52s at the prices quoted below. Fine goods continued very active, especially piques, which are in some cases sold ahead for four or five months. Staple printcloths prices were:

Competing with Mail Order House.

A merchant in a small town found that the mail order houses were cutting into his business seriously. He knew from investigation that the values he had to offer compared favorably with those of his big competitors, and in some cases he was able to make lower prices. His service naturally was superior to that of the mail order house. He concluded that it was woman's curiosity that was weaning them away from patronage at his store. The mail order catalogues exerted a potent influence with his feminine customers, who, after looking through the pages, were immediately prompted to sample the merchandise illustrated and described so alluringly. Finally the merchant decided to get out a catalogue of his own, constructed on similar lines to those of the mail order variety. Since then he has been able to make up lost ground, and now has little complaint over the competition of the mail order houses.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

The Showing Made by Those from This Port in September.

September exports of domestic production, largely war supplies, at this port exceeded the corresponding month of 1914 by more than $100,000,000, according to a statement issued yesterday by J. H. Cant, Chief Statistician of the Custom House, covering New York's foreign commerce for the month. Total outward shipments of domestic merchandise last month reached the enormous total of $160,785,868, compared with $60,490,197 in September, 1914. Import of raw materials showed a gain over the same month a year ago, while dutiable imports were only $1,400,000 behind those in September of last year. Detailed statistics follow:

BOOM IN WOOL MARKET.

Strong Foreign Market and Approach of Winter Season Help Trading.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"A decided uplift in the tone of the market took place during the week under review. It is felt that the prospect of export duty on wool from England, the possibility of an import duty in this country, the strong foreign market, and also the approach of the heavy-weight season, all contributed to the boom feeling. Fine staple wools are very valuable. Decidedly more wools in the aggregate were sold than for the previous week.

"Relatively high prices are being secured for stock goods, and the big Fall demand has not yet arrived. The market is distinctly a sellers' one, with prospects of its becoming even more so. Prices are likely to be regulated accordingly. A particularly good heavy-weight season is indicated by all the features in the market.

"The recent order for 5,000,000 yards from the Russian Government has awakened a great many sellers who have been inclined to believe that war order business is over. In the women's wear market there has been much more activity than for several past weeks.

"The cotton goods market is more active than it was a short time ago. The fine and fancy goods situation is improving. Much higher prices have been demanded by manufacturers."

LUTHER'S PAYS 8 PER CENT.

Due to Prosperity, Say Cotton Mill's Directors.

Special to The New York Times.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 20.—The Directors of the Luther Manufacturing Company, a cotton cloth manufacturing concern, have declared a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent., an increase of one-half of 1 per cent.

The management has stated that the corporation will be put on an 8 per cent. basis, rather than 6, as the mill's financial condition, as the result of good business, warrants it.

The Luther is capitalized at $525,000, so the annual disbursements will amount to $42,000.

This corporation in 1913 paid 24½ per cent. in cash dividends, in addition to a special stock dividend of 50 per cent., so the stockholders received, in both cash and stock, practically 75 per cent. in benefits.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Decisions Rendered on Textiles, Metals, Hose, and Beads.

J. M. Bostwick & Sons, Chicago, lost yesterday before the Board of General Appraisers in a protest against the Collector's action in taking 60 per cent. ad valorem duty on goods returned by the Appraiser as "cotton nets." The importers denied that the goods were of the character designated by the customs men and asked for a lower rate. No testimony was given, but an examination of the official record satisfied the board that proper assessment had been made.

Morgan's Louisiana & Texas Railroad and Steamship Company, New Orleans, protested the Collector's rate of 60 per cent. on silk hair nets. The Custom House authorities based their assessment on the ground that the goods were "nets of whatever yarns, threads, or filaments composed," while the importer asked a rate of 50 per cent. as silk wearing apparel. Judge Howell upheld the Collector's rate.

The George W. McCutcheon Company was partly sustained regarding the rates of duty on cotton table damask, woven on a Jacquard loom, and certain union damask composed of cotton and flax, cotton chief value. Both fabrics were returned at 30 per cent. ad valorem on account of the machine weave used in making them. The importers claimed 25 per cent. duty as "cotton table damask." The board decided that the table damask was properly dutiable as claimed, while the Collector was affirmed as to the union damask.

The board yesterday decided for the first time the status under the present tariff of the outer casings or covers of electric flash lights. As imported, the goods lacked only batteries and light bulbs to render them completed articles. The Collector classified the covers as metal articles valued at above 20 cents per dozen pieces, intended to be carried on or about the person, and took 90 per cent. duty. The board sustained the claims of A. H. Ringk & Co. and the International Forwarding Company, that the articles were properly dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as manufactures of metal not plated with gold or silver.

R. L. Swearer, Pittsburgh, lost in a contention for a rate of 15 per cent. ad valorem on silk garter hose, leggings, knee caps, and anklets. The Collector took duty at 45 per cent. as silk manufactures. It was claimed at the trial that, because the articles contained a certain amount of rubber, they fell under the 15 per cent. rate as "manufactures of india rubber or gutta-percha, commonly known as druggists' sundries." As the testimony was insufficient Judge Howell said the board was unable to determine the provisions of law applicable to the articles. The Collector was accordingly affirmed.

The American Bead Company was partly sustained in the claim that beads were properly dutiable at 20 per cent. ad valorem as imitation precious stones for use in the manufacture of jewelry—in this case rings. The above rate was allowed to the merchandise proved to be used for jewelry-making, and the Collector reversed in taking 35 per cent. ad valorem duty as "beads." The balance of the importations were held dutiable as assessed.

TUBE TO HOBOKEN BLOCKED

Broken Axle Interrupts Jersey Commuting Traffic Eight Hours.

New Jersey commuters living in Hoboken and near-by places experienced yesterday the inconveniences of the day prior to the opening of the Hudson River tube because of an eight-hour suspension of the underground service between Manhattan and the Lackawanna station, Hoboken. The axle of a truck on the rear car broke shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon as a train was pulling into the Hoboken station. The score or more passengers in the train had to walk the tracks to the station platform, a distance of only 100 feet or so. Trains about to leave Thirty-third Street and the Hudson Terminal Building for Hoboken were stopped by telephone, and the only other train running in the tube to Hoboken at the time of the accident pulled up behind the stalled cars to discharge its passengers.

Traffic was light when the tie-up occurred, and there was comparatively little public inconvenience or confusion until the rush hours of the evening, when the usual crowds rushed from office buildings to the tube stations. Guards with megaphones warned them that trains were not running to Hoboken, and the commuters were forced to use the ferries or go by tube to Jersey City, and thence by surface cars to Hoboken. None of the tube lines except that to Hoboken was affected by the accident. The Hoboken service was resumed at 9 o'clock last night.

Woolens Not to Be Withdrawn.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass, Oct. 20.—President Wood, of the American Woolen Company, tonight declared baseless the report that obtained currency today, that the company had decided to withdraw the spring lines of eighteen of its mills on account of war orders. The company closed an order last week with the Russian Government calling for 5,000,000 yards of heavy overcoating, and is also understood to have obtained another large contract from Great Britain.

REGISTER FOR DEFECTIVES.

Whitman Favors It, Speaking at Letchworth Cornerstone Laying.

THIELLS, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Further progress toward the completion of Letchworth Village, in Rockland County, the State home for mental defectives, which will be the largest institution of its kind in the country, was made today when Governor Charles S. Whitman laid the cornerstone of the attendants' home.

Governor Whitman, in an address, said that New York was one of the pioneer States in providing for the feeble-minded, and that only three States, California, Massachusetts, and Minnesota, exceeded New York in the accomodations provided. He said he thought all defectives soon would be registered, and those who were without means of support would be cared for by the State. The Governor added that the conservation of health was not a matter of politics, but should be indorsed by all the people.

Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the Board of Directors, said that more than $750,000 had been expended on permanent improvements for the village, and that the total cost will be about $3,500,000.

LAST JEROME AVE. STEEL UP.

New Elevated Line May Be Ready for Use by Summer.

The last steel beam to complete the Jerome Avenue elevated structure was hoisted into place at noon yesterday at East 183d Street. The work on this section has been in progress for eighteen months, and the line should be ready for operation by next summer.

The question how it is to be utilized will then arise. Ultimately it will have two connections with the south, one by the new Lexington Avenue subway, the other by a connection with the Manhattan elevated line at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue. The north end of the Lexington Avenue subway will not be ready for two years, and the Interborough has not begun the connecting link between its elevated line and the Jerome Avenue line.

Corse Payton Cut Off by Wife.

The will of Etta Reed Payton, actress, who died last week in Springfield, Mass., was filed yesterday with Surrogate Ketcham in Brooklyn. Her husband, Corse Payton, is not mentioned in the will, the entire estate being divided equally between her mother, Mrs. Carrie L. Reed, of Ravenna, Ohio, and her son, Gustave Reed Payton. The most important part of the estate consists of Jones Theatre, Fulton Street and Grand Avenue, Brooklyn. Abner B. Stupel, executor, stated that he had been unable to find the son, Gustave Payton.

YONKERS GROWING UP FAST.

Five-Year Increase in Population Excelled Only by Rochester.

Special to The New York Times.

YONKERS, N. Y., Oct. 20.—An official statement received today from Secretary of State Hugo shows that Yonkers is the fastest growing municipality among the second-class cities of the State, and shows, furthermore, that among the first-class cities she has been outplaced only by Rochester. It is the first time since Yonkers became a city in 1872 that she has won such a distinction.

In 1910 Yonkers's population was 79,803. In 1915 the population had swelled to 91,418, a percentage of .145. Compared with this figure New Yorkk City has a percentage of .048, and Utica has the next largest to Yonkekrs among the second-class cities with .107. Rochester leads with .164.

CHARGE IMMIGRANT FRAUDS.

Crusaders Arrest Three More Men Accused as Bogus Lawyers.

Three more arrests were made yesterday in the crusade of the New York County Lawyers' Association and the Bureau of Industries and Immigration of the State Industrial Commission against alleged bogus lawyers. The three prisoners described themselves as Carmelo Amoruso, a steamship agent, in business at 60 East Houston Street, living at 2,091 Second Avenue; Harry Tanzer, a real estate broker, of 90 East Tenth Street, and Joseph Lavitt, a druggist, of 74 Stanton Street. Amoruso waived examination in the Tombs Court and was held in $300 bail. The other two were paroled in the Essex Market Court and will appear for examination tomorrow.

George R. Adams, counsel for the Committee on Practice of the Lawyers' Association, was the complainant against all three prisoners. They, with the seven men arrested on Tuesday and others, according to the association, have been obtaining money from ignorant immigrants by falsely representing themselves as lawyers.

Holds Court Over Telephone.

The telephone was put to new use yesterday when City Judge Beall of Yonkers held court over the telephone and accepted a plea of guilty from John H. Rhoades, a banker of 37 Wall Street. Rhoads had been arrested on Broadway, Yonkers, for speeding. A policeman took him to the Third Precinct Police Station. He was in a hurry to get to New York, and Judge Beall was called on the telephone. The Justice accepted the banker's plea and reserved decision.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Of yesterday's stock market it can be said that, if the advances were fewer and of less significance than traders have grown accustomed to through several weeks of almost uninterrupted gains, the declines were disappointing to brokers, who have expected a wide break throughout the list. Traders who thought that the public was about satiated with the bull market have been making a great ado over the weak technical position in which stocks have been left, and have been urging their friends to sell their holdings before a wave of liquidation carries away their profits.

That the market has not yielded more easily to such influence is perhaps due in large measure to the strength of the steel trade. Not even the information unofficially distributed yesterday that next Tuesday's meeting will not result in a resumption of the Steel dividend served to chill the growing popularity of the Steel stocks. United States Steel was again very active, and although it yielded ⅞ from the closing price on Tuesday, in view of the recent advance the reaction was of little importance. The expectation that Chairman Gary, in his address to the Iron and Steel Institute Friday, will show greater optimism than for years past, coupled with the favorable tone of the weekly reviews of the organs of the trade, checked the selling of Steel, and gave rise to fresh estimates of the net earnings which will be reported next week.

The Iron Age says that reports from every branch of the finished steel trade are of the most inspiring character. In many branches manufacturers are swamped with work, and the new orders are being taken at higher prices. The railroads, having already begun to feel the stimulus of augmented traffic, are tardily entering the market for large amounts of rails, bridge steel, and cars.

It was learned yesterday that of the $490,000,000 of cash to be paid into the syndicate managers handling the Anglo-French loan, $350,000,000 was paid on the first day. This sum represents, of course, not only the full amount for the bonds withdrawn, but the 25 per cent. payment made by other syndicate members. A number of syndicate subscribers who participated in the underwriting on a considerable scale asked as late as yesterday to be allowed to withdraw their bonds from the public offering.

The proposed new Russian credits are still in a visionary stage. The Government would like to float a bond issue, here, but tentative suggestions along that line met with no encouragement. It was then proposed that credits be granted in connection with purchases here, the arrangement offered amounting in effect to the payment of manufacturers' bills in notes. This did not seem feasible, and it is not likely that any new Russian credit will be established, at least in the near future. There are open banking credits through which Russia is provided with large sums as needed, and these have been kept good by settlement through London.

COTTON MARKET QUIET AND EASY

Professionals Think It Is Overbought, Since the Bull News Fails to Advance It.

DAY'S LOSS 1 TO 2 POINTS

Memphis Report Estimates 60 Per Cent. of Crop Ginned for a Total of About 5,700,000 Bales.

There was a small market in cotton yesterday, but while the undertone was somewhat easy in the forenoon the rally toward the close left prices only one to two points net lower. There is a feeling in professional quarters that the market is overbought and that bull news now in circulation fails to stimulate fresh buying.

Reports from Memphis yesterday stated that President Taylor of the National Ginners' Association put the amount of cotton ginned to Oct. 18 around 5,700,000 bales, which was estimated to represent about 60 per cent. of the crop. Theodore H. Price in his weekly magazine, Commerce and Finance, calls attention to the fact that the highest previous percentage ever ginned was 54. Mr. Price takes the view that the crop can easily be around 12,500,000 bales, including linters.

Some of the largest yarn dealers in the country state that business is on a very large scale both for export and domestic account. Large sales are being made to Argentina, Italy, and even to Lancashire. Prices are irregular, but satisfactory.

Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged, seven points lower to twenty points higher. The local market for spot cotton was steady and unchanged, with middling 12.65. Sales, nil.

Etienne, Brest and Oran (Algeria.) steady. There was a good business in spot cotton with middling 3 points advance at 728d. Sales 12,000 bales. Receipts 13,000 bales, all American. Market closed barely steady.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

A good deal of irregularity was presented in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. The list, as a whole, tended toward reaction, but there were many spots of strength. American Locomotive, American Car & Foundry, Allis Chalmers, Studebaker, Tennessee Copper, and Inspiration Copper were among the stocks that advanced. United States Steel common, which was the most active issue, more than 21,000 changing hands, failed to make any headway, although it showed firmness at times during the day. Continued talk of the large profits accruing from war business was the main factor influencing stocks in the "war group."

'FRISCO ASSESSMENT $50.

Factions Unite on Plan for Reorganization of the Railroad.

It was stated authoritatively yesterday that the reorganization plan of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad had been adopted by all interests and that it would be presented for approval next week to the Railroad Commission of Missouri.

The last interests to comply with the plan were two factions of stockholders in St. Louis. They had threatened to bolt, and did so when the bondholders' committees in this city refused to deal with them longer. It was only after all hope of reconciliation had passed that these St. Louis factions agreed to assent to the plan.

Details of the reorganization plan have not been published. The main features of the plan are an assessment of $50 on the stock and the issuing of a new mortgage and an income bond issue. The refunding mortgage 4 per cent. bonds of the old company, it is understood, will get 75 per cent. of their holdings in the new mortgage bonds and 25 per cent. in the new income bonds; the general lien 5 per cent. bonds will get 75 per cent. in income bonds and 25 per cent. in mortgage bonds. There is also a provision for a syndicate which will advance $45 of the $50 assessment on each share of stock.

NATIONAL SURETY EXPANDS.

To Increase Capital Stock $1,000,000 at $150 a Share.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the National Surety Company yesterday it was voted unanimously to increase the capital from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000. The additional $1,000,000 stock will be issued at $150 a share, giving the company an additional surplus of $500,000.

The total capital and surplus is now $3,500,000, and the resources are given as more than $9,000,000. Twenty years ago the company had a capital of only $500,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Kean, Taylor & Co. have issued a pamphlet on low-priced railroad bonds.

J. Frank Howell is distributing a circular explaining the new movement to standardize freight cars with a view of obtaining greater economy in railroad transportation.

The gross earnings of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company for September were $1,585,689, an increase of $187,055. The surplus was $333,045, an increase of $100,837.

The Board of Directors of the Middletown & Unionville Railroad yesterday declared the first full semi-annual interest of 1 per cent. on the adjustment income bonds of the company, payable Nov. 1.

The Bankers Trust Company, as trustee under the first mortgage of the National Car Wheel Company, is inviting proposals for the sale to itself of $50,000 of the first mortgage bonds at a price not to exceed 115

STEEL PRICES ADVANCING.

Mills Seek to Check the Inflow of Orders for 1916 Delivery.

Congestion at the steel mills is bringing about a substantial price advance, according to this week's reports from trade centres, and prospects are seen of greater pressure from inflowing orders. Reports that Great Britain is considering an embargo on steel are thought to forecast heavier buying from abroad. The Iron Age says:

Reports from every branch of the finished steel trade are of the most inspiring character. The advances in price now being made are partly for the purpose of checking the heavy influx of orders for delivery in the first quarter and half of 1916. The wire manufacturers state that their trade is the largest in its history. In other branches of the steel business manufacturers are so swamped with work that they are back in deliveries four weeks or more, some products not being available for shipment on new orders under less than ten weeks. Much new business is of course coming from manufacturers having contracts for munitions of war for which they must purchase rounds and other finished forms, but in addition to this inquiries continue to be received from abroad for large quantities of the same class or material for use in foreign munition plants.

The Iron Trade Review says:

With steel works operations continuing at high speed and with no abatement of the pressure of orders upon the mills, plans for enlargements of capacity are beginning to appear on all sides. The Steel Corporation continues to produce steel at a rate considerably in excess of its previous high record, and announcement that a large new tin plate plant will be built at Gary is believed to be the forerunner of an extensive program of new construction. Rail orders of the week have amounted to 150,000 to 200,000 tons.

offers an opportunity for investment where a high rate of income may be obtained. The management of the company is most conservative and the earnings for the coming year are estimated at from 20% to 25% over previous years.

The market value on account of foreign liquidation has been depressed, but as this liquidation has now run its course, the market for this stock, without doubt, will show appreciation more commensurate with its intrinsic value.

MACHINISTS STRIKE AT WAR AUTO PLANT

Quit at General Vehicle Co.'s Factory, Subsidiary of the General Electric.

40,000 MAY SOON BE OUT

Keppler Says Sympathetic Walk-Out Against Schenectady Company Will Spread.

The plant of the General Vehicle Company in Long Island City was seriously crippled yesterday by a strike of machinists who went out in sympathy with the strikers at the Schenectady plant of the General Electric Company, of which the General Vehicle Company is a subsidiary.

The men struck without presenting any demands, and Vice President J. J. Keppler of the International Association of Machinists, who is directing a national campaign for the eight-hour day for the metal trades workers, said last night that they would not go back until their fellow-workers at Schenectady had got the forty-eight-hour week and other concessions which they asked when they went on strike more than two weeks ago. Keppler said that the strike would be extended to embrace the walkout of 40,000 men employed in General Electric plants throughout the country, unless the company yielded soon.

The Long Island City plant manufactures chassis for electric and gasoline automobile trucks, the engines for which are supplied by the General Electric Company. The strike comes at a time when the factory is working at full blast on orders for the allied armies, it is said, with contracts amounting to several hundred thousands of dollars. It is one of the largest plants for the manufacture of automobile chassis in the country.

The estimates made last night of the number of men who went on strike at the General Vehicle's plant differed. Officials of the company thought about 250 were out; officials of the union said that of the 1,000 metal trades workers in the plant 600 were out. At any rate, the plant will reopen for work this morning, a number of the machinists being non-union men.

Vice President George W. Westley of the General Vehicle Company said that on demands had been made, and that he first knew of the trouble on Tuesday afternoon when ninety machinists quit work. He said that by 7:30 failed to report for work yesterday.

The police reserves were ordered to the plant yesterday, but there was no disorder. The strikers met at Divine's Hotel, Long Island City, where their leaders cautioned them against disorder and told them to use nothing but persuasion in trying to get other men not to work. The men were told that before they returned they would receive a guarantee of an eight-hour day.

"The strike of the men at the General Vehicle Company's plant has effected a complete tie-up," said Keppler. "It means substantial support for the fight of 13,000 workers who have been out of the General Electric Schnectady plants for two weeks. They will all fight to the finish, and I am frank to say that if the thing is not settled soon 40,000 men working in shops owned by the General Electric throughout the country soon may be in volved in the strike. At the Pittsfield, Mass., plant, 6,000 men; at the Lynn, Mass., plant, 10,000 men, and at the Fort Wayne, Ind., plant, 2,000 men are all ready to make the eight-hour demand and to walk out if it is refused, as it was at Schnectady.

"The shrapnel department of the General Electric Company in Schnectady is completely tied up."

Keppler said that he had arrived in New York just in time to avert a strike of 1,500 Otis Elevator Company mechanics in the New York and Harrison, N. J., plants.

"I believe the eight-hour controversy with the Otis people can be settled without a strike," he said, "and the eight-hour day will also be gained in the plant of the Elevator Supply Company in Hoboken without a strike.

"A war material strike is also on in Rochester. The machinists at the Davis & Riker Company's plant have struck where they were making shrapnel.

"I wish to repeat again that the only reason machinists are striking in war factories is that that is where it is easiest for us to secure our demands."

$25,000 for Her Leg and Toes.

A jury in Justice Whitaker's part of the Supreme Court gave Charlotte Andrews a verdict yesterday for $25,000 against James C. Fargo as President of the American Express Company. The plaintiff testified that at Ninety-eighth Street and West End Avenue in May, 1912, an express truck, owned by the defendant's company, ran over her and injured her so that she lost her left leg and three toes of her right foot. The suit was for $50,000.

WAR FACTORY STOCK JUMPS.

American - British Manufacturing Securities Up 19 Points.

Rumors that Charles M. Schwab and his associates in the Bethlehem Steel Corporation were buying a substantial interest in the American & British Manufacturing Company, brought about a sharp rise of the company's stock on the Curb yesterday. From a closing price of 38 on Tuesday, and of 9 a month ago, the common stock advanced to 54 before the market closed, and thereafter buying on a heavy scale carried the quotation up to 57. The brokers were still busy in Broad Street when darkness brought an end to trading. The preferred stock, which had advanced from around 70 to 110 from Saturday to Tuesday night, moved contrary to the common, closing at 90, with a loss for the day of five points.

The American & British Manufacturing Company has outstanding $8,000,000 common and $2,000,000 preferred stock, the majority of which was held in the treasury of the International Power Company when this concern went into receivership last year. J. H. Hoadley was President of both concerns. The status of the American & British stock has been the subject of litigation in New Jersey since the controlling company fell into difficulties.

The American & British Company controls the American Ordnance Company and the Corliss Engine Company among others, and has received large sub-contracts from the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for the manufacture of field guns and small arms. When the war broke out this was one of the few concerns in the country in a position to begin work immediately on ordnance contracts. The Bridgeport Projectile Company, a constituent formed a few months ago, was mentioned in reports of German efforts to buy control of certain arms companies.

One theory behind the Schwab stories was that the Bethlehem Steel head would like to get control of the Corliss works to further his shipbuilding projects. The company owns all the patents for one of the highest grade marine engines manufactured in this country.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The receipts of wheat at interior points, especially in the Northwest, have assumed sufficient proportions to make some impression on the cash position and in consequence there was heavy liquidation during yesterday's operations and prices lost 1½ to 1¾c. in the local cash market No. 1 Northern Duluth was quoted at $1.08¾ and No. 1 Northern Manitoba $1.07¾, cost, insurance and freight, Buffalo.

CORN.

Corn prices declined ¼c to 1c early in the day under commission house selling prompted by favorable weather, which was expected to result in early offerings of new corn, and in sympathy with wheat. Receipts were light, however, and toward the close of the day the market developed a steadier tone, and at the close was net unchanged to ⅛c lower. In the local market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at 77¾c, prompt shipment.

PROVISIONS.

A decline of about 50 points in the hog market caused heavy general selling throughout the provision list, which unnerved stop loss orders and resulted in a sharp break in prices. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 27,000; estimated for Thursday, 25,000; Kansas City received 12,000, and Omaha 5,000.

The market for cottonseed oil was active and weak, closing prices showing losses of from 12 to 15 points. Crude oil was being offered at slightly lower figures, and reports from the South indicated some weakness in the seed market. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The outside interest in coffee appears to be broadening a little each day, and the volume of business yesterday was slightly larger, total sales aggregating 40,250 bags, and prices were firmer, closing at 7 to 9 points net advance. The local spot market was firmer for Rios, owing to the small amounts afloat for the United States, and No. 7s were advanced to 7¼c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,749 packages. The firmness noted Tuesday morning on high-grade creamery disappeared in the afternoon, and yesterday morning, with weaker Western advices, speculative interest was withdrawn, and prompt selling values on higher grades showed some decline. The buyer use of storage butter by the local jobbing trade is tending to curtail the demand at the moment, and we hear of no further export business. There is good demand for medium and lower grades of fresh creamery, and on such the market still appears to be steady. Renovated unchanged. Ladles quiet. Average run of packing stock easier. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 3,800 cases. Receipts light. High qualities of fresh-gathered are scarce and held firmly, with the tendency slightly in sellers' favor. Liberal offerings of medium and lower grades which are generally quiet, though trading in stock ranging from 28c downward, is reported a little better. Storage eggs quiet and barely steady. Nearby whites scarce and fancy qualities wanted at firm prices. SUES LAWYER FOR $3,540.

Clergyman Alleges That Money Was Withheld in Real Estate Deal.

Elbert S. Boughton, a lawyer, was directed yesterday by Justice Ford to show cause today why he should not pay to Luther T. Townsend $3,540 with interest from Aug. 1, 1913.

Mr. Townsend is a clergyman, a college professor, and an author. In his petition he said he was more than 75 years old and for ten years had lived at Brookline, Mass.

The money he wants the defendant to pay came from the sale of real estate, he said, in which the defendant represented him. The defendant is also required to produce certain papers which the plaintiff charges him with withholding from him.

A GREATER NEWARK IN RECLAIMED LAND

30,000 Celebrate Filling In of 4,000 Acres of Useless Meadows.

PLAN INDUSTRIAL CENTRE

By proclamation of Mayor Thomas L. Raymond of Newark, that city virtually took a holiday yesterday to celebrate the first public inspection of the great municipal work which is being done to reclaim thousands of acres of Newark meadows. The day was celebrated as Port Newark Terminal Day, for the city authorities, the members of the Board of Trade, the Traffic Club and other business organizations plan to make the onetime meadows one of the busiest shipping marts in the world, as well as a manufacturing and industrial centre.

The section now being developed includes nearly 4,000 acres of Newark Bay about midway between Elizabethport and the confluence of the Passaic and Hackensack Rivers at the head of the bay. Over three hundred acres have been filled, a channel two hundred feet wide and twenty feet deep at low water has been dredged from the Government channel, and facilities are being provided for docks and industrial plants. This work has been in progress a little over a year, and the cost to date has been nearly $2,500,000. Of this tract the city of Newark owns 1,000 acres.

Special railroad trains, tugs, steamboats, scores of jitney buses and hundreds of private automobiles carried fully 25,000 persons to the new terminal site yesterday. In addition to all the public officials of Newark, Naval Officer H. Otto Witpenn of New York went down in a gayly decorated revenue cutter. One of the sightseeing yachts which plies around Manhattan Island took a large party from New York City, making the trip through the Kill von Kull and steaming easily through the newly dredged channel from the main channel in Newark Bay.

J. Patrick J. Ryan, President of the Board of Street and Water Commissioners, presided. The leading speakers were Mayor Raymond, former Mayor Haussling, under whose administration the work began of putting the deserted meadows to useful purposes, and James R. Nugent, Democratic "boss" of the county. All paid a high tribute to the engineers who carried on the work, and predicted that in a few years business and shipping interests aggregating several hundred millions of dollars would be engaged in domestic and international trade on the Newark terminal.

The dockage facilities will have a total length of 4,500 feet. Several piers, 1,200 feet in length, to accommodate the largest vessels afloat, are also planned. On the reclaimed area streets and connecting highways will be laid out, sewage and water facilities provided with fire protection and convenient transportation. The tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey run through the tract and the Pennsylvania system is nearby.

Among the amusement features yesterday was a flight by Oscar Olson in a Curtiss hydroplane.

6 GIRLS KISS HIM IN STREET.

Waldorf Manager Bears Up Bravely in After-Wedding Ceremony.

A slim, smooth-faced young man, who stood in front of the Waldorf about the middle of yesterday afternoon, was the envy of many who thronged the thoroughfare, as half a dozen pretty young women, wearing huge bouquets of white roses, trooped out of the hotel, followed by an equal number of young men, and grouped about the door of a taxicab at the curb. Then, amid jolly laughter, each of the pretty girls stepped up to Frederick Eisler, an assistant manager of the hotel, and one after another gave him at least one kiss.

Mr. Eisler refused to reveal the names of the young women or the reason for all the sidewalk osculation, saying he was pledged to secrecy, but it was learned that they were part of a wedding party who had just been having breakfast in the hotel. All had come over from Philadelphia, a habit that is growing upon young Philadelphians who want to get married.

The bride was Mrs. Helen MacCoy and the bridegroom Edward F. Sautter. They were married at the Marble Collegiate Church, at 11 o'clock. The wedding breakfast was served in the Astor dining room. Frank M. Ferguson was best man at the ceremony and Mrs. Adelaide E. High acted as matron of honor. There were about twenty in the party, among them being Mrs. Doris Way, Miss Marcelle Lamb, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Felden, John Patten, Carl C. Sautter, Dr. Albert C. Sautter, Frank R. Maxwell, and George Carlton.

KILLS AND CUTS UP ADMIRER

Woman Says She Hid Cripple's Body in Box.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 20.—Mrs. Mary Pamias, wife of a street car conductor, surrendered to the police today, and was held in connection with the murder of Michael Weinstein, a crippled peddler, whose body, cut into pieces, was found in a box couch in Mrs. Pamias's bedroom. The man's wooden leg and crutch were found on the couch.

Mrs. Pamias, according to the police, said she killed Weinstein with an axe last night when he attacked her after she had refused to elope with him. She said she lived with the Weinstein family in Atlantic City, N. J., four years ago. Weinstein, she said, arrived here Sunday.

INDUCT MACCRACKEN AS LAFAYETTE HEAD

COLLEGE'S 9TH PRESIDENT

New Executive Praises Voluntary Institutions—Judge Gary Attacks Agitators.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 20.—Dr. John Henry MacCracken was installed today as ninth President of Lafayette College in the presence of a large gathering of prominent citizens and educators from all sections of the United States and Canada.

Israel P. Pardee of Hazleton, Penn., President of the Board of Trustees of Lafayette, presided at the exercises which were held in Pardee Hall, and besides Dr. MacCracken's inaugural address there was a speech by Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation. Professor F. A. Marsh, Jr., made the speech of welcome to the new President at the formal reception to the delegates from the 200 colleges represented.

In connection with the inauguration nineteen honorary degrees were conferred upon men prominent in various walks of life whose names were made public yesterday. The presentation remarks were made by Professor Edward Hart of the department of chemistry, Dr. W. B. Owen of the department of Latin, and David Bennett King of New York.

The day's exercises began with the presentation of the delegates and the formation of the academy's procession, and closed with a luncheon and a football game between Lafayette and Delaware Colleges.

Dr. MacCracken is a brother of Dr. Henry Noble MacCracken, recently inaugurated as President of Vassar, and a son of Dr. H. M. MacCracken, Chancellor emeritus of New York University.

The new President devoted his inaugural address largely to considering the service rendered to the Commonwealth by voluntary colleges, such as Lafayette, in contradistinction to those controlled and financed by the State, and concluded that the body politic was a gainer by the freedom accorded to voluntary independent institutions of learning.

Too Early to Judge War's Effects.

In opening his speech, Dr. MacCracken said:

"Coming in this second year of world war to a college founded largely by the efforts of a great American Secretary of War, who wrote into its original charter specific mention of military tactics as a subject of instruction; to a college whose seal bears the epaulet of a great soldier of freedom (with a somewhat contradictory legend—veritas liberabit); to a college whose name is that of a great Frenchman, beloved of Washington and remembered by the American people as General La Fayette rather than as the marquis of high lineage, as statesman or as reformer; to a college situated in this narrow valley, which resounds day and night with the straining, agonizing efforts of locomotives, to set forward on their way of destruction tons of shells and projectiles, it might be expected that I should speak of education for war, or appraise the place of the college in a civilization where the steel shell seems final arbiter and the scholar's position no whit different from that of Archimedes in Syracuse, twenty-two centuries ago, whose Scholar's boast, 'Give me where I may stand and I will move the world,' was quickly brought to nought by the ignorant soldier of Marcellus.

"But the time is not yet ripe for such appraisement, nor can the still, small voice of God be heard until the rock-blasting winds, the earthquake and the fires have passed. The times are too much out of joint, passion still too rampant in porch and grove to attempt at this time the answer to that cry which finds echo in all our hearts today, 'Who will build the city of our dream, where beauty shall abound and truth avail, with patient love that is too wise for strife: who now will speed us to its gate of peace and reassure us on our doubtful road?'

"I limit myself, therefore, to the topic of College and Commonwealth."

Scores Materialistic Sociologists.

Dr. MacCracken deprecated the present tendency of certain political philosophers, who would solve all society's ills by extending the functions of the State, in the following words:

"As a rule the sociology of these philosophers is so narrow that they know no men in whom the real reason for acts purporting to be acts springing from a sense of duty or from natural benevolence is not either love of gain or love of fame or love of power. They mistrust without a hearing any financial relation between the State treasury and voluntary enterprises. In New York they even questioned at the Constitutional Convention the exemption of voluntary colleges and voluntary churches from taxation. They not only contend for Government ownership of express companies, railroads, and telephones but regard the altruism of the carrier on the rural free delivery route as more orthodox than that of the circuit rider and confound the Government payroll with the angel's list of those who, like Abou, love their fellow-men.

"They have replaced the outworn creed, 'The King can do no wrong,' with the modern, extremely socialistic doctrine, no one can do right unless he be in the pay and wear the uniform of the State. Much, I admit, is to be said for the Greek ideal of the commonwealth, founded that we may live and continue, that we may live well a moral personality, undertaking whatever shall make its citizens better and happier. It is an ideal, however, possible only in a far more homogeneous population than any modern republic has yet possessed."

Judge Gary Warns Against Agitators.

Judge Gary also referred to the more or less widespread agitation against the present order of society and said:

"Though less noticeable and perhaps temporarily interrupted by the conflagration of Europe, which has diverted the attention and ordinary pursuits of so many, there has been, for many years, an increasing agitation throughout the world, including the United States, in favor of certain 'isms' which are calculated to sap the very foundations of economic justice.

"For the purpose of briefly discussing the subject, the people of this country, at least, may be divided into three general groups. Those who advocate the forcible distribution of the property of others without offering any equivalent; those who are designated capitalists; and others comprising the large majority who should and must eventually solve these questions, on the basis of universal and eternal justice.

"It is believed the dogmas which have been adverted to have received more or less encouragement in a few institutions of learning, and perhaps in some so-called religious bodies in this country and other countries. If this be true, it is unfortunate and inexcusable. The support of a bad cause under the guise of education or religious teaching is harmful in the extreme. It is a travesty on morality. The efforts of those engaged in these practices have been harmful and should be combatted in every fair and reasonable way. It would seem that one method of overcoming the tendencies mentioned is to offer something better as a substitute, and this leads me up to the high position in educational circles which Lafayette College occupies.

"It is a fine thing for the business world that such institutions as this exist. Nay, more, it is of immeasurable benefit to the whole community, to the State, and to the nation that there are colleges of such character and influence.

Time for High Ideals in Trade.

"Because I concede it to be my duty, as it is my pleasure, I will mention the other group, those who are possessed of more or less capital and with whom are connected the fraternity known as the business men. They are vitally interested in the solution of the problems which have been particularly referred to. They may also be teachers of men, by example, at least. If not, certainly many of them are not entitled to the honorary degrees which are occasionally bestowed upon them by the great educational institutions. The time is ripe for the introduction into business methods of high ideals, and this has been recognized by a large majority of the business men of the United States. They must admit that in the past they have not always been just in their treatment of others. They have been selfish and arrogant. They have occasionally given good ground for complaint. It is not certain that business men have always treated their employes exactly right. I am not sure that employes have always been paid adequate compensation for their services.

"If it be said employers have paid as much as their business would afford, the answer is the producer should have charged more for his commodities and the general purchasing public should have shared the burden of increased wages. The major part of the workingmen are conscionable and rational and if fairly treated are disposed to reciprocate. The average employer of the day is giving thought and consideration, as never before, to the interests and welfare of the employes and the wages which should be paid.

"There is one way, and perhaps only one way, of preventing the advance to the danger point of some of the vicious tendencies of the times, and that is by the attitude and action of those who undertake to contest it. If they themselves give no ground for complaint; if they are fair and magnanimous in their treatment of others; if they place right above power; if they show a disposition to work with and not against others, then, under these circumstances, they may appeal, with hope of success, to the intelligent masses, to the large majority of the people for consideration and judgment. When all causes for reasonable complaint are removed it is difficult for the agitator to make much headway in an effort to create prejudice and hostility."

KEEP MUST STAND TRIAL.

Posed as Minister, but Is Accused of Annoying Florence Lennon.

Richard Keep of 152 Prospect Park West, Brooklyn, who was arrested last week on a charge of annoying a fifteen-year-old schoolgirl while riding on a Flatbush Avenue trolley car, and who was said at that time to be a Swedenborgian minister, was arraigned yesterday in the Butler Street Police Court, and after an examination before Magistrate Nash was held in $500 bail for trial in Special Sessions.

Florence Lennon of 2,088 Nostrand Avenue, who attends Erasmus Hall High School, testified that she was on the car when Keep boarded it. He sat next to her and at once began to annoy her. When the car arrived at the Long Island Station the girl left it and called a policeman, who put Keep under arrest.

Lawyer Francis X. Carmody, who appeared for Keep, asked Miss Lennon if she wished to see Keep sent to jail. The girl answered that she did not.

"Are you sorry that you made the charge against him?"

"No," replied the girl very determinedly, "I am not sorry that I made this charge."

Mr. Carmody moved for the dismissal of the complaint on the ground that his client should not be held on the testimony of the girl. Magistrate Nash denied the motion.

Sergius M. Ellis, Superintendent of the Law and Order Union, who knew Keep, testified that the latter called on him two days after his arrest and admitted his guilt.

At the time of his arrest Keep, who is 48 years old, declared he was a minister. Friends yesterday said that he studied at the Norwich Academy at Norwich, Conn., but did not finish the course.

START ON RETURN JOURNEY.

Canadian Northern's Transcontinental Party Leaves Vancouver.

Special to The New York Times.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 20.—The Canadian Parliamentary party, this afternoon, began the return journey from coast to coast, over Canada's new transcontinental railway, the Canadian Northern. Prior to their departure, the visitors were entertained at a luncheon at the Hotel Vancouver, by the Board of Trade, Rotary Club, and other local organizations.

In paying high tribute to Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann, "that pair of empire builders," Senator Casgrain of Montreal said that their route was through the lowest pass in the Rocky Mountains, the one originally selected by Alexander Mackenzie. W. S. Middlesboro, M. P. for North Grey, Ont., and F. B. Carvell, M. P., of New Brunswick, also addressed the gathering.

PRESIDENT MAY GO TO THE EXPOSITIONS

Does Not Utterly Decline the Invitation Given by a Girl Delegate.

GOLD FOR WEDDING RING

Party from the Pacific Coast Brings Mr. Wilson a Piece of Quartz Gold Fashioned Like a Rose.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—There is a bare possibility that President Wilson will make a hurried trip to California to attend the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco before it closes on Dec. 4; most probably the San Diego exposition also. This was indicated today after the President had received a delegation of young women from California, who urged him to visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition. If the President should go it would be with the understanding that no stops should be made going or returning. To the cordial invitation of the young women, backed by a petition signed by 300,000 California school children, the President was noncommittal; he did not say outright that he would not accept.

Miss Dorothy Starr and Miss Esther Bull comprised the delegation. With them was Miss Altha McCuen of San Francisco, aged eleven, who was selected to make the trip to Washington because her essay was regarded as the best in a competition of school children who gave reasons why President Wilson should visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Miss Gaillard Stoney, Director and Secretary of the Women's Board of the Exposition, is chaperoning the girls on their trans continental trip.

Miss Starr is a daughter of the owner of the oldest working gold mine in California, and she gave to the President a bar of gold from this mine which she hoped, she said, would be made into Mrs. Norman Galt's wedding ring.

"That's a very good idea," said the President.

Miss Bull had brought from California a cluster of orange blossoms with the intention of presenting them to the President, but she left them at her hotel when she went to the White House. She told the President about them and said that she thought of giving them to Mrs. Galt.

"An excellent idea," said the President. Another present to the President was a piece of quartz gold fashioned like a rose.

The party from the Pacific Coast was fifteen minutes late in reaching the White House. President Wilson had other engagements, but he waited. When a reporter asked Miss Bull what had detained her, she said: "Well, it was this hat, for one thing. And we were so excited that we just couldn't make haste."

PRESIDENT SEES VAUDEVILLE.

Attends Theatre Unannounced, Accompanied by Fiancee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—President Wilson and his fiancée, Mrs. Norman Galt, this evening attended the vaudeville performance at Keith's Theatre, following a family dinner party at the White House. No notice had been given of the coming of the White House party. When they arrived the lobby was filled with arriving playgoers. At a word from the attendants the crowd separated, and formed a broad aisle from the street to the grand stairway. Dr. Cary Grayson led the way, followed by Mrs. Galt, her mother, Mrs. William H. Bolling; Miss Smith of New Orleans, and Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, the President and his cousin, John A. Wilson of Franklin, Penn., bringing up the rear.

That the date of the wedding was decided upon more than a week ago is known to the friends of Mrs. Galt and the President. All, however, are under solemn promise not to reveal any knowledge they may have of the date owing to the fact that a change may be made at the eleventh hour. It is the desire of the bride-elect that certain changes in the jewelry business of her late husband be made before her wedding. The uncertainty attending these negotiations is the chief reason for withholding the date selected.

Miss Margaret Wilson is expected at the White House tomorrow to remain several weeks. She concluded her song recitals in Cleveland last evening.

WIRELESS SENDS VOICE OVER ATLANTIC; SPEECH FROM ARLINGTON, VA., TO PARIS HEARD AT THE SAME TIME IN HONOLULU

VISION OF YEARS ACHIEVED

VOICE RECOGNIZED IN HAWAII

"Hello" and "Good-bye" Are Distinctly Understood in France on Three Nights

UNDER ADVERSE CONDITIONS

Use of Foreign Station Restricted Owing to War—Static Disturbances Are Overcome.

Words uttered in Arlington, Va., have been heard in Paris, France, on three different occasions within the last ten days. On Tuesday and Wednesday nights of last week, and again on Wednesday night of this week, the human voice was projected across the Atlantic for the first times in history, and "Hellos" and "Good-byes" said in Arlington were heard and understood in the French capital, 3,800 miles from the point of transmission.

Announcement of the epochal achievement was made officially by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company last night, following cabled confirmation of the success of the wireless telephone experiments received in New York and in Washington from the company's engineers in Paris.

H. E. Shreeve and A. M. Curtis, of the staff of John J. Carty, the Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, went to France to represent the company in the transatlantic experiments. For several weeks they have been severing red tape and making other arrangements for the tests.

Eiffel Tower Station Used.

Owing to the facts that France is at war and that wireless is playing a most important part in the working out of the French military communication system, it was with difficulty that officials were persuaded to permit the use of the Eiffel Tower station in Paris for the receipt of the messages from Arlington.

Only a few seconds at a time, in periods far apart, were allowed the American engineers, during which they were permitted to listen for the greeting from far-away Arlington. In order that there could be no doubt of the genuineness of the tests, officers of the French Government, two or more of whom represented the army, were with Messrs. Shreeve and Curtis in Paris, while Colonel Samuel Reber of the United States Army Radio Service, Captain W. H. G. Bullard, head of the United States Naval Radio Service, and other American Army and Navy officers watched the experiments at Arlington.

Mr. Carty, who not only heads the engineering staff of the telephone company but is President of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, directed the experiments. Following the announcement of the success of the tests, he predicted that wireless telephonic communication between New York or any other American city and all the great cities of the world was but a matter of time.

Official Announcement Made.

The announcement given out at the offices of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, 15 Dey Street, follows:

Transatlantic wireless telephony is an accomplished fact. Observers listening at the Eiffel Tower in Paris have heard speech sent out by engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company from apparatus developed by that company and the Western Electric Company and installed at Arlington, Va. The equipment used was that employed a few weeks ago in talking by wireless telephony to San Francisco and Honolulu. The antenna employed at Arlington was that of the United States Navy Department, which was placed at the disposal of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's engineers through the courtesy of the department.

At the time of the announcement of successful wireless telephony from Arlington to Mare Island, Panama, San Diego, and Honolulu on Sept. 29, John J Carty Chief Engineer of the American Telephone and Telegraps Company, made the announcement that the achievement then accomplished demonstrated the possibility of transatlantic wireless telephony from Washington or New York to London, Paris, and other European capitals. He stated that were it not for the conditions of war existing in Europe, the accomplishment of transatlantic wireless telephony would undoubtedly have preceded the much more difficult feat of transmission to Honolulu.

By Courtesy of France.

The announcement that speech has actually been transmitted from Arlington to observers stationed at the Eifel Tower, Paris, marks the conclusion of another chapter in the experiment undertaken by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. When Mr. Carty's engineers commenced work on the long-distance wireless telephone experiments, observers with receiving apparatus were sent not only to Panama, San Diego,

MRS. F. J. SHEPARD ADOPTS FOUNDLING

Waif from a Dobbs Ferry Home Becomes Heir Apparent to 20 or More Millions.

BOY OF 5, BRIGHT, PRETTY

"Austin McCleary" Sewed in Clothes of Child Abandoned Here on Cathedral Steps.

A small boy, so small he was little more than a baby, sat crying one evening on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral. Crowds passed him by, but presently a woman spoke to him. He was lost, he told her. He did not know how he got on the cathedral steps. He did not even know who he was, though the name of Austin McCleary was sewed in his clothes. The woman turned him over to the police; clearly he had been abandoned, and, as a foundling, he was sent to St. Christopher's Home in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y.

That was in September of last year. Yesterday Finley J. Shepard and his wife, who was Miss Helen Gould, appeared before Surrogate William A. Sawyer of Westchester County, sitting in White Plains, and formally adopted the youngster as their son, to be known in future as Finley Jay Shepard. With the signature of Mr. Sawyer to the papers of adoption young Austin McCleary, if that were ever his name, was changed from a foundling officially known as "John Doe, No. 104," to the son and probably heir of one of the wealthiest couples in this country.

The new Finley Jay Shepard slept last night at Lyndhurst, Mrs. Shepard's estate at Tarrytown. He has a governess to look after him, and already Mr. and Mrs. Shepard are planning to send him to college. At present, however, he must learn to spell and do a little "readin', writin,' and 'rithmetic," for he is just a little more than 5 years old, a pretty, blond-haired, and blue-eyed youngster who does not realize how lucky he has been.

Mrs. Shepard admitted to inquirers last night that she and her husband had adopted the boy because they had become interested in the bright little fellow on frequent visits to St. Christopher's Home. But that was all Mrs. Shepard would say. Both she and Mr. Shepard had hoped that the adoption might be kept secret for a time, and hours were disappointed when they were told that this was impossible, since all adoption papers are public property.

With a representative of the law firm of Leonard & Walker of 135 Broadway, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard appeared before Surrogate Sawyer yesterday, and, after reading their petition and the necessary documents signed by Emily Fowler, as President, and Mary E. Cooper, as Secretary, of St. Christopher's Home, the Surrogate issued the order which gave the small boy to the Shepards. In conclusion the order expressed Mr. Sawyer's belief that "the proposed foster parents are persons of good moral character and of reputable standing in the community and of sufficient means properly to maintain and educate said child."

The news of the adoption was a great surprise to the many friends of Mrs. Shepard, though all immediately recalled her fondness for children and the motherly care she had given to the two children of her brother, Frank J. Gould, who always have made their home at Lyndhurst.

Finley Jay Shepard, as he is to be known henceforth, could scarcely have selected more satisfactory parents had he had the choosing to do himself. From a motherless youngster he has been changed suddenly into the son of one of the richest women in the United States. Miss Helen Gould inherited between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 from her father, Jay Gould, and this fortune, despite Mrs. Shepard's many gifts to charity, has been increasing ever since. It has been estimated at between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000.

ALLAN LINER AGROUND ON COAST OF FRANCE

The Pomeranian, from Montreal for London, Goes Ashore in a Fog Near Havre.

HAVRE, Oct. 21.—The Allan Line steamer Pomeranian, from Montreal for London, went ashore today in a fog near Coteville, five miles northwest of Havre.

The vessel is lying on a strip of the beach strewn with large gravel and appears not to be straining.

It is hoped she will get off shortly.

The Allan Line steamship Pomeranian, a vessel of 3,000 tons, built in 1882, arrived at Montreal on Oct. 4, after having left London on Sept. 18 and left shortly afterwards on her return trip. She has been used as a munitions and troop transport ship in the British service.

MELLEN IS HOSTILE, GOVERNMENT SAYS

Prosecutor Swacker Asks Court to Caution Witness Against Discrediting Case.

NEW ENGLAND DEAL BARED

Ex-President Says New Haven Hired Him Because He Was a Nuisance as Rival.

How the New Haven choked the New York and New England Railroad by shutting it out of New York and thereby took the first step in building up its tentacular system, was told yesterday by Charles S. Mellen, former President of the road, before a jury in the Federal District Court, where eleven of his former associates are being tried for a conspiracy to monopolize the traffic of New England.

Mr. Mellen drew the accusation of Counsel for the Government that he was hostile to the prosecution when he seemed to defend the policies which led to the extension of the system. Judge Hunt said he did not think the witness was hostile to the Government.

Then Mr. Mellen brought violent protests from counsel for the defendants when he pulled away the curtain from 1890-1895 methods of railroading in New England and told how he had been hired at a big salary by the New Haven to sit still and do nothing because he had caused that road trouble as general manager of the New England. How he made trouble was told when the witness described the scheme by which he blocked the move of the New Haven to give the public faster trains from New York to Boston.

Calls Witness Hostile.

It was after Mr. Mellen could not remember just what rôle the late J. P. Morgan played in the purchase of the bankrupt New England Terminal Company that Mr. Swacker of counsel for the Government said:

"I think the Court might caution the witness to make his answers responsive. He is frankly hostile to the Government."

Mr. Lindabury of counsel for the defendants objected to the remark, and Judge Hunt said that he had not considered Mr. Mellen at all hostile to the Government.

"It seems to me," the Court said, "he is trying to answer every question where his recollection is within his reach and he has testified very fully."

During the afternoon Charles W. Morse, who was once so intimately connected with the New England steamship lines, appeared in court. He sat for a time listening to the evidence among the other spectators, but he declined to say whether he had been subpoenaed by either side.

It was after the witness had finished telling how traffic was handled in New England twenty years ago that Mr. Swacker asked:

"What was the state of competition between the New York and New England and the New Haven when you were general manager of the former?"

"It was the worst form of cut-throat competition I ever had any experience with in forty-four years."

"What form did it take?"

"Any form you can imagine—one man cutting the heart out of another, except these were two railroads."

"For what traffic in particular?"

"All traffic in particular and in general, and between all points they could reach directly or through their connections."

This led to the recital of a clash between Mr. Mellen as General Manager of the New England, Charles P. Clark as President, and Lucius Tuttle, Vice President of the New Haven, which Mr. Lindabury, as counsel for the defence, tried his hardest to keep out.

Hired to do Nothing.

Mr. Mellen said that in the early part of 1892, just before he returned to the New England from the Union Pacific, the New Haven had leased the New York, Providence & Boston Railroad, which controlled the Providence & Stonington Steamship Company. By this the New Haven extended its line 125 miles to New London and eighty-five miles to Providence, and wanting to get the long haul on its business, favored the line by way of Providence.

Consequently it sent over its own lines certain business that had been moving over the New York and New England lines which Mr. Mellen admitted improved the service to the public. Additional trains were put on by the Shore Line and an attempt was made to shorten the time by way of Springfield and by the Shore Line.

To these changes the witness said "the New England protested very much and effectively." He explained that there were three six-hour trains from New York to Boston and he found that the New Haven officials proposed to reduce the time of the Boston & Albany and the Shore Line train to 5 hours and 30 minutes, while the third train, which ran over the New England route, was to be kept at six hours.

"I exhausted myself," he said, "in showing them the unfairness of the proposition, and I persuaded them not to do it."

The curiosity of Mr. Swacker was

3 TROOPERS KILLED 8 SHOT BY MEXICANS

Violent Border Battle Is Fought in Darkness Near the Rio Grande.

JAPANESE AMONG THE DEAD

Five Mexicans Also Slain—Brownsville Citizens Demand an End of Raids.

BROWNSVILLE, Tex., Oct. 21.—Three American soldiers, five Mexicans and one Japanese were killed in this morning's fight between United States soldiers and Mexican bandits at Ojo de Agua. The Japanese had apparently been shot in the fight, but there is nothing to indicate that he belonged to the raiders. Eight American soldiers were wounded.

The Rio Grande was used twice today by two separate bands of Mexican bandits to stop pursuit of American soldiers, most of the bandits crossing into Mexico in both instances. The first crossing was in the retreat from the Ojo de Agua fight, sixty miles up the river, about 3 A. M., and the second occurred about thirty miles up the river, where soldiers and a civilian posse chased a small body of Mexicans to the river. They crossed in a boat.

Captain Frank R. McCoy of the Third Cavalry, commanding the Mission Patrol District, reported tonight his belief that there were not more than thirty Mexicans in the party which attacked Ojo de Agua. All eight of the American wounded were expected to recover, he said. Not all the bandits appear to have crossed the river after this fight, for a trail of blood, made apparently by at least two wounded men, was followed for several miles until it finally was lost at a point where the bandits obtained horses from some source.

The fifteen American soldiers in camp at Ojo de Agua received their first warning of the bandits' approach from screams of Mexican women. Soon afterward, according to the story of a trooper at Mission, a sentry saw a brush moving suspiciously and slipped over beside the cot of Sergeant Shaefer, in command of the detachment, saying, "Things are looking bad out in the brush."

He had hardly finished speaking when the bandits opened fire from all sides. One of the first volleys killed Sergeant Shaefer. The attacking party seemed to advance, to retreat, and to manoeuvre by bugle, like seasoned soldiers. The army wireless operator ran to his machine to send out a call, but a bullet penetrated his arm and the same bullet broke the wireless. Captain McCoy was notified of the fight by N. C. Cavasos, a merchant at Penas, three miles from Ojo de Agua, who said he heard heavy firing.

Among hatband ribbons left by the bandits after the fight were inscriptions reading: "Viva the independence of Texas" and "Viva Villa."

One of the Mexican dead was an old man with beard neatly trimmed, who appeared to be of a more intelligent class than the bandits heretofore observed in the raids.

Reports today of a bandit raid near Sebastian were discredited tonight.

SKIDDING MOTORCYCLE HURLS GIRL TO DEATH

Miss May Buckley Hung from the Basket and Crashes Head-On Against Subway Pillar.

Policeman Kennedy of the West 177th Street Station heard a crash and then calls for help last evening and ran to 210th Street and Tenth Avenue, where he saw the wreck of a motorcycle which had run into one of the pillars of the subway structure, elevated at that point, and beside it two young men bending over the body of a girl whose head was crushed. The girl was evidently dead, but Kennedy called Dr. Jacobs from Washington Heights Hospital, and the surgeon said she had been killed instantly when, as the young men explained, the motorcycle had skidded, run into the pillar, and sent the girl flying from the basket beside the wheel, head-on against another pillar.

The young men said she was Miss May Buckley, 20 years old, who lived with a widowed mother and younger brother at 1,174 Burnett Place, Bronx. The men were Charles and John McIntosh, who live in Harlem River Terrace.

Charles McIntosh owned the motor cycle and said he had invited the girl and his brother for a ride last evening. He and John were cut and bruised, for they had been thrown off the machine, but neither was seriously injured, and they went home in a car after Dr. Jacobs had treated them.

ALLEGES CONSPIRACY TO OUST ASQUITH

London Chronicle Says Northcliffe Heads Plot to Drive Out Grey, Kitchener, and Balfour.

LLOYD GEORGE FOR PREMIER

Newspaper Proprietor Said to Have Boasted Cabinet Would Be Out In a Fortnight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—The Daily Chronicle's Parliamentary correspondent, under the heading "Conspiracy Against the Government," says: "It is time to speak out. A powerful conspiracy with widespread ramifications is afoot for the purpose of destroying the present Government.

"One of the chief conspirators is Lord Northcliffe. For several months he has been using all his newspapers to cast discredit upon the present Administration. He thinks now that he has succeeded in undermining the nation's confidence in it and that the hour to strike a fatal blow has come.

"This week Lord Northcliffe has been openly boasting that the Government will be destroyed in a fortnight's time. He flatters himself that it was he who was responsible for the euthanasia of the Liberal Administration last Spring. Never was there a greater delusion. When the secret history of those fateful weeks can be told it will be found that his influence on the transition from a Liberal to a Coalition Administration was quite negligible. That change had become inevitable in the nature of things. The war had assumed such a character that for its efficient conduct we needed a Cabinet representative of all parties in the State.

"It is this Cabinet that Lord Northcliffe and his fellow intriguers have now marked down for destruction. They are so confident of the success of their subterranean plot that they have even planned out an alternative Government with a cabinet which would include Lord Milner and Sir Edward Carson, but not Mr. Asquith, not Sir Edward Grey, not Lord Kitchener nor Mr. Balfour, and of course there would be no representative of labor.

"Such a cabinet would not command a majority in the House of Commons, but the conspirators think they might engineer a general election—a mad gamble if ever there was one.

"It passes understanding how anybody can seriously imagine that a Cabinet so composed will command more confidence than the present one. Labor, chafing under the bridle of the Munitions act, is restive even now, when it has strong friends and champions in the Cabinet. Are Carson and Milner the type of men to soothe the unquiet spirit of our industrial democracy?

"Mr. Lloyd George is regarded as the favorite for the Premiership in this speculative administration.

"So much for the aims of the conspiracy, but how is it to be brought to a head? Mr. Asquith has the confidence of the country. He has a majority in the House. There can be no dissolution without his wish, at any rate not until Parliament expires by the effluxion of time next January. Its expiration could be delayed by a bill amending the Parliament act, but the Lords might refuse to pass the amending measure, in which case there would have to be a general election in January or February next.

"A crisis could, however, be accelerated by a rupture in the Cabinet, which might come next week or the week after. It could only come on one issue, viz., conscription, for there is absolute unanimity in the Cabinet in the determination to wage the war at any sacrifice to a victorious conclusion.

"It is undeniable that the mournful blunders in the Gallipoli Peninsula, the irritating stupidity of the censorship, and the veil of secrecy enshrouding our military operations on the Continent have acted in a way to discredit the Government, which could take the nation into its confidence to a far larger extent without detriment to the military operations. It is absurd of the scaremongering press to suggest darkly that the Government are 'hiding the truth,' as though some terrible things were being kept back from public knowledge.

"The favorite target for the attacks of the Northcliffe press in recent weeks has been Sir Edward Grey because of the alleged failure of our Balkan diplomacy. The plain truth about the Balkans is that the situation there today is simply the other side of the Russian reverses. Arms, not diplomacy, is the explanation. What the critics of Sir Edward Grey forget is that in the diplomacy of the Allies in the Balkans Russia as the power most vitally interested, has had the largest say. The fall of Sir Edward Grey would be hailed with jubilation from one end of Germany to the other.

"The position of Mr. Lloyd George in all this wirepulling behind the scenes is a popular one. He is and has always been devotedly loyal to Mr. Asquith, and would be no party to any intrigue against him. Nevertheless some of the Conservatives who entered Mr. Asquith's head openly say that Mr. Lloyd George is the only possible Prime Minister of a new Administration.

"Last night came the announcement that Col. Arthur Lee had been appointed Military Secretary to the Minister of Munitions. Mr. Lloyd George and Colonel Lee are both strong conscriptionists.

Mr. Lloyd George is ready to accept, in the interests of national unity, a very much modified scheme of compulsion.

"In the speculative Cabinet that the schemers are forming the distribution of some of the offices is as follows: Prime Minister, Lloyd George; Foreign Secretary, Lord Curzon; Chancellor of the Exchequer, J. Austen Chamberlain; Colonial Secretary, Bonar Law; Home Secretary, Sir Edward Carson; Secretary for India, Lord Milner.

"For the time being the conspirators propose to retain Lord Kitchener as Secretary of State for War, but he would be shunted at the first opportunity."

Visit to Ostend and Other Points Veiled in Much Secrecy.

"The Emperor distributed a number of decorations in the course of his trip, which was veiled with the closest secrecy on account of a fear of aeroplane attacks."

London Contrasts the Execution of Edith Cavell With Mild Treatment of Woman Spy in England

LONDON, Oct. 21.—English newspapers draw a parallel between the summary execution of Miss Cavell in Belgium and the course taken in England concerning Mrs. Louise Herbert, who was sentenced to six months' imprisonment as a spy.

Mrs. Herbert's appeal was heard at Durham yesterday. She is a German, and the wife of an English curate at Darlington. She admitted that she had sought information regarding munitions and intended to send this information to Germany. The Judge asked her yesterday:

"Did you intend to send the information to Germany if you got the chance?"

"Yes, I did," she replied.

Mrs. Herbert also admitted that she had corresponded with Germany through friends in Switzerland.

The Judge, astonished by her frank answer, remarked: "This woman has a conscience—she wishes to answer truthfully and deserves credit for that. At the same time, she is dangerous."

He affirmed the sentence of six months' imprisonment.

RUMANIA READY TO JOIN ALLIES

Has 600,000 Men Prepared for Service, Says Special Envoy at Petrograd.

HAD TO WAIT FOR SUPPLIES

An Army of 320,000 Is Waiting in the Passes on the Hungarian Border.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 21, (Via London, Oct. 22.)—The Novoe Vremya prints an interview with the Rumanian Envoy, who has arrived on a mission from the Rumanian Foreign Office. The Envoy is quoted as stating that the Rumanian Army and the nation are wholly on the side of the Entente and that he is convinced that Rumania will soon abandon neutrality.

Regarding Russian reproaches at Rumania's delay, he points out that premature action in the absence of an adequate supply of munitions might have placed the country in a terrible situation.

"Now that we are almost ready," the Envoy is quoted as adding, "we can reckon on an army of 600,000 men, which could be increased to over 1,000,000 but for the question of munitions. Our War Office has already adopted appropriate measures in the Carpathian defiles, where an army of 320,000 is concentrated."

LONDON HEARS GREECE REJECTS CYPRUS OFFER

Rome Says the Allies Will Force Her to Act or Demobilize.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—The Times says this morning:

"The statement published yesterday to the effect that the British Government had made a formal offer to cede to Greece the Island of Cyprus on condition that Greebe forthwith fulfill her obligation under the Greco-Serbian treaty are partial revelations of proposals which have been under consideration for some time.

"The specific proposal in regard to Cyprus was communicated to the Greek Government last Sunday. Greece was clearly informed by a British note that the fulfillment of her treaty obligations to Serbia would entail the cession of Cyprus without prejudice to any other eventual advantages which the Allies might share with Greece.

"It is understood that the Greek Government has already been assured of large military and adequate financial support from the Allies and had been given to understand that the condition of a guarantee of Greek possessions for a term of years, recently mentioned by Venizelos in the Greek Chamber, would be fulfilled.

"Though the acquisition of Cyprus has long been a cherished Hellenic aspiration, no indication has yet been received that the British offer has been accepted. Indeed, in well-informed quarters it was understood last evening that the proposal had been rejected."

GREECE MUST ACT OR DEMOBILIZE

Rome Hears Allied Fleets Will Attack Her Coasts if Necessary.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 21.—It is understood that English diplomacy has taken the lead both in Greece and Rumania to induce the two countries to make a prompt decision to support the cause of the Allies. It is asserted that the arguments used now are quite different from those employed in the Balkans during the last few months, so that within October Greece either must reduce her army to a peace footing or further push her mobilization, fulfilling the pledges contained in her treaty of alliance with Serbia.

If Greece refuses, maintaining her

MAIN SERB ARMY IN GRAVE PERIL

Cut Off from Allies by Rapid Advance Westward of Bulgarians.

FRENCH RUSH TO RESCUE

Cross the Vardar River and March on Istip—Teutons Press South.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—While it was believed that the greatest danger to Serbia lay in the Austro-German onslaught in the North, as a matter of fact the Bulgarian attacks against the Serbians through the valleys from the East are proving the more formidable. It is now definitely settled that the Bulgars have cut the Saloniki-Nish railway to the north of Vranya, thus driving a wedge between the main Serbian Army and the Anglo-French forces which landed at Saloniki.

There is another railway, which, branching off at Uskub, runs up the western side of Serbia, but it is a considerable way around and, besides, another Bulgarian army, which is now approaching Kumanovo, is threatening the junction at Uskub.

In the latter region, however, the Serbs are reported in advices from Saloniki last night to have repulsed the invaders between Egri Palanka and Statzin, as well as near Volosso, south of Varnya, while the French reinforcements, moving up rapidly from Gievgeli, have advanced beyond Demir Kapu, crossed the Vardar River, and are threatening the Bulgarian Army south of Ishtip.

The Saloniki correspondent of The Daily Mail asserts that many of the reports current concerning Bulgarian successes are pure fabrications.

Bulgarian irregulars who attacked Vranya, says the correspondent, succeeded in damaging the railway so that it cannot be used for the present, but these irregulars were defeated, and the entire force exterminated. The French force, he continues, is executing a brilliantly planned movement in the rear of a large Bulgarian force for the purpose of cutting off a Bulgarian retreat on Istip. The Bulgarians are said to have suffered a notable reverse at the hands of the Serbians near Kopruliu.

Serbs Admit Peril of Army.

The seriousness of the position in which the Serbian Army is placed is admitted by the War Office at Nish which on Wednesday issued the following communication, as forwarded to Paris by the Havas Agency correspondent in the capital:

The situation grows more and more serious. The resistance of the Serbian troops is desperate and heroic, but the strong pressure of the Austrians and Germans from the north and of masses of Bulgarians from the east is menacing seriously the Serbian Army, which is now cut off from Saloniki. The arrival of Allied troops is awaited anxiously.

The Serbians in the north hold the Rakhanatz-Alexanderovatz-Daihgolobovi and the Asagna-Kosmai lines and the right bank of the Kolonbaza. On the eastern front they hold the Zadotchavi-Kolatzovatz-Pirot-Vlasslina line, but the Bulgarians have taken the towns of Vranya and Volosso, cutting the line to Saloniki in two places.

The German official account of latest operations, issued in Berlin by the War Office yesterday, follows:

On the entire front our allied troops are slowly pursuing the retreating enemy. The Serbians have been driven in a southerly direction, out of their strongly fortified positions south and east of Ripanj. Our advance guards have reached the Stepojevac-Leskovac-Babs line. West of the Morava German troops are pushing forward by way of Selevac.

Bulgarian troops are fighting at Negotin. Further south they have reached the Zaiecar-Knjazevac high road.

Negotin is in Northeastern Serbia, five miles from the border. The Bulgarian drive to this point and the simultaneous Austro-German advance to the Stepojevac-Leskovac-Babs line shows that vigorous efforts are being made to effect a junction between the Bulgarian and Teutonic forces. Negotin is only about twenty-five miles from the Austro-German line.

The Vienna official report on the Serbian operations says:

Our troops have entered Sabac. The Macva plain has been cleared of the enemy.

The army of General Kevess and the German forces are advancing on both

WHITLOCK MAKES REPORT

News of Sentence Was Kept From Him for Several Hours.

HIS FINAL APPEAL WAS VAIN

Nor Had He Been Able to Gain for Miss Cavell a Chance to Consult Her Counsel.

NO CHARGE OF ESPIONAGE

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The full report of the circumstances of the condemnation and execution of Miss Edith Cavell, an Englishwoman and head of a training school in Brussels, for helping English, French, and Belgian soldiers to escape from Belgium, made by Brand Whitlock, the American Minister at Brussels, to Walter H. Page, the American Ambassador at London, was issued by the British Government this evening.

How the Secretary of the American Legation, Hugh S. Gibson, sought out the German Governor, Baron von der Lancken, late at night before the execution, and, with the Spanish Minister, pleaded with him and the other German officers for the Englishwoman's life, is graphically related in a memorandum from Mr. Gibson. This document makes reference to an apparent lack of good faith on the part of the German authorities in failing to keep their promises to inform the American Minister fully of the trial and sentence.

Final Appeal Just Before Execution.

Mr. Whitlock's final appeal was in the form of a note sent by a messenger late on the night of the 11th to Governor von der Lancken, reading as follows:

"Mon cher Baron: Je suis trop malade pour vous présenter ma requête moi-même, mais je fais appel à votre générosité de coeur pour l'appuyer et sauver de la mort cette malheureuse. Ayez pitié d'elle.

"Votre bien dévoué.

"BRAND WHITLOCK."

[Translation.]

"My dear Baron: I am too sick to present my request myself, but I appeal to your generosity of heart to support it and save from death this unhappy woman. Have pity on her.

"Yours truly.

"BRAND WHITLOCK."

Mr. Whitlock also called the attention of the Governor to the fact that Miss Cavell had nursed German soldiers:

Mr. Deleval, Counselor of the American Legation, reported to Minister Whitlock:

"This morning Mr. Gahan, an English clergyman, told me that he had seen Miss Cavell in her cell yesterday night at 10 o'clock and that he had given her Holy Communion and had found her admirably strong and calm.

Happy to Die for England.

"I asked Mr. Gahan whether she had made any remarks about anything concerning the legal side of her case, and whether the confession which she made before trial and in court was in his opinion perfectly free and sincere. Mr. Gahan said she told him she was perfectly well and knew what she had done; that, according to the law, of course she was guilty, and admitted her guilt, but that she was happy to die for her country."

Secretary Gibson's report says that Conrad, an official of the German civil branch, gave positive assurances on the 11th that the American Legation would be fully informed of the developments in the case, and continues:

"Despite these assurances, we made repeated inquiries in the course of the day, the last one being at 6:20 P. M. Mr. Conrad then stated that sentence had not been pronounced, and specifically renewed his previous assurances that he would not fail to inform us as soon as there was any news.

"At 8:30 it was learned from an outside source that sentence had been passed in the course of the afternoon, before the last conversation with Mr. Conrad, and that execution would take place during the night."

Secretary Gibson thereupon sought:

the Spanish Minister, with the American Minister's note for clemency, and, with Mr. Deleval, they went to von der Lancken's quarters. Finding the Governor and his staff absent, they telephoned to them, asking them to return on a matter of the utmost urgency. The Governor with his staff returned shortly after 10 o'clock.

Governor Denied the Sentence.

Secretary Gibson's report to Minister Whitlock continues:

"The circumstances of the case were explained to him, and your note was presented. He read it aloud in our presence. He expressed disbelief in the report that sentence had actually been passed, and manifested some surprise that we should give credence to any report not emanating from official sources. He was quite insistent on knowing the exact source of our information, but this I did not feel at liberty to communicate to him.

"Baron von der Lancken stated that it was quite improbable that sentence had been pronounced, and even if so it would not be executed in so short a time, and that, in any event, it would be quite impossible to take any action before morning.

"It was, of course, pointed out to him that even if the facts were as we believed them to be, action would be useless unless taken at once. We urged him to ascertain the facts immediately. This, after some hesitancy, he agreed to do. He telephoned to the Presiding Judge of the court-martial, and returned to say that the facts were as we had presented them, and that it was intended to carry out the sentence before morning.

"We then presented as earnestly as possible your plea for delay. So far as I am able to judge we neglected to present no phase of the matter which might have had any effect, emphasizing the horror of executing a woman, no matter what her offense, and pointing out that the death sentence had heretofore been imposed only for actual cases of espionage, and that Miss Cavell was not even accused by the German authorities of anything so serious.

Gibson Warned of Reprisals.

"I further called attention to the failure to comply with Mr. Conrad's promise to inform the legation of sentence. I urged that, inasmuch as the offenses charged against Miss Cavell were long since accomplished, and as she had been for some weeks in a prison, delay in carrying out the sentence could entail no danger to the German cause. I even went so far as to point out the fearful effect of a summary execution of this sort upon public opinion, both here and abroad; and, although I had no authority for doing so, called attention to the possibility that it might bring about reprisals."

Spanish Minister's Urgent Appeal.

Mr. Gibson's report continues:

"The Spanish Minister forcibly supported all our representations and made an earnest plea for clemency. Baron von der Lancken stated that the Military Governor was the supreme authority in matters of this sort, and that an appeal from his decision could be carried only to the Emperor. the Governor General having no authority to intervene in such cases.

"After some discussion he agreed to call the Military Governor on the telephone and learn whether he had already ratified the sentence, and whether there was any chance for clemency.

"He returned in about half an hour and stated that he had been to confer personally with the Military Governor, who said he had acted in the case of Miss Cavell only after mature deliberation; that the circumstances in her case were of such a character that he considered the infliction of the death penalty imperative, and that he must decline to accept your plea for clemency or any representation in regard to the matter.

"Baron von der Lancken then asked me to take back the note which I had presented to him. To this I demurred, pointing out that it was not a requête en grâce, but merely a note to him transmitting a request to the Governor, which was itself to be considered as the requête en grâce.

"I pointed out that this was expressly stated in your note to him and tried to prevail upon him to keep it. He was very insistent, however, and I finally reached the conclusion that, inasmuch as he had read it aloud to us, and we knew he was aware of its contents, there was nothing to be gained by refusing to accept the note, and accordingly I took it back.

"Even after Baron von der Lancken's very positive and definite statement that there was no hope, and that under the circumstances 'even the Emperor himself could not intervene,' we continued to appeal to every sentiment to secure delay.

"The Spanish Minister even led Baron von der Lancken aside in order to say very forcibly a number of things which he would have felt a hesitancy in saying in the presence of the younger officers and of Mr. Deleval, a Belgian subject.

Our Services to Germans Recalled.

"His Excellency talked very earnestly with Baron von der Lancken for about a quarter of an hour. During this time Mr. Deleval and I presented to the younger officers every argument we could think of. I reminded them of our untiring efforts on behalf of German subjects at the outbreak of the war and during the siege of Antwerp. I pointed out that, while our services had been gladly rendered, and without any thought of future favors, they should certainly entitle you to some consideration for the only request of this sort you had made since the beginning of the war.

"Unfortunately our efforts were unavailing. We persevered until it was only too clear that there was no hope of securing any consideration for the case. We left shortly after midnight, and I immediately returned to the legation to report to you.

"HUGH GIBSON."

Counselor of Legation Deleval reported to Mr. Whitlock that on the failure of the German authorities to reply to Mr. Whitlock's request of Aug. 31 that Mr. Deleval be permitted to see Miss Cavell in order to have all necessary steps taken for her defense, another letter was dispatched on Sept. 10, to which a German reply on Sept. 12 refused the request, but referred him to Attorney Kirschen, who had been assigned for the defense.

Documents Kept from the Defense.

Attorney Kirschen, Mr. Deleval reported, stated that Miss Cavell was being prosecuted for helping soldiers cross the frontier, and that lawyers defending prisoners before a German military court were not allowed to see their clients before trial, and were not permitted to see any document of the prosecution, but that trial was developed so carefully and slowly that it was possible to have a fair knowledge of all the facts and present a good defense for the prisoner.

"I informed Mr. Kirschen," Mr. Deleval's report continues, "of my intention to be present at the trial so as to watch. He dissuaded me from taking such an attitude, which, he said, would cause great prejudice to the prisoner, because the German judges would resent it and feel that it was almost an affront if I was appearing to exercise a kind of supervision on the trial."

Mr. Deleval's report says that Attorney Kirschen assured him repeatedly that the Military Court of Brussels was always perfectly fair, and that Herr Kirschen would keep him informed of all developments in the case, but that Herr Kirschen failed to give him any information, and that after the trial Mr. Deleval learned from other sources the following:

Miss Cavell Admitted the Charges.

"Miss Cavell was prosecuted for having helped English and French soldiers, as well as Belgian young men, to cross the frontier and go to England. She admitted by signing a statement before the day of the trial and by public acknowledgment in court that she was guilty of the charges, not only that she had helped these soldiers to cross the frontier, but also that some of them had thanked her in writing when arriving in England.

"This last admission made her case more serious, because if it had only been proved she had helped soldiers to traverse the Dutch frontier, and no proof was produced that those soldiers had reached a country at war with Germany, she could have only been sentenced for an attempt to commit the crime, and not for the crime being duly accomplished.

"As the case stood, the sentence fixed by the German military law was the sentence of death."

The report of Mr. Deleval says that Miss Cavell, in her oral statement before the court, disclosed almost all the facts of the prosecution. She spoke without trembling and showed a clear mind, and often added some statement of greater precision to her previous depositions.

"When she was asked why she helped these soldiers to go to England," the report of Mr. Deleval continues, "she replied that she thought if she had not done so they would have shot by the Germans. Therefore she thought she only did her duty to her country in saving their lives.

"The military prosecutor said the argument might be good for English soldiers, but that it did not apply to Belgian young men, who would have been perfectly free to remain in the country without danger to their lives."

Herr Kirschen made a good plea for Miss Cavell, says the report, but the military prosecutor asked the court for a death sentence for her and for eight others of the thirty-five persons on trial. The court seemed not to agree, and judgment was postponed. The trial lasted two days, ending Oct. 8.

Not Allowed to See a British Clergyman.

Mr. Deleval's request on the 10th for permission for an English clergyman to see Miss Cavell was denied, the report says. He was told she could see the three Protestant clergymen attached to the prison.

On the evening of the 11th Mr. Deleval learned from unofficial sources that the sentence of death had been passed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and that Miss Cavell would be shot at 2 o'clock in the morning.

On Oct. 9 Mr. Whitlock notified Ambassador Page that a sentence of death had been asked for, but that he had hopes the Court might decline to grant it. Mr. Whitlock added that he felt it would be useless to take any action until the sentence was pronounced.

Whitlock's Appeal to Germans.

The letter sent by Mr. Whitlock to Baron von der Lancken at the hands of Mr. Gibson on the night of the 11th, follows:

"Your Excellency:

"I have just learned that Miss Cavell, who is a British subject and consequently under the protection of my Embassy, was this morning condemned to death by sentence of court martial. Without going into the causes which led to such a severe sentence, and one which, if all the reports which have reached me are correct, is more severe in this case than in all others which have been tried by the same tribunal, I hope to be able to appeal to the sentiments of humanity and generosity of His Excellency, the Governor General, on behalf of Miss Cavell, in order that the sentence of death which has been passed against her may be commuted, and that this unhappy lady be not executed.

"Miss Cavell is the head nurse of a surgical institute of Brussels. She has spent her life in alleviating the sufferings of others, and at her school have been trained numerous nurses who, throughout the world, in Germany as in Belgium, have kept watch at the bedsides of patients. At the beginning of the war Miss Cavell gave her services to German soldiers as well as to others.

"Failing other reasons, her humanitarian career is of a nature to inspire pity for her, and, in advance, to secure her pardon.

"If the information given me is correct, Miss Cavell, far from hiding herself, with laudable frankness admitted all the facts laid to her charge, and the information she supplied was the cause of aggravating the sentence passed upon her.

"It is with confidence and hope of its being favorably received that I pray your Excellency to present to the Governor-General my request for grace in favor of Miss Cavell.

"I take this occasion to renew to your Excellency assurances of my high consideration.

"BRAND WHITLOCK."

Every Possible Effort Made.

In a report to Mr. Page Mr. Whitlock wrote:

"I know that you will understand without my telling you that we exhausted every possible effort to prevent the infliction of the death penalty, and that our failure has been felt by us a very severe blow. I am convinced, however, that no step was neglected which could have had any effect.

"From the date we first learned of Miss Cavell's imprisonment we made frequent inquiries of the German authorities and reminded them of their promise that we should be fully informed as to developments. They were under no misapprehension as to our interest in the matter."

The British Foreign Office, in a note to Ambassador Page, asking him to express to Mr. Whitlock and his staff the British Government's grateful thanks for their efforts in behalf of Miss Cavell, says:

"Sir Edward Grey is confident that the news of the execution of this noble Englishwoman will be received with horror and disgust, not only in the allied States, but throughout the civilized world.

Not Even Charged with Espionage.

"Miss Cavell was not even charged with espionage, and the fact that she had nursed numbers of wounded German soldiers might have been regarded as a complete reason in itself for treating her with leniency.

"The attitude of the German authorities is, if possible, rendered worse by the discreditable efforts successfully made by officials of the German civil administration at Brussels to conceal the fact that the sentence had been passed and would be carried out immediately.

"These efforts were, no doubt, prompted by a determination to carry out the sentence before an appeal from the finding of the court-martial could be made to a higher authority, and show in the clearest manner that the German authorities were well aware that the carrying out of the sentence was not warranted by any consideration. Further comment on these proceedings would be superfluous."

Sir Edward Grey adds that he is fully satisfied that the American Legation left no stone unturned to secure a fair trial for Miss Cavell and a mitigation of her sentence.

Stayed in Brussels to Give Help.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The Morning Post publishes a letter from a cousin of Miss Cavell concerning her devotion to her work as a nurse:

"My cousin's intense devotion to the alleviation of suffering caused her to devote her life to nursing in Brussels," the letter says. "She voluntarily remained there to continue her work when the city was taken by the Germans. She would have nursed a German with as much tender care as an Englishman.

"In a letter to me she said: 'We have no wounded here now. The Allies do not come here, and the Germans are sent back to their own country. The few that remain are nursed by their own countrywomen, so we are denied the great consolation of being of use in our own special way.'

"She allowed the womanly quality of compassion to get the better of prudence and self-interest. For this she has suffered untold miseries and died a martyr's death."

OBJECTED TO EYE BANDAGES.

Miss Cavell Faced Firing Squad Bravely, Wearing the Union Jack.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—A dispatch from Amsterdam to The Daily Express says:

"The President of the Court, it is reported, asked Miss Cavell if she wished to add anything to her defense or sign a request for the Kaiser's pardon. She merely shrugged her shoulders and walked out.

"She was as brave before the German rifles as she had been before the court martial and refused to have her eyes bandaged.

"On her bodice she had pinned a small Union Jack."

MISS CAVELL'S DEATH INFLAMES ENGLAND

Her Execution is Denounced as 'the Most Damnable Crime of the War.'

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—The story of the execution of Edith Cavell, as told in the correspondence sent by the American Minister at Brussels to the American Ambassador at London, is printed in full in the morning papers, which predicted that it will send a wave of indignation throughout the country.

In Trafalgar Square yesterday all heads were bared to the memory of Miss Cavell. One speaker, holding in his hand a wreath to her memory, to be placed on the plinth of the Nelson Column, exclaimed:

"Who will avenge the murder of this splendid Englishwoman?" In response to this appeal many new recruits came forward.

The London papers, in their editorials, while paying tribute to the fine efforts of the American diplomatic representatives in her behalf, characterize her execution as "the most damnable crime of the war."

The Daily Graphic says:

"The documents issued are a record of such foul and damnable infamy as all Germany's bloody crimes in this war cannot equal, for this was cold, calculated, and deliberate murder. Not heaven itself, nor all the mercy of all the angels, could find a mediatory expiation."

The Daily Mail in an editorial says:

"It is a deed which in horror and wicked purposelessness stuns the world and cries to Heaven for vengeance."

The Daily Telegraph says:

"We cannot be too grateful to those American and Spanish officials who worked with such passionate zeal in behalf of our unhappy countrywoman."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—The Daily Chronicle says of the Cavell case this morning:

"The papers communicated by the American legation at Brussels regarding the trial and execution of Miss Cavell record surely one of the most appalling wickednesses yet perpetrated in this war. We pity the man, born of woman, who can read them unmoved. One may safely affirm that, having regard to her transparently humanitarian motives and all the circumstances of the case, no Government in the world but the German would have inflicted the death penalty on such a culprit. They not merely inflicted it, but compassed its infliction with a mixture of duplicity and brutality that must make every decent human being's gorge rise.

"Only less amazing than the futile cruelty of the thing is the series of lies and subterfuges whereby it sought to trick the American Legation and to secure that Miss Cavell should be dead before they could finally protest. The sense of the whole civilized world can be left to judge between this helpless woman and her murderers."

The Morning Post says: "It is quite useless to look for any colorable pretext for the German remorselessness in this matter, because the whole correspondence shows that they had no plea to offer. They were resolved from the first to commit this deed of cruelty, but they were feverishly anxious that it should be kept secret until beyond recall.

"When we think of the scene in that Brussels jail we may well wonder that at this time of day it should be possible to get men to participate in such a deed."

The Daily News comments:

"Miss Cavell's death is a final revelation of the monstrous thing which England and her allies are fighting. The end of the spectacle which began at Zabern with the revelation of a young officer cutting down a cripple with his sword for the honor of the German Army is here, the end in every sense, for humanity cannot tolerate its continuance. However terrible may be the cost of its destruction, it is less terrible than that."

The Daily Express says:

"The whole empire will echo Sir Edward Grey's thanks to Brand Whitlock for his splendid efforts to save Miss Cavell. He prayed for mercy in the name of humanity; he forgot all personal considerations in his eagerness. The killing of Miss Cavell is an affront to American and Spanish humanity, which will surely demand more than President Wilson's usual note. Germany is the pariah of the nations. No other nation can continue relations with her without losing self-respect."

The Times says:

"The ordinary German mind is doubtless incapable of understanding the 'horror and disgust' which the military execution of Miss Cavell will arouse throughout the civilized world. The papers issued this morning by the Government, despite the restraints of official correspondence, disclose something of the feeling which the deed excited in the members of the American and Spanish legations in Brussels, who strove with chivalrous zeal to save our countrywoman's life. We shall be surprised if within the next few days the press of all neutral lands does not re-echo these feelings with an intensity which will astonish the disciples of Kultur. There is not in Europe outside of Germany and her allies a man who can read of it without deepest emotions of pity and of shame."

EXECUTION HORRIFIES DUTCH.

German Officials Condemned as "Poor Psychologists."

AMSTERDAM, Friday, Oct. 22, (via London.)—The execution of Miss Edith Cavell is the subject of condemnatory editorials in the Dutch newspapers today. The Nieuw van den Dag says it trusts that "a vigorous protest in the name of humanity" will be made from all sides, and adds:

"What poor psychologists the German officials are! From their first request to Belgium for free passage, down through the Lusitania case and the visits of Zeppelins to open towns, and finally incidents of the Cavell sort; the Germans have shown everywhere a lack of the most elementary conception of psychology."

BISHOP WANTS VENGEANCE.

London Prelate Says God's Curse Is on Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—One of the most striking incidents of the Trafalgar Day celebrations was the sermon preached by the Bishop of London at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields. In the course of his sermon the Bishop, referring to the Cavell case, said:

"I wonder what Nelson would have said if he had been told an English girl had been shot in cold blood by any other nation. He would have made more than the diplomatic inquiries which have been made by the great neutral into this crime. Right and proper as those inquiries are, he would have made his inquiries by the thunder of the guns of the British fleet and pressed the question with the Nelson touch which won Trafalgar, as indeed, our own fleet at this moment is only too ready to do.

"But is it possible that there is one young man in England today who will sit still under this monstrous wrong?

And shall they scorn Tre, Pol, and Pen?
And shall Trelawney die?
There's twenty thousand Cornishmen
Will know the reason why.

"The spirit of Nelson must indeed have died out in our young men—which it certainly has not—if the answer is not the same today. The 3,000,000 new recruits asked for will be there. Why was she put to death? Why was she murdered? Three thousand thousand Englishmen, Scotsmen, and Irishmen will know the reason why.

"God's curse is on a nation, however disciplined and efficient, that tramples under foot and openly defies the laws of chivalry which once relieved the horrors of war."

KAISER PARDONS OTHERS CONDEMNED

Notifies King of Spain of Mercy Granted Countess de Belleville and Others.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—Emperor William has notified King Alfonso that he has pardoned the Countess de Belleville, Mlle. Thuller, a Frenchwoman, and the other Belgians condemned to death in Belgium for aiding in the escape of prisoner soldiers, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from Madrid.

The Countess Johanna de Belleville, Mlle. Louise Thuller, a school teacher; Philip Baucq, an architect, and Louis Severin, a chemist, were mentioned in the official proclamation announcing the execution of Miss Edith Cavell as having been sentenced to death by the German authorities in Belgium. The proclamation also gave the names of twenty-three persons who had been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

Pope Benedict, King Alfonso of Spain, and Ambassador Gerard interceded with Emperor William on behalf of these persons, and the Emperor was reported to have ordered a suspension of the execution of the sentences in order that he might make a detailed examination into the cases.

BRAVE FRENCHWOMEN GET MILITARY CROSS

Two Members of French Aristocracy Among Those Honored With Decorations.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The Military Cross, with commendation in army orders, has been conferred on a long list of heroic women who, as nurses, stayed at their posts at Compiègne, Senlis, and Villers-Cotterets, some during the German occupation, and all under fire. Among them are two women belonging to the French aristocracy—Baroness Fain and Countess Pillet-Will.

The Baroness was at Château Compiègne when it was occupied by the Germans, and, in the words of an army order, "faced difficulties of every kind with calmness, dignity, and firmness, lly encouraging the staff."

eadily for all eventualities and constant-

The Countess Pillet-Will returned to Compiègne, after accompanying British wounded soldiers to Rouen, to find the Germans in occupation, but resumed her duties the moment they left, in spite of the continuous heavy bombardment.

Mme. Carrel-Billiard devoted herself unsparingly to the care of the wounded in an annex outside the Rockefeller Institute.

Mme. de St. Martin "ran about the streets at Senlis in peril of her life, looking for a German doctor to attend the wounded."

The Superiors of the Convents St. Joseph and St. Vincent, at Senlis, and of Compassion, at Compiègne, also have been decorated for their courage or their help as organizers.

GERMANS ARE NEARING RIGA

Hindenburg Claims Further Progress, While Petrograd Reports Repulse of His Attacks.

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 22.—Field Marshal von Hindenburg, in his attack on Riga, has reached Olai, which is half way between Riga and Mitau and only a dozen miles southwest of the Baltic port. The German offensive extends along a front of about seventy miles, and the German flanking movement on the right has reached the Dvina River, thirty miles southeast of Riga, from which point the Dvinsk-Riga railway is being bombarded.

As an offset to this the Russians, by a dashing attack, have carried the German position southeast of Baranovichi, an important railway junction east of Slonim on the Lida-Rovno railway, taking more than 3,500 prisoners and, according to a German official admission, have continued their success on the middle Styr, where the Berlin report says "a few cannon" were lost.

The important Russian success in the region of Baranovichi was announced in the following official statement issued yesterday at Petrograd:

In the districts southeast of Baranovichi our troops, after a dashing surprise attack yesterday, captured German positions near the villages of Ekimovichi, Odokhorschina, Noviki, and Nagornia. In the course of the day we took eighty-five German and Austrian officers and 3,562 men prisoners, in addition to capturing ten quick-firers and one gun.

Gas Receptacles Captured.

Last night's official Russian report shows that the Russians have followed up their successes. It adds that a quantity of asphyxiating gas was taken in receptacles at the scene of the fighting near Baranovichi, and accuses the Austrians and Germans of using explosive bullets nearly altogether in the battles along the Styr. The text of the report follows:

In the region of the Riga front there has been an artillery duel. A German offensive east of the village of Olai on the Mitau road was repulsed. On the front east of Olai there has been an incessant cannonade.

Our Ilyamouretz aeroplane threw dozens of bombs on the outskirts of Mitau, causing, according to reliable reports, great damage to the railway and enemy stores. In the region of Olai our troops brought down a German aeroplane. The aviators were killed.

In the region of the village of Palakanen, east of Olai, the Germans, under cover of a cloud of smoke, made four unsuccessful attacks.

In the region of Friedrichstadt and Jacobstadt, and on the front of the region of Dvinsk, there is nothing of importance to report.

North of the town of Postava, after stubborn fighting, the Germans were ejected from the little village of Roussaki. We took 200 prisoners.

When we captured the German and Austrian positions in the region southeast of Baranovichi it was found that the enemy was preparing to use asphyxiating gas against us. Receptacles full of it fell into our hands.

South of the Pripet marshes we took by assault a series of villages on the left bank of the Styr below Rafalovka. On the occupation of the village of Komorovh we captured over 400 soldiers and two machine guns.

German counterattacks in the region of Kolki were repulsed with heavy losses. In the region north of the village of Tchernysh, southeast of Kolki, heavy fighting is proceeding.

The Austrians and Germans on the fighting on the left bank of the Styr continue to use virtually nothing but explosive bullets.

Berlin Admits Loss of Guns.

Army Group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: Northeast of Mitau we occupied the bank of the Dvina from Borkowitz to Bersemünde. The booty taken up to the present time in the engagements in this district amounts to 6 machine guns and 1,725 prisoners.

Army Group of Prince Leopold: East of Baranovichi a Russian attack was repulsed by a counterattack.

Army Group of General von Linsingen: On the Styr, in the region of Czartorysk, local engagements developed to a great extent. Part of a German division fighting there was forced by the numerical superiority of the enemy to retreat to a position further to the rear, whereby a few cannon, which had been held in their positions to the last moment, were lost. A counterattack is proceeding.

JOFFRE PRAISES CHAMPAGNE FORCES

'Proud to Command the Finest Troops France Has Ever Known,' He Says.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The War Office today published the text of an order of the day issued by General Joffre on Oct. 3, expressing his high appreciation of the achievements of the French troops in the Champagne offensive. The Commander in Chief said:

The Commander in Chief expresses to the troops under his orders deep satisfaction at the results obtained up to the present by their attacks.

Twenty-five thousand prisoners, 350 officers, 150 cannon, and material which has not yet been enumerated are the trophies of the victory, the measure of which may be gauged by the impression made throughout Europe.

None of the sacrifices so readily made has been in vain. All have borne a share in the common task. The present is a sure guarantee to us of the future. The Commander in Chief is proud to command the finest troops France ever has known.

J. JOFFRE.

An order of the day, issued by General Joffre before the beginning of the offensive, is published here today as follows:

General Headquarters, Sept. 23.

General Order No. 43.

Soldiers of the Republic: After months of waiting, which has enabled us to increase our forces and resources while our adversary has used up his, the hour has come to attack, to win, and to add fresh pages of glory to those of the Marne, Flanders, the Vosges, and Arras. Behind the whirlwind of iron fire let loose—thanks to the toil in the factories of France, where your brothers have worked for us night and day—you will go to the assault all together along the whole front, the close union with the armies of our allies.

Your élan will be irresistible. It will carry you with the first effort to the adversary's batteries beyond the fortified lines he opposes to you. You will give him neither peace nor rest until victory has been gained. Go forward with stout hearts for the deliverance of your native soil, for triumph, justice, and liberty.

J. JOFFRE.

GERMANS WORSTED IN THREE ATTACKS

French Repel Successive Charges on Their Lines to the East of Rheims.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—German charges, renewed today upon the French lines to the east of Rheims, though preceded by a violent artillery fire and the use of suffocating gases, made no impression, the assailants, who attacked over a front of five miles, being thrice thrown back with considerable losses. German attacks in Lorraine and in the neighborhood of Souches were also repulsed by the French.

The text of the French afternoon communication follows:

Following the bombardment reported yesterday evening to the east of Rheims, along the front of eight or nine kilometers, (about five miles,) stretching between the Butte de Tir and Prunay, the Germans have renewed their attack, which failed miserably before, in the same region.

In spite of the violence of the preparatory fire on the part of the artillery and the increased density of the blanket of suffocating gases, the enemy suffered a further check. On three distinct occasions our assailants endeavored to penetrate our positions.

Decimated by the fire of our machine guns and the concentrated fire of our artillery, they finally were brought to a halt in front of our barbed wire entanglements, and they were not successful in gaining possession of any point in our first lines of trenches.

There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

The official communication issued by the French War Office tonight says:

There was no important action along the entire front.

The Belgian official communication reads:

Except for a violent bombardment of our trenches to the north of Steenstraete, the day was calm.

From Berlin comes only this statement:

Western theatre of war: There were no incidents of special importance.

CENSORS DIDN'T KNOW VERSES OF KIPLING

Did Not Recognize Browning's Lines Either, Commons Is Told.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The British censor's antipathy to poetry, as evidenced recently by deletions of lines of Kipling and Browning, when quoted in dispatches from the front, was gravely considered in the House of Commons this afternoon, when Ronald McNeill, author and Unionist Member of Parliament for the St. Augustine's Division of Kent, asked Sir John A. Simon, Secretary for Home Affairs, what poets could be quoted with immunity.

Sir John explained that the difficulty lay not in a military objection to poetry, but to the censors' failure to recognize the same. The censors' attention had been called to the matter, he added, with the suggestion that they cultivate the muse.

The quotation from Kipling referred to in the foregoing dispatch is cited in a recent issue of The London Daily News, received here:

"A correspondent," says The Daily News, "had the audacity to quote the not wholly unknown lines:

The tumult and the shouting dies,
The captains and the kings depart.

"The revised version of the second line after submission to the censor read as follows: 'The captains * * * depart.' One might not mention kings."

sides of the Morava River and continually pressing further into Serbian territory. Of General Kevess's Austro-Hungarians the western group has advanced on the heights of the Kolubara as far as the Turrija estuary. The eastern group has advanced fighting and crossed the Railja estuary.

The Bulgarian advance in the Timok Valley, between Zaecar and Knjazevac, has reached the west of Pirot, the principal works of which fortress are in the range of their guns.

One of their armies yesterday entered the Vardar Valley, in the region of Kumpovo.

Details of the rapid sweep westward of the Bulgarians is given in the latest official communication from Sofia, which is dated Oct. 19. It reads:

Our troops, advancing step by step in the Timok Valley, are now before Negotin, from which the Serbians, after they were defeated, fled in panic, leaving in our hands one officer and fifty men prisoners. One officer and 150 men were killed.

Near Pirot our troops after a stubborn battle took possession on Vidlic Planina of the Kolivabe Towers, which are very important strategical points.

Round about Vranya our troops are strongly established, having cleared the valley of the Morava for a distance of twenty one kilometers (about thirteen miles) to the north and northeast. Our booty at Vranya has not yet been determined, but it is known to comprise two million cartridges for Berdan rifles and a million francs' ($200,000) worth of tobacco. In the station of Bojanowitz we found about one million kilograms of hay. (A kilogram is 2.20 pounds.)

Our troops advancing by way of Egri Palanka attacked a strong Serbian position and repulsed the enemy, who is being rapidly pursued toward Kumanovo.

In the Valley of the Bregalnitza River our offensive is progressing with lightning-like rapidity. The whole of this valley and the plateau of Outsche Polje is in our hands, as well as the towns of Kotchana, Radulevatz, Tipkilissee, and Nikratovo. Our cavalry overtook the retreating Serbians near Kisseli and completely dispersed them. About 2,000 were captured and the others were only able to escape through the darkness.

The troops are being received with indescribable enthusiasm in the liberated regions.

King Ferdinand, acording to a dispatch from Sofia, has gone to the front, where, the correspondent, "he is assisted in the artillery battles before Statzin, the capture of which position opens the way to Kukmanovo."

Offers Are Allies' Last Word.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 21, (Dispatch to The London Daily News.)—No doubt is entertained here that a powerful effort is being made to arrive at a definite conclusion of the Greek situation one way or another.

The offers, which are believed to include a considerable prolongation of Greek territory along the Aegean Sea, together with Greek colonies in Asia Minor and Cyprus, represent the last word of the Allies.

The necessary guarantees of possession and against attack would be forthcoming as a matter of course, not to speak of financial help.

HANOTAUX DEMANDS ACTION.

Ex-Foreign Minister of France Assails Allies' Balkan Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Gabriel Hanotaux, ex-Foreign Minister, in a Figaro editorial this morning, despite the Figaro's general allegiance to the Government, criticises the conduct of affairs in the Near East since the outbreak of the war. After asserting that there is a national lack of confidence due to the Government's silence, which, he argues, ought to be broken by a direct pronouncement, continues:

"In diplomatic and military affairs our compliance seems to have been extreme toward Greece and Rumania at a moment when we might have obtained their support by further insistence, while toward Turkey we have been entirely too amiable. We actually lent Turkey $100,000,000 a few days before hostilities opened."

M. Hanotaux asserts that Rumania was ready to join the Allies on several occasions, but that the latter omitted to clinch the bargain. In January Greece also intended to intervene and had 150,000 soldiers ready. The Germans did not dare to show themselves in Athens; but the Allies let the chance slip. He concludes:

"The Balkan crisis has not caused any considerable change of our leaders, whom we are still willing to trust, but loyalty has reached the limit. We must not permit further mistakes. If our crisis has not changed our rulers, we hope it has taught them to change their methods."

KAISER'S THREE AIMS IN SERBIAN DRIVE

To Recruit Turks, Impress Moslems and Restore His Army's Prestige, It Is Said.

PARIS, Friday, Oct. 22.—The Petit Journal today publishes an interview with Dr. M. R. Vesnitch, Serbian Minister to France, who is quoted as saying that Emperor William desires to effect three things by an attack on Serbia. These things are:

First, a junction with Turkey in order to recruit soldiers from Asia Minor; next, to impress strongly the imagination of the Mussuimans, and, lastly, to restore the German Army's prestige lowered by the failure on the eastern and western war fronts.

The expedition of the Entente Allies, the Minister says, not only will succor Serbia but will settle the 500-year-old Eastern question.

POPULATION FLEES USKUB.

Retreat of Serb Army May Have Been Cut Off.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Oct. 21, (Dispatch to The London Morning Post.)—The news from Serbia is still fragmentary.

Railway communications are definitely interrupted as a consequence of the Bulgarian occupation of Vranya.

A Bulgarian force has reached Kumanovo, near Uskub. The latter town is rapidly emptying of its inhabitants, who are flying in expectation of its being occupied by the enemy. The Bulgarians also have taken Istip and Radovist, in Southern Serbia, and are advancing upon Veles. It looks as if the retreat of the main Serbian Army upon Monastir, on the Greek frontier, already had been cut off.

GERMAN JEWS AID TURKS.

Send Two Cars of Hospital Supplies to Constantinople.

BERLIN, Oct. 21, (By Wireless to Sayville, N. Y.)—Jewish parishes of Germany have sent to Constantinople two railroad cars filled with hospital supplies for the Turkish Army. Herr Nossig, the Jewish delegate, was received in audience by the Sultan, the heir to the throne, the Minister of War, Enver Pasha, and other representatives of the Turkish Government.

The Turkish officials expressed their satisfaction at the attitude of the Jewish population and gave assurances of the Government's friendship for this people. There was founded in Constantinople a Mosiem-israelite union for the promotion of solidarity between Jews and Turks. The Turkish, German, and Austro-Hungarian Governments have exchanged views with the purpose of reaching an agreement concerning the betterment of the position of the Jews in the East.

BELGRADE ATTACK SURPRISE TO SERBS

Crossing of Danube by Austrians Made at Most Difficult Places.

WAY BLASTED BY BIG GUNS

Fortifications and Their Artillery Smashed and Old Capital Burned.

WOMEN FOUGHT INVADERS

Joined with the Soldiers and Male Civilians in Desperate Battle Through the Streets.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[The Cologne Gazette Dispatches.]

BELGRADE, Oct. 19, (via Cologne and London, Oct. 21.)—The storming of Belgrade, details of which have now become known, was actually a complete surprise to the Serbians. When on Oct. 5 heavy artillery in Semlin commenced the bombardment the Serbians didn't even reply to the fire, but confined themselves to a lively play of their searchlights on the batteries on the northern shore of the Save.

In the course of the day an Austro-Hungarian reconnoissance established that the Serbian artillery was located at Kali Megdan and the heights of Wratzar and that the infantry occupied cleverly covered positions along the shore and railway. In order to baffle the enemy's artillery the Serbians about midnight extinguished all lights and Belgrade lay in complete darkness. The artillery ceased operations until the following morning.

Then the firing began from all sides and was carried on with such intensity that the old fortifications on Kali Megdan were reduced to scrap heaps. The entire neighborhood of the old city of Belgrade was burned and the entire population, excepting for those who took refuge in cellars in less exposed parts of the city, fled in panic to the hills south of Belgrade.

The Serbian artillery up to this time had remained inactive, except for some firing late in the afternoon at a German aeroplane, which they attacked with machine guns. The pilot of the aeroplane returned in safety with the report that there was great activity on the railroad to Pschilder Ralja.

At midnight began the transportation of the first detachment of infantry. Five battalions crossed, the artillery at Semlin supporting the surprise advance. Firing was begun from all the batteries, destroying not only the Serbian artillery but the Serbian searchlights. At the same time the heavy guns kept the heights of Wratzar, flanking the five battalions, and Banowo Brdo under severe fire.

By this time the Serbians saw very clearly what was going on. They had expected an attack from the so jealously protected Save, but Kevess's troops came from the Danube. General von Kevess, as in the case of his attack on the outposts at Ivangorod, had selected to their surprise exactly the most improbable and difficult points for his attacks.

At 12 o'clock the Serbian infantry and machine guns began to fire to prevent the crossing, but the artillery at Semlin silenced them. The troops in pontoons under heavy fire kept towning on and tugs continued to carry troops on rafts. [This crossing of a river so wide without bridges and on face of the foe was lauded by Field Marshal von Mackensen as a feat "unprecedented in the history of the world's wars."] The artillery on Kali Megdan now took a hand in the conflict, but was quickly forced to reduce its fire by the Semlin artillery.

The southern shore of the Danube was now occupied by the first Austro-Hungarian battalions. This was at dawn on Oct. 17. They occupied a narrow strip of shore, had the Danube behind them, the enemy in front, and were without the possibility of support or reinforcements from the other side. In front of the stone railway was an embankment behind which the Serbians lay. The Semlin artillery could only give them assistance by gradually partially checking the fire of the guns on Kali Megdan.

The attempt to cross the river was renewed at night. The same sapper regiments undertook it with the same fearlessness, though this time they advanced from Kozara Island on Kali Megdan and the heights of Wratzar, where the Serbian cannon and Armstrong guns took up the fight. The English and French guns were so mutilated by our shellfire as to be unrecognizable.

When the Second Infantry detachment was landed, however, the attack upon the Serbian position began with unexampled bitterness. None of the Serbians gave ground. They had to be fought down man for man with the bayonet. The assault proceeded over mines and in the face of hand grenades.

The northern part of the city was taken Oct. 8. In the northern section there was severe street fighting in which all the military forces and male civilians, and even women, participated. The fighting went on through the entire night on Kali Megdan. Meantime General Schikowitsch, who until this moment had remained in Belgrade with the main body of his force, withdrew.

As the morning of the 9th dawned the Third Battalion of the Forty-ninth Regiment also secured a foothold on Kali Megdan and hoisted the black and yellow flag.

The attack of the German troops met success in all their engagements. They came from the Save side over Zigeuner Island, crushing the Serbians' stubborn, determined defense. It was a wonderful thing to see how the German troops in spite of the cool, determined resistance of their enemies overcame the difficulties of the country through which they had to make the attack. They, like their Austrian comrades, were obliged to cross ground covered with water.

The attack from the West was made over ground where there was no possible protection, but the advance in spite of the unfavorable situation and in spite of the street figh

SAYS CONSCRIPTION MENACES WORKERS

British Labor Leader Here, Fears It Would Be a Strike-Breaking Weapon.

CALLS IT USELESS, ANYHOW

Since Britain, He Asserts, Now Has All but 300,000 Available Men Under Arms.

The fear that compulsory military service, once introduced, would mean that strikes and labor disturbances which are certain to follow the war would be quelled by calling strikers to the colors on pain of being shot is the reason why organized labor in England is unalterably opposed to conscription, according to Charles G. Ammon and Edwin Bevin, who arrived on the Orduna yesterday. They are on their way to San Francisco, where they will represent the British Trades Union League at the convention of the American Federation of Labor at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in November.

"Those who urge conscription the most strongly urge it for economic and not military reasons," said Mr. Ammon. "We believe that they are seeking conscription chiefly as a powerful weapon to be used in domestic affairs after the war. Labor has not forgotten how the strike of the French Government railroad employes was broken by the Briand Ministry by calling the men to the colors. They had to go or be shot as traitors. The pretext was not even put forward then that France was threatened by an enemy on the outside, but the men were called out to put a stop to internal troubles—that is, the strikers were called to arms to put down by force their own strike.

"Conscription would not be of any military value to England today. Men have been volunteering more rapidly than they can be equipped. Considering the various classes of labor who have to be kept at their jobs to keep the war going, England has now in her armies within 300,000 of her total strength in men between the ages of 19 and 30 years.

"While the military authorities have not made known the exact number of men in the field, we know by the proportions of men remaining in various occupations that there are about 4,000,000 men in the line of battle and in training. Conscription, we believe, could not raise more than 300,000. In giving these estimates, I am referring to Great Britain—that is, England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales.

"In spite of the reports that you get here, volunteering has been very heavy in Ireland. There are comparatively few able-bodied men of military age who would be willing to join the army by conscription. England cannot put her total war strength into the field. The mines of France and Belgium, for instance, are in the hands of Germany, and more workers are required in the English coal and iron mines in order to supply France. Part of England's output of munitions goes to Russia. England's shipping requires great numbers of her able-bodied men. Because of the necessity of keeping more men at work in the shops and mines, because of the economic and financial dependence of our allies on England, England is not in a position to put soldiers in the field in as high a proportion, although England will not fall very short."

Mr. Ammon was asked whether organized labor would still oppose conscription if England, after putting into the field all the strength which she could muster by the volunteer system, was still unable, with the help of her allies, to gain any important decision over Germany.

"If it ever comes to a case like that," he said, "I should say the game was up. To get more men for soldiers it would be necessary to cripple industries which are just as important for the conduct of the war as the armies themselves.

"Further than that, long before that time comes, most of the 300,000 who could now be raised by conscription would have volunteered, and the age limit would have been raised.

"Don't get the impression that organized labor is unpatriotic. The laborers have volunteered in unprecedented numbers. I am told that the volunteers who have joined the English Army have joined more rapidly and in greater numbers than they joined the armies of the United States during the civil war. The volunteer system has done with us almost as much as the conscript system could.

"The labor troubles in England have been much exaggerated. The English laboring man is ready to live or go down with his country, but he will not permit his rights or liberties to be taken away under any pretext which the war enables employers to put forward."

Mr. Bevin disagreed with the figures of his colleague, insisting that the number of the men in the English armies was nearer 5,000,000 than 4,000,000.

"Consider that we have armies in Flanders, in France, in Egypt, at the Dardanelles, along the Euphrates, in Serbia, and elsewhere in the Balkans, and great numbers of men in the increased navy—all these in actual service—and a million or more in training, and you will have a better idea of the part that England is playing in this war."

Mr. Bevin said that the cause of votes for women in England was sure to win after the war.

Mr. Bevin and Mr. Ammon will spend a few days in this city at the Hotel McAlpin and may address labor gatherings here.

DERBY SENDS LETTERS TO ALL ELIGIBLE MEN

British Recruiting Director Asks Them to Heed the Call to Enlist.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The enlistment of recruits under the plan of the Earl of Derby, the Director of Recruiting, cannot begin until early next week, it is officially announced, "as a royal warrant is necessary before the men could be passed to the reserve and classified in their proper groups."

Meanwhile, Lord Derby, with the concurrence of Premier Asquith and Earl Kitchener, the Secretary for War, has sent a letter to every man eligible for military service, who is not engaged in munition work, in which he says:

"Mr. Asquith has pledged the country to support our allies to the fullest extent of our power. It was a pledge given on behalf of the nation and indorsed by all parties. Every man of military age and fitness must equally bear his share in redeeming it.

"May I, as the Director General of Recruiting, beg you to consider your own position. Ask of yourself whether in a country fighting as ours is you are doing all you can for its safety, and whether the reason you have hitherto held valid as one for not enlisting holds good at the present crisis?

"Lord Kitchener wants every man he can get. Will you not be one of those that responds to your country's call?"

Lord Derby has also addressed an appeal to employers to facilitate the enlistment of their employes. This appeal concludes:

"While making a most earnest appeal to secure men under the voluntary system, I cannot help pointing out to employers what must be the alternative if I has been successfully operated.

"The story, so far as it relates to Honolulu, San Diego, Panama, and San Francisco, has been told, and now only Paris is left, and when Shreeve and Curtis reported from there the entire field mapped out for the first tests had been covered. I shall confine myself to the Paris part of the experiment.

"In the first place, I want to say that under normal conditions Paris will be easier to communicate with than is Honolulu, and yet the words flashed to Paris were just as plainly understood as those heard at Honolulu, which is 4,900 miles from Arlington and about 1,100 miles further than is Paris from that place. It was only through the courtesy of the French Government that we have been able to use the great Eiffel Tower station in the carrying out of our experiments and tests.

"It was a courtesy that was extraordinary when you realize the fact that France is at war, that her great military high-power stations are in constant operation, and that the finest of all these stations is perhaps the one in the Eiffel Tower. The French Government was able to allow us only a few moments at odd times, so the tests, for that reason alone, had to be exceedingly limited.

"Then again static conditions on the Atlantic were not good, and our reports show that great electrical disturbances have prevailed in France during much of the time set aside for experimentation. Had we been able to enjoy the use of the Eiffel Tower station for considerable periods at a time the Paris experiments would have been brought to a successful end many days ago.

Knew Voice 4,900 Miles Away.

"It was Tuesday night of last week when the first signal from Arlington was caught by Shreeve in Paris. Shreeve heard the 'Hello' of Webb at Arlington several times. Again, the following night, the words were heard, and last night the words were again heard, not only in Paris, but in Honolulu, by Lloyd Espenschied, who cabled today that he heard the 'Hello, Shreeve,' and the 'Good-bye, Shreeve,' uttered by Webb in Arlington so plainly that he was able to recognize the voice as that of Webb.

"The announcement of the success of the experiment was deferred through courtesy to the French Government, and it was not until today when further cable confirmation of the success that has attended our efforts made it possible for us to take the public into our confidence and tell what has taken place.

"Last night while Webb was talking to Shreeve he repeated the 'Hello' and 'Good-bye' several times, and they were heard each time in Paris and also in Honolulu.

"We have now heard from all our expeditions, and it is interesting to note that the circle of the area covered by these expeditions was about 10,000 miles in diameter. Never in history was such an expedition ever undertaken as was this one."

"How long was it before Webb in Arlington was able to establish communication with Shreeve in Paris, and what testing words were used?" Mr. Carty was asked.

"Owing to the very limited time at their disposal, it was necessary to cable the exact minute during which the Eiffel Tower plant was available," he replied, "and in those few seconds Webb did his talking. Signals had been previously arranged, first by numbers, and then followed by words. Shreeve was to cable what he got after each test—that is, provided he got anything—and, as you know, the signals were heard on three different nights. Owing to the fact that there is now in existence only one set of transmitting instruments, and that at Arlington, the talk of necessity, as was the case with San Diego, Honolulu, and the other places reached by the expedition, had to be one-sided."

Cable Told of Success.

It was explained that the cablegram from engineers in Paris arrived late in the afternoon announcing that the "hellos" and "good-byes" of Webb had been heard distinctly by Shreeve, Curtis, and French officers who were "listening in" during the experiment of Wednesday night.

"Do you think there is a possibility of the commercial use of the wireless telephone between New York and Paris or London?" Mr. Carty was asked.

"It is a pretty hazardous question to answer just at the present time," he said, "and I would not like to make a positive prediction, for I would have to make good. However, we have proved that the talking can be done and can be heard, and I am convinced that the day is coming when we can talk from New York to Tokio in fact, clear around the world. I would not like to say how soon this will be realized, for there is still a vast amount of hard work and experimentation ahead of us. You must keep in mind that what has already been accomplished represents hard work covering a period of several years."

"Well, is the hardest part of the work done yet?"

"I don't know, but I do know there is plenty ahead yet. It has been proved beyond all doubt that it can be done, and still it is all in the early stages. I could not tell you when we shall reach Tokio from New York, but I can assure you we shall some day. It is possible also to reach Paris from Honolulu by wireless from Honolulu to San Francisco, by wire from San Francisco to Arlington, and thence by wireless to the Eiffel Tower. We know how to talk around the world now, but when we shall be able to do so is another question the answer of which is not ready."

"Do you intend sending a transmission set to Paris for use in talking to this country?"

"I cannot answer that now. It would certainly be very desirable."

"Will the war delay the working out of the wireless telephony problem?"

"It certainly won't delay us on this side, although it may cause delay over there. But it can't go on forever."

"I want to say," added Mr. Carty, "that in my opinion the great value of the wireless telephone lies in its operation in conjunction with the land wire system."

Mr. Carty stated that the successful experiment on Wednesday night was the official test of the series. That was the one during which the American and French officers officially "listened in."

Lieut. Col. Reber, who witnessed the test at Arlington, issued the following statement:

The successful transatlantic radio telephonic experiments last night, while possessing great historic interest as the first authentic instance of the transmission of audible speech across the Atlantic Ocean, have less scientific significance than the recent radio telephonic transmission from Arlington to San Francisco and Honolulu. The distance covered was much less than that from Arlington to Honolulu, and the transmission, almost entirely over water, a much easier condition. Had it not been for war conditions the engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company would have talked to Paris from Arlington before they did to San Francisco and Honolulu. SAMUEL REBER.

Lieutenant Colonel, U. S. A.

Captain Bullard, who also was at Arlington, is the officer who seized the Telefunken station at Sayville for the Government, and since that time he has refused to discuss for publication anything that has to do with wireless.

Theodore N. Vail's Prediction.

The following dispatch was received last night from Theodore N. Vail, who was at the Hotel El Tovar, Grand Cañon, Arizona:

The talk from Washington this morning, heard both in Paris and Honolulu, is but an amplification of the talk previously had between New York and San Francisco, via Washington, which was heard at Honolulu and many other wireless stations.

It establishes as a fact that under favorable atmospheric and electrical conditions, with proper equipment, which the engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company have developed, we will be able to carry on conversation between New York and European points, as well as to the Western coast and points across the Pacific Ocean.

THEODORE N. VAIL.

Following the talk with New York Mr. Carty conversed over the long distance telephone with Thomas A. Edison, who was in San Francisco, where he was the guest at a dinner arranged to celebrate the thirty-sixth anniversary of his invention of the incandescent light. The anniversary was celebrated in Edison laboratories at Orange, N. J., as well as in San Francisco. During the dinners the transcontinental telephone communication was utilized to keep the diners on the two coasts in touch with each other.

Mr. Carty, at the request of the diners at both ends, "listened in" at Chicago. He congratulated Mr. Edison on his achievements, and the inventor said he had heard very plainly the music of phonograph records transmitted from Orange.

Mr. Carty announced to Mr. Edison the success of the Arlington-to-Paris experiments.

Mr. Edison could hardly believe that this had been accomplished. When Mr. Carty repeated his statement the inventor said:

"That is wonderful! That is wonderful!"

After Mr. Edison and Mr. Carty had exchanged greetings, William H. Meadowcroft of the Edison Company talked to his chief in San Francisco, and Charles Edison and Theodore Edison, sons of Thomas Edison, talked from Orange to their mother.

Among others who assisted in the transcontinental celebration of Edison Day were Carl H. Wilson, Vice President and General Manager of Thomas A. Edison, Inc.; Robert Morrison of the Edison Incandescent Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J.; Samuel Insull, President of the Edison Portland Cement Company; John W. Lieb, Vice President of the New York Edison Company, and N. C. Kingsbury, Vice President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

SEND GREETINGS TO EDISON.

Good Wishes Telephoned Across the Continent to Famous Inventor.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 21.—This was "Edison Day" at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, where Mr. and Mrs. Edison are guests, and to celebrate it here a telephone connection was made between Mr. Edison's home and the fair grounds. While the inventor, aided by a special sound amplifier, listened in San Francisco, a long message from Miller Reese Hutchinson, Superintendent of the Edison Works, was transmitted by Mr. Edison's own phonograph.

The message congratulated Mr. Edison on the thirty-sixth anniversary of his invention of the incandescent light, and told him that several hundred of his friends had gathered in his home to do him honor.

Mr. Edison's reply was received by his latest invention, the telescribe, and later every one in the room received a cylinder on which the words of the inventor had been transcribed automatically.

Among those who journeyed to Edison's home and found the streets about it lighted by 5,000 candle-power lights, while immense searchlights played on it from the roof of the laboratory were: Charles and Theodore Edison, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Edison, the last two being children by the inventor's first wife; John B. Miller, brother of Mrs. Edison; Charles Edison Poyer, a nephew of the inventor; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nicholl of New York, Mrs. Nicholl being a sister of Mrs. Edison; Dr. Peter Cooper Hewitt, Spencer Miller, and Dr. Elmer L. Sperry of the Naval Advisory Board, themselves inventors; Benjamin S. Whitehead of Newark; Captain George E. Burd, U. S. N.; Charles Wirt of Philadelphia; M. F. Moore of Rosell, an electrical expert; T. Comerford Martin and Edward H. Johnson of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Potter of East Orange, Dr. G. F. Kunz, Mr. and Mrs. George Merck of Llewellyn Park, Dr. and Mrs. John H. Bradshaw of Orange, and Mrs. William G. Bee, whose husband was at the other end of the wire with Mr. Edison.

Among the old associates of Mr. Edison were George F. Morrison of Harrison, general manager of the Edison Lamp Works; Dr. Frank A. Sprague of New York, Sidney B. Payne of the General Electric Company of Schenectady; J. C. Walker, lighting expert; Charles Bradley, William J. Hammer, Charles L. Clarke, John Ott of West Orange, who has been with Mr. Edison forty years, the longest term of any in his employ.

Others included Dr. Schuyler S. Wheeler, President of the Crocker Wheeler Company; W. H. Coads, also of that company; Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Hutchinson of Mobile, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Tebbetts, also of Mobile; the Rev. Dr. Stephen Joseph Herben, pastor of the Orange Methodist Church supported by the Edisons; Gerard S. Swope, Vice President of the Western Electric Company; Frederick A. Stevenson, general superintendent of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company; Henry F. Thurber, Vice President of the New York Telephone Company, and the corps of engineering experts at the Edison works.

The wire worked perfectly and the words of all those who spoke were heard distinctly. Mr. Edison's voice preserved all its characteristics in the transmission over 3,400 miles, and those who knew him instantly recognized the speaker. Mr. Edison, in turn, assured those in his laboratory that he heard perfectly. Mr. Edison then said:

"It may seem strange to those who know of my work on the telephone carbon transmitter that this is the first time I have ever carried on a conversation over the telephone. Trying to talk 3,400 miles on my first attempt at a telephone conversation seems to be a pretty big undertaking, but the engineers of the Bell System have made it easier to talk 3,400 miles than it used to be to talk thirty-four miles. In my research work I have spent a great many years listening to the phonograph, but it gives me a singular sensation to sit here in California and hear the phonograph over the telephone all the way from Orange, N. J. I heard the record of Hutch's talk very plainly. I should now like to hear a musical record."

"That's fine," he said, after a record had been played. He was asked to play the record back from San Francisco and a machine at that end was started and the West Orange audience heard the music.

After several had spoken to Mr. Edison he was compelled to leave to attend a dinner in his honor at the exposition. Earlier he had had a private conversation with his son Charles.

STEFANSSON WRITES OF NEW POLAR FINDS

Oil-Smeared Letters Add to Knowledge of Lands in the Region of Beaufort Sea.

TELLS OF ANCIENT VILLAGE

Expects to Penetrate Unexplored Region Between Alaska and North Pole Next Summer.

Two letters from Vilhjalmur Stefansson, commanding the Canadian Arctic Expedition, just received in this city by a man associated with a scientific society, give many additional details of the explorer's work which he recently described for THE TIMES in a message from Herschel Island.

The letters emphasize the explorer's success in his endeavors to add what little is known of the region about Beaufort Sea away from the coast and of the lands east of it. Mr. Stefansson gives many new facts about Bank's Island and supplies details of his soundings in Beaufort Sea, the first knowledge of whose depths was told in the explorer's earlier report.

The first letter was written at Mr. Stefansson's Winter quarters near Cape Kellett, Banks Island, on Feb. 12, and the second on the west coast of Melville Island, near north latitude 75 degrees 50 minutes, on July 4, while the explorer was on his way back from a sled trip that began at Cape Kellett shortly after the first letter was written. Mr. Stefansson's narrative in THE TIMES from Herschel Island was written on Aug. 22 and was received here on Sept. 17.

Concerning Banks Island Mr. Stefansson says in his first letter:

We saw no rock in situ in Banks Island north of 72 degrees. The west coast is deeply embayed with many estuaries. Considering this fact, together with the terraces shown by our soundings, this is likely to be a sinking coast. South of Cape Kellett the land becomes higher. There are no bays or harbors, and it may be that south of Cape Kellett the land is rising.

I have as yet seen no certain cases of rejuvenated valleys or raised beaches. In my opinion the mountains we crossed in latitude 71 degrees 40 minutes, approximately, going east to De Salis Bay, Banks Island, are 4,000 feet high at least. The rolling hills anywhere north of Cape Kellett rise from 500 to 700, or possibly 800, feet. I think that near 74 degrees north they may reach 1,000 feet near the middle of the island. The land appears glaciated, but there are no glaciers now, though many snowbanks in shaded places probably persist through most, if not all, of the Summers.

The musk oxen of McClure's time are probably extinct; caribou are more scarce here than about Cape Rollinson, (on the south coast of Banks Island,) or in any place I have seen east of the Colville River, (Alaska.) Bears are plentiful in the Fall in the southern part of the island. Apparently there are not many seals near the parts of the coast where we have been.

We found but one ancient village ruin in our travels on Banks Island. That was at Cape Kellett. North of there the traces seem to be of transient Eskimo, and probably less than a century old. There are no Eskimo on the island this Winter, though I was informed three years ago that the Prince Albert Sound Eskimo spend their Winters near De Salis Bay.

Mr. Stefansson, in his second letter, writes of the land discovered by his party. He says:

As far as we could tell, the land we later found north of Prince Patrick Island has a coastline extending in a northwesterly direction; but from the facts noted as to currents caused by winds I would be more inclined to expect a limited westward extension of that land and a strait separating it from another land of considerable extent lying to the westward. However, the land we found appears to be of considerable size—from an elevation of about 1,500 feet, twenty miles inland, I saw large hills or mountains that must have been over fifty miles away—probably much further—in all directions from north by east to east by north.

"One of the most, if not the most, interesting thing to speculate on of everything we learned on the ice," the explorer wrote in the letter from the coast of Melville Island, "is that a violent southerly gale caused a strong current to run north, but did not cause the ice to move further north appreciably with the current—just the result one would expect if there were to the north a narrow strait, but fairly deep, so that water could run through, but heavy ice would jam."

Of his soundings in Beaufort Sea the explorer gives new details in both of the letters. He writes:

Off the mainland of Alaska we found the continental shelf had a steep slope, and the edge of the shelf was about fifty miles off shore in 140 degrees west longitude. In latitude 71 degrees north we found the edge of the shelf about the same distance from Banks Island, but the slope to oceanic depths was much more gradual and showed three terraces between the depths of 700 and 100 meters. The shelf at a depth of 100 meters appeared to have hills (or channels) differing by as much as 10 meters from the general level. With depths of 668 meters to 100 meters toward Banks Island we took soundings at intervals of a half to five miles. In every case we kept bottom samples.

"A thing which cannot be too much regretted," the second letter says, "is that we had to take our many soundings in deep water, with only some 800 meters of wire, but that was all we had. Still, we have determined the edge of the continental shelf in two places in the northwestern segment of our journey—to the east of Prince Patrick Island, and northwest of Banks Island. Drifting about as we did, we got many soundings on the shelf west of Prince Patrick Island, and they were pretty well located by almost daily sextant observations.

"My main reason for not staying longer on our new land this Summer was that I wanted to get back to cure skins for next year's clothing and to put up dried meat for man and dog food on the north coast of Banks Island, to use in case the North Star should not get here."

Mr. Stefansson, in his second letter, referred to the help received by the strong current west of Prince Patrick Island. He writes:

We had expected this current on account of our encounter with it west of Banks Island last year, but we had to face it, and, on account of our too southerly base, the weather was too warm when we got into the current area to give us chance of stemming it. Ice did not form quickly enough on the numerous leads formed by the motion of the ice. The current that carried us back in May would only have lessened our forward speed in March.

Mr. Stefansson's messages were greasy with seal oil and smudged with smoke. Some parts of them are barely legible, particularly sections in which figures occur frequently.

Mr. Stefansson is wintering at Banks Island, where he has a large power schooner and a smaller one. During the Winter he expects to explore the new territory found by him, and next Summer he will try to penetrate the region between Alaska and the north pole, where no ship has ever gone.

TO MAKE BELGIANS PAY FOR AEROPLANE RAIDS

Germans Will Hold Them Responsible for Damage Done in Belgian Cities.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21, (via London.)—German authorities in Belgium have announced, says the Echo de Belge, that on the occasion of any Anglo-French aeroplane raids on Belgian cities under German occupation the inhabitants of the city will be held responsible. If bombs fall on the barracks the soldiers, according to the announcement, will be billeted in civilian homes, and a fine corresponding to the damage will be imposed upon the city.

Advices from Paris last July said the German officials in Belgium had imposed a fine of $1,000,000 on the City of Brussels in consequence of the destruction of a Zeppelin dirigible balloon in sheds at Evere, to the north of Brussels, by aviators of the Allies.

DUMBA AT THE HAGUE.

Ex-Ambassador Denies Predicting War with America.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The arrival at The Hague of Dr. Dumba, lately recalled as Austrian Ambassador to the United States, is reported in a dispatch from the correspondent there of Reuter's Telegram Company. Dr. Dumba was escorted by the Austrian Minister, who met him at Rotterdam.

Dr. Dumba issued a brief statement to the press saying that he intended to make a short stay in Holland and would abstain from any political conversations. He called the statement attributed to him that "Austria-Hungary should declare war on the United States" an absurd invention.

ACCUSE ARMENIANS OF WRONGING TURKS

Ottoman Authorities Give Out Formal Charges of Widespread Outrages

ALONG CAUCASIAN FRONTIER

Russian Troops Linked with Greek and Armenian Civilians as the Perpetrators.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Following world-wide accusations of barbarous treatment of the Christians of Armenia, the Turkish Government has filed countercharges here, in which it is alleged that barbarous acts have been committed on Moslems along the Caucasian frontier by Russian troops, aided by members of the Greek and Armenian population of that region.

The countercharge was sent by the Turkish Government to its Embassy at Washington. It took the form of a communication which was delivered to Secretary Lansing today by Abdul Hak Hussein Bey, First Secretary and Chargé d'Affaires of the Embassy since Oct. 4, 1914, when he took charge upon the return of Ambassador A. Rustem Bey to Turkey.

After delivering the communication to Secretary Lansing, the Turkish Chargé handed a summary of it to the press.

Secretary Lansing refrained from commenting upon the Turkish Government's communication, beyond saying that he had not had opportunity to examine the document. It is not expected that the State Department will take any action on the communication at this time, but will file it for future reference.

The summary given out by Hussein Bey says:

"The Ottoman Embassy has just received an official report from the General Ottoman headquarters concerning the barbarous acts perpetrated by the Russian troops, assisted by the Greek and Armenian populations, against the Moslems dwelling along the frontier of the Caucasus. These atrocious acts, committed under the eyes of the Russian authorities in the districts of Tavashguerd, Pensguerd, Olti, and Ardanuche have been well ascertained after a careful inquiry by Seifullah Effendi, a member of the Ottoman Parliament from Erzerum. Some of the most typical cases are related below, with omission however of certain details which could not be printed on account of their indescribable horror.

"A band of Russians and Armenians repaired to the house of Murad Bey, a wealthy man of the village of Kirechud, well known for his charitable acts toward all the inhabitants, without distinction of race or creed, with the obvious intention of assaulting his old wife. Murad Bey realized the impossibility of rescuing her from dishonor, killed her with his own gun, and killed himself later murdered by the aggressors. The fury of the latter was then directed against the daughter-in-law of Murad Bey, whose son, Sulleyman, following the example of his father, was also murdered.

"The offenders went afterward to the village of Izensur, and in order to prevent the repetition of similar acts, began by shutting up in a barn the male part of the population and after that assaulted the women. The Moslems of the surrounding villages, being forewarned of the danger, rushed to the spot, but too late to rescue the women, among whom two girls 13 years of age died from disgrace and torture.

"Moslem women who took refuge in the village of Parishur were assaulted by Greeks and Armenians, and some of them had to submit to the worst treatment. Most of them, however, preferring death to disgrace, threw themselves from a hill 200 meters high into a rocky precipice, where they all perished.

"A great number of Moslem women of Ardanuche who had fled to Tavasguerd had to endure the same fate. Whilst they had been left half dead, their Russian, Armenian, and Greek aggressors carried the cruelty to the point of piercing with their bayonets the cheeks of their babies in order to prevent them from taking the milk of their mothers. In this wise, mothers and children perished by a slow and terrible death under the eyes of their persecutors.

"The wife and the daughter of Ibrahim Alias Ibo were carried away by Greeks and Armenians from the village of Medjalar to the village of Pertek in the district of Olti, and there they were assaulted. Two Mussulmans, rushing to their aid, rescued the young girl. The mother died after having received twenty-one wounds. The young girl lost her life two months later as a consequence of the shock she had experienced.

"Armenians and Greeks serving as guides to the troops, in the attack on the village of Erghenes, have assaulted with unheard of brutality the wife of Imam Oglou Osman Agha, under the eyes of her helpless husband. The latter was afterward murdered and his body cut to pieces.

"Zebra, wife of Mouhib Oglou Mohammed Ali, equally from the village of Erghenes, 18 years old, was tortured by the same malefactors during three days, after which she was killed and her body horribly mutilated.

"The Armenians dwelling in the village of Dauzote beheaded a certain man, Cherif by name, and four other Mussulmans, who had taken refuge in that village.

"A Greek, named Yani, murdered in the middle of the street, and before a numerous assemblage, Garib Agha of the village of Karnavas, in the district of Tavasguerd, who had fled to the village of Azort, in the district of Tortum. The Armenians who were witnessing this scene joined Yani at once and dragged twenty-five Mussulmans out from the houses where they had concealed themselves. Driven into the street, these unfortunate people were called together and all of them killed, after having experienced horrible tortures recalling the Middle Ages. Their bodies cut to pieces, were then exhibited on every street corner.

"The same murderers proceeded to the village of Djihan, and there they attacked five aged men, 70 years old. These were first covered with wounds, and afterward, being smeared over with kerosene, were burned alive.

"These few instances could be multiplied, but they are sufficient to show the barbarous spirit with which the Russians, aided by Armenians and Greeks, are carrying on the war in the Caucasus."

ONLY 200,000 ARMENIANS NOW LEFT IN TURKEY

More Than 1,000,000 Killed, Enslaved or Exiled, Says a Tiflis Paper.

TIFLIS, Transcaucasia, Oct. 19 (via Petrograd and London, Oct. 21).—The estimate is made by the Armenian newspaper Mshak that of the 1,200,000 Armenian inhabitants of Turkey before the war there remain not more than 200,000. This residue, the Mshak says, may disappear before the end of the war, on account of the Turkish policy of extermination.

The figures of the Mshak are based on the estimate of the Armenian Patriarch at Constantinople that 850,000 Armenians have been killed or enslaved by the Turks, in addition to which 200,000 Armenians are believed to have fled to Russia.

YALE HEAD ADVOCATES CREDIT FOR ARMY WORK

Hedley Would Count Students' Military Training in Granting Degrees.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—President Arthur T. Hadley of Yale is the first college President formally to commit himself not only to military camps for students as a regular feature of college life, but to recommend that the work done in them and in college, the latter consisting of lectures on military duties, be made a part of the studies for which a college degree is given. At the same time President Hadley voices his opposition to any plan to make such military training compulsory for the students.

Dr. Hadley's annual report, issued today, refers to the subject, in part, as follows:

"This system has now been in operation for three years. The course of instruction has been carefully planned by General Wood and an able body of younger officers, and I have no hesitation in saying that, wholly aside from their military value in preparing a reserve of partly trained officers for possible service in the event of war, the camps have an educational value that much more than justifies their organization and their maintenance.

BALLIN APOLOGIZES FOR GERMAN FLEET

Because It Can't Go Out, He Thinks British Should See Their Duty and Come In.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21.—Albert Ballin, Director General of the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, in an address to the Hamburg Shipowners' Association, today contended that it was impossible for the German Fleet to go out and seek the British Fleet in its hiding place.

He said the numerically superior English Fleet must rather consider it a self-evident task to seek out its enemy in an operation in a zone to which a not very friendly fate had confined him.

WIRELESS BY PHONE ACROSS THE OCEAN

Mare Island, and Honolulu, but also two engineers, H. E. Shreeve and A. M. Curtis, were sent to Paris. Through the courtesy of the French Government, limited facilities for listening at the Eiffel Tower station were placed at their disposal.

Full appreciation of the interest and extreme courtesy of the French Government can be understood when the great value of the Eiffel Tower station for military purposes is remembered. Due to the military necessities, the amount of time available for the wireless telephone experiments was so limited as to constitute a serious handicap to a speedy completion of the work. Added to this was the handicap resulting from the fact that all regular communication between Mr. Shreeve and the engineers in America had to be by cable and was subject to long delays.

Notwithstanding the difficulties of communication, the limited amount of time available for receiving, and despite heavy interference from high-power stations in the neighborhood and from static disturbances, speech was successfully transmitted from Arlington to Paris over a week ago, and has been repeated on several occasions since. Officers of the French Government have listened to and verified the results obtained by Mr. Shreeve and Mr. Curtis. Although Mr. Carty had received full cable reports of all of the results obtained in Paris, no announcement has heretofore been made out of courtesy to the French Government.

Heard in Honolulu Also.

In a cable received by Mr. Carty today concerning the results of tests made early this morning, Mr. Shreeve reported speech received by him and the time of its reception. The matter received at Paris was that sent from Arlington, where R. A. Heising, B. B. Webb and other telephone engineers were manipulating the apparatus at the transmitting station. Mr. Webb did the talking throughout the experiments this morning.

Simultaneously with the reception at Paris, speech sent out from Arlington was received on the wireless antennae at the Western Electric Laboratories in New York and at the temporary station of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company at the Pearl Harbor Navy Yard, Honolulu. Mr. Espenschied at Honolulu reported that he heard the conversation throughout the entire schedule and that Mr. Webb's voice was easily recognized.

After the announcement was issued Mr. Carty, who was in Chicago, was called up on the long distance telephone and asked to tell the story of the achievement.

"Tell us all about the Paris achievement," said an officer of the company in New York.

"Is anybody 'listening in'?" Mr. Carty asked, quickly guessing that newspaper men also were at the New York end of the line.

Mr. Carty laughed when told he had guessed rightly, and after a little persuasion told the story of the tests.

Carty Describes Tests.

"In June last, as you may or may not know," he said, "we sent out several expeditions to test the possibilities of wireless telephony over great distances. One of these expeditions went to Panama, another to San Diego, still another to San Francisco, one to Honolulu, and the last to Paris. All have now been heard from, and to each of the places named wireless telephony has been successfully operated.

"The story, so far as it relates to Honolulu, San Diego, Panama, and San Francisco, has been told, and now only Paris is left, and when Shreeve and Curtis reported from there the entire field mapped out for the first tests had been covered. I shall confine myself to the Paris part of the experiment.

WOMAN AUTHOR SEES FRENCH BATTLE FRONT

Marika Stjernstedt Says the Soul of an Old, Soldierly People Is Awakened.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—"Soldiers who had not seen a woman for months crowded around me to pay their respects," said Marika Stjernstedt, a Swedish author, and the first woman to visit the French battlefront by invitation of the General Staff, on returning to Paris today. "Their bearing proved," she added, "that they have not lost a particle of the traditional French polish in the months of burrowing in the earth far from refining influences. Their mothers, wives, sisters, and sweethearts may be proud of them."

Miss Stjernstedt is not only the first woman to succeed where so many men have failed, but she is likely to be the last of her sex to enjoy the privilege of being specially conducted to the front. The French General Staff is opposed to the presence of women in the zone of operations.

"The party will be within range of the enemy's artillery," objected the official to whom she appealed. "Won't you be afraid?"

"What I fear most," Miss Stjernstedt replied, "is that I shall not be permitted to get close enough to show you I am not afraid."

The party approached close enough to inspect thoroughly the field of the recent operations in Champagne, and what Miss Stjernstedt saw of it, she said, surpassed all imagination. She added:

"I went so rapidly from one strong impression to another that it is difficult to recall them all. I traversed miles of devastation over ground every rod of which had been heaved up, and where remained not a sign of vegetation. There, where should have been shrubs and trees or crops and flowers, an arm stuck out here and a leg there, and all was pervaded by an odor that oppressed.

"An undefinable sadness in the presence of so many evidences of death diminishes somewhat as you get in contact with the indifference of those who have lived amid it for more than a year. Perhaps the strongest impression came from the sight of two inert bodies, that we took up from the ground, being carried back from the lines. They were two heroes who had made the supreme sacrifice. Nothing more could be done for them.

"Every member of the visiting party was moved, but for all you could see it was to the stretcher bearers and to the soldiers who saw them pass, nothing but a daily incident. They carried them back from the lines to the little cemeteries that can be seen everywhere on approaching the front. A bottle stuck into each mound contains the individual history of each actor in the tragedy for his loved ones to learn after it is all over.

"The din becomes so soon familiar that one pays little attention to the field batteries firing close at hand, though the three-inch guns make a noise quite in proportion to their deadly execution.

"Though we were in range of heavy and light German guns, none of the big shells, called 'marmites,' came our way. The officer conducting the party said jokingly he would be glad if one exploded near enough, so he could see how I would take it, but we were not to have that luck.

"The soldiers I saw while passing through Germany on my way to France cannot stand comparison with the men I saw in Champagne. The latter are admirable in quality and in spirit. They are not only the same polished, polite Frenchmen of times of peace, but their eyes flash an intelligence that prevails over the simple discipline. Any French soldier can tell you what he is doing and why he is doing it. There is no roughness about him, but his eyes are full of energy.

WILSON CONFIDENT DEFENSE WILL WIN

Tells Conference Committee He Is Certain the People Want Country Adequately Prepared.

DEVISING REVENUE PLANS

Kern Suggests Sugar Duty and More Stamp Taxes—Experts' View of Proposed Navy.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Confidence that the country would approve of the Administration's plans for strengthening the national defenses was expressed by President Wilson today in addressing a committee from the Conference on National Defense, which called at the White House. The committee presented resolutions urging "adequate and quick" increases in every department of the national defenses.

The President said he was certain the people of the nation wanted the country adequately prepared for defense, although there might be some differences of opinion as to just how to go about the strengthening of the army and navy.

The Conference Committee included representatives of the National Defense League, the National Rifle Association, the Grand Army of the Republic, the Army and Navy Union, the Southern Commercial Congress, the Union Veteran Legion, the United Spanish War Veterans, and the Navy League. Mr. Wilson was told that his callers reflected the views of practically every veteran and patriotic organization in the country, having several million members.

Senator Kern, Democratic leader of the Senate, will discuss national defense tomorrow with President Wilson. He returned today from a visit to the Middle West, and said he thought the defense program could be put through Congress without much difficulty. Regarding ways of raising additional revenues to pay for strengthening the army and navy, Senator Kern said he believed the free sugar provision of the Tariff law, which would become effective next May, would be repealed and that there might be some changes in the Emergency Stamp Tax act.

Strength of New Navy.

What the United States Navy would be in 1925 if Congress approved the defense program was described today by naval experts. The strength of the navy will be:

Battleships of the first line, twenty-seven. These ships would all carry more than eight big guns each, most of them mounting twelve 14-inch 50-calibre rifles, which are believed by the Ordnance Bureau to be the equal or superior of any navy gun now in use.

Battleships of the second line, fourteen. These ships all carry four heavy guns each, and some of them have a speed of nearly twenty knots.

Reserve battleships, nine. These ships are all now in commission or in reserve. The oldest ship is the Iowa, commissioned in 1897. Three older ships, the Oregon, Massachusetts, and Indiana, will have gone to the scrap heap within two or three years.

Battle cruisers, 6. They will mount eight 14-inch 50-calibre rifles and have a speed of 35 knots an hour.

Scout cruisers, 13. This includes the Salem, Chester, and Birmingham, the only scouting ships now in the navy.

Destroyers, 96. This figure allows for the retirement of 16 destroyers built before 1898 and does not take into account 19 torpedo boats, many of which are still in service.

Fleet submarines, 18. The Schley, first vessel of this type designed for any navy, will be launched in a few months. She will make 20 knots on the surface, while the others will make 25 knots or more.

Old Submarines Useful.

Coast defense submarines, 149. This figures all submersibles of this type now built or building and allows for the retirement of nine boats of the A and P classes which are now doing duty in the Philippines and at Panama and giving satisfactory service, despite the fact that they are 12 years old. Navy officers believe most of them will still be available for harbor defense in eight years' time.

Gunboats, 31. These vessels are for river and shallow harbor use. The new program will add only two vessels of this type.

In addition to the foregoing there are ten armored cruisers, five protected cruisers, four second-class cruisers, twelve third-class cruisers, and nine coast defense monitors available for reserve fleet duty. It is not intended to build any more ships of these types.

The navy estimates will include $1,000,000 for a start on the $5,000,000 laboratory for the Navy Advisory Board hearded by Thomas A. Edison.

The War Department estimates will include an appropriation for fortifications at San Pedro, Cal., where sixteen-inch guns will be mounted. Additions to the San Francisco defenses with sixteen-inch guns to command the harbor and a wide reach of the coastline to the north and south also will be proposed to Congress. Other defenses of the same character will be proposed for Puget Sound.

Friends Seek Candidate Daubert.

The Democrats of the Eighteenth Assembly District in Brooklyn are thinking of offering a reward for information as to the whereabouts of their candidate for Alderman. The missing nominee is "Jake" Daubert, first baseman of the Brooklyn National League Baseball Club, and the idol of the local fans. It was said yestefday that he was somewhere out West on business. The Democrats of the district fear that "Jake" thinks that because he won in the primaries he is already an Alderman and is busy arranging his affairs preparatory to taking his seat in the board.

Our Peace, Prosperity and Helpfulness, President's Theme in Thanksgiving Proclamation

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—President Wilson in a proclamation today, designating Thursday, Nov. 25, as Thanksgiving Day, called attention to the fact that the United States had been at peace while most of Europe had been at war. The proclamation reads:

It has long been the honored custom of our people to turn in the fruitful Autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a nation. The year that is now drawing to a close since we last observed our day of national thanksgiving has been, while a year of discipline because of the mighty forces of war and of changes which have disturbed the world, also a year of special blessing for us.

Another year of peace has been vouchsafed us; another year in which not only to take thought of our duty to ourselves and to mankind but also to adjust ourselves to the many responsibilities thrust upon us by a war which has involved almost the whole of Europe. We have been able to assert our rights and the rights of mankind without breach of friendship with the great nations with whom we have had to deal, and while we have asserted rights we have been able also to perform duties and exercise privileges of succor and helpfulness which should serve to demonstrate our desire to make the offices of friendship the means of truly disinterested and unselfish service.

Our ability to serve all who could avail themselves of our services in the midst of crises has been increased, by a gracious Providence, by more and more abundant crops; our ample financial resources have enabled us to steady the markets of the world and facilitate necessary movement of commerce which the war might otherwise have rendered impossible; and our people have come more and more to a sober realization of the part they have been called upon to play in a time when all the world is shaken by unparalleled distresses and disasters.

The extraordinary circumstances of such a time have done much to quicken our national consciousness and deepen and confirm our confidence in the principles of peace and freedom by which we have always sought to be guided. Out of darkness and perplexities have come firmer counsels of policy and clearer perceptions of the essential welfare of the nation. We have prospered while other peoples were at war, but our prosperity has been vouchsafed us, we believe, only that we might the better perform the functions which war rendered it impossible for them to perform.

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the twenty-fifth of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and invite the people throughout the land to cease from their wonted occupations and in their several homes and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the City of Washington this twentieth day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, and of the independence of the United States of America one hundred and fortieth.

WOODROW WILSON.

aroused by the word "persuade," and he wanted to know how it was managed.

"Well," Mr. Mellen said, "I told him all the things I thought were likely to happen if he did, and he took them under consideration and decided not to do it."

Mr. Lindabury protested for the third time, but the court permitted Mr. Mellen to go on, and he said:

How He Beat New Haven.

"I told Mr. Clark I had prepared a train from Boston to Allen's Point to connect with the steamer City of Worcester for New York, and that I had an advertisement in my pocket which had been set up, ready to go into the evening newspapers, announcing that the fare between Boston and New York would be $1.

"Mr. Clark looked at my papers and wanted to know if it was 'Honest Injun,' and I told him it was, and I hoped he would reconsider. He said he had to go to New York and he says, 'Tuttle, you fix this up with Mr. Mellen.' And he fixed it up with Mr. Mellen."

Mr. Lindabury protested once more against the way in which the Government was jumping into the middle of a "cut-throat" war, in which things were done of the most strenuous character "without showing the genesis of it," but he could not prevent Mr. Swacker from bringing out the sequel to Mr. Mellen's threat. His discussion with the New Haven officials occurred in June, 1892, and in November of the same year he became Second Vice President of that company.

"What duties were assigned to you at the start?" Mr. Swacker wanted to know.

"Well I was appointed Second Vice President in charge of traffic."

"Did you have anything to do in that respect?"

"Not enough so I could remember it."

"Did you have any conversation with Mr. Clark about it?"

"I complained I was apparently doing nothing. I didn't see how I was earning my salary and was told I ought to be pretty well satisfied to be able to draw my salary and if the company was satisfied they didn't see why I should complain."

"Did he say anything about why he employed you?"

"He said I made too much of a nuisance of myself on the New England."

New Haven Gets Housatonic.

Mr. Swacker then took up the traffic arrangements between the New York and New England and the Housatonic on New York business. There was a through passenger train between Brooklyn and Boston by ferry from Wilson's Point to Oyster Bay, and Mr. Mellen cordially denounced it as a nuisance, as it only carried a passenger or two. Then there was a freight business which was obtained, the witness said, only by urgent solicitation.

Then the Housatonic was leased to the New Haven and soon after that the New England Terminal Company, which had handled the traffic between the Housatonic and the New York & New England, was discontinued, all its business going to the New Haven.

Mr. Swacker wanted to know this discontinuance of the Terminal Company and brought out that the New Haven was not disposed to take over the share of the Terminal Company's expenses, which the Housatonic had borne and that there had been some difficulty in its getting supplies. It was sold under foreclosure. Mr. Lindabury objected to the Government's line of questioning, saying if the New Haven had bought up the Terminal Company at foreclosure that was all there was to it.

Mr. Swacker suggested that there was an understanding connected with the foreclosure, and that the late J. P. Morgan was connected with it, but here Mr. Mellen's memory failed him, and he could not assist the Government as to the nature of the alleged bargain. He had an idea, he said, that Mr. Morgan was one of those who bought in the Terminal Company, but he could only say that he had that information "from the air."

In the morning Mr. Mellen had told how the cities of New England were served by the railroads and steamboat lines from 1890. Mr. Swacker showed by his questioning what steamboat lines in 1890 were of importance to the New England trade. There was the Metropolitan Steamship Line, which ran 'round Cape Cod and handled only freight. Then there was the Windsor Line, the Boston and Philadelphia Steamship Company, which also was concerned only with freight, and the Merchants and Miners Line, which carried passengers as well as freight between Boston and Providence to Baltimore, Norfolk, Newport News, and Savannah. Moreover, there were other steamboat lines which ran from Boston to the northeast along the Maine coast.

Having thus sought to establish the amount of competition in the coasting business Mr. Swacker proceeded to ask Mr. Mellen about the railroads which served the principal New England points in 1890 before the era of alleged monopolization by the New Haven. Boston, said Mr. Mellen, was served by the Boston & Maine, the Fitchburg, the Boston & Albany, the New York & New England, the Old Colony, and the Metropolitan, the Windsor, and the Merchants and Miners' Steamship Lines. Providence had connections by the Windsor line, the Merchants and Miners, the Providence and Stonington Steamship Company, by water and by rail by the New York & Providence & Boston, and the New York & New England, which connected with the Boston & Albany.

New London was reached, said Mr. Mellen, by the New York & New England and by boat from New York. The Grand Trunk of Canada also served it through the Central Vermont, as well as the New London Northern, the New Haven, and the New York, Providence & Boston.

Only Mosquitos at Saybrook.

Mr. Swacker wanted to know about Saybrook, but Mr. Mellen cut him off.

"Nothing but mosquitos there," he asserted, but finally admitted that it had a steamboat line, the Hartford and New York Transportation Company, which operated two steamboats.

Although Mr. Mellen knew what railroads and steamboat lines ran from the different New England cities, he was not ready to say how far they enabled goods to be carried from them to other points in the United States. He pointed out, however, that the Merchants and Miners' Line and the Windsor Steamboat Line brought to New England its raw material, such as cotton and lumber, and carried away its manufactured products, much as the railways did.

As Mr. Swacker followed up this line of questioning, he obtained from Mr. Mellen an opinion concerning the New York & New England, the absorption of which is one of the principal points in the Government's case, which seemed to add considerable comfort to the defense. He spoke of the New York & New England almost slightingly as necessarily dependent on the New Haven.

"The New York & New England in 1890 was an adjunct or an extension of the New Haven, practically nothing else," said Mr. Mellen.

"Had it no traffic independent of the New Haven on the Hudson?"

"It did. But its profitable business was that done by way of the New Haven. The New Haven could have lived without the New England, but the New England could not have lived without the New Haven."

"What trunk lines were radiating from New York in 1890?" asked Mr. Swacker.

Sees Plenty of Competition.

"Substantially what they are now—the Lackawanna, Erie, Lehigh Valley, Jersey Central, Pennsylvania, and New York Central. Further up the Hudson at Mechanicsville, the Boston & Maine connected with the Delaware & Hudson, and at Rotterdam Junction with the West Shore, and at Troy with the Delaware & Hudson and the New York Central."

Mr. Swacker then named six or seven different steamboat lines which ran from New England points to New York in order to show that there was plenty of competition twenty-five years ago for New England business, and in a discussion that followed it was brought out that when the freight was too bulky to come by steamboat it could reach New England by the connections across the Hudson as an alternative route to the New Haven Railroad.

At the beginning of the afternoon session Mr. Lindabury presented to Judge Hunt Charles F. Choate of the Boston bar, who has been associated with the defense.

Then as Mr. Swacker presented in evidence the famous tripartite agreement which regulates the use of the Grand Central Terminal by the New York Central and the New Haven, and after objections from the defense Mr. Swacker read to the jury certain sections from it. It was followed by a number of extracts from the minutes of the Directors' meetings of the New Haven. This brought forth a long legal argument from the defense, but Judge Hunt overruled them and the documents were admitted.

This led to the examination of Mr. Mellen with regard to the relations between the New Haven and the Boston & Maine, but the Government had only just begun when an adjournment was taken until this morning at 10:30 o'clock.

REGENTS TO CONFER DEGREE ON ROOT

Vote to Award an LL.D., the Twentieth in Their 131 Years.

DISCUSS SCHOOL PROBLEMS

Gov. Whitman, at Convocation Exercises, Urges Better Educational Facilities in Rural Districts.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 21.—The Regents of the University of the State of New York today voted to confer the degree of Doctor of Laws on Elihu Root, former United States Senator and President of the Constitutional Convention. He is the twentieth man thus to be honored by the Regents in the 131 years of their existence. The degree will be conferred on Mr. Root in person by Dr. John H. Finley, as President of the University, at the close of the fifty-first convocation tomorrow night.

Previous recipients of the degree were Robert R. Livingston, 1792; William Patterson, 1792; William A. Duer, 1829; Benjamin F. Butler, 1834; William L. Marcy, 1844; Alexander H. Stevens, 1849; Harvey Prindle Peet, 1849; Salem Town, 1849; Joseph Henry, 1850; Valentine Mott, 1851; John McLean, 1854; Mark Hopkins, 1857; Peter Cooper, 1878; Thurlow Weed, 1879; Martin Brewer Anderson, 1881; Aaron Lucius Chapin, 1882; Seth Low, 1889; Clarence A. Walworth, 1887, and William P. Letchworth, 1893.

The public exercises of the convocation began at 2:30 o'clock this afternon, when the Regents, robed in their academic costumes, entered the auditorium of the State Education Building. In the absence of Chancellor Pliny T. Sexton, who was detained by illness in his family, Vice Chancellor Albert Vander Veer of Albany presided. The afternoon services were in memory of the late Chancellor St. Clair McKelway.

Addresses were delivered by Edgar M. Cullen, former Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals; Oswald G. Villard, and Chester S. Lord. Following the memorial services Charles W. Bardeen read a necrology of the New York State teachers for the year. Then came an address of welcome to the college and university Presidents entering upon office since the last convocation by Dr. John H. Finley. These Presidents were Frank D. Blodgett, Adelphi College; A. R. Brubacher, State College for Teachers; Henry N. MacCracken, Vassar College; Sidney E. Mezes, College of the City of New York; Joseph A. Mulry, Fordham University, and John Balcom Shaw, Elmira College.

Wants Better Rural Schools.

The speakers at this evening's session were Governor Charles S. Whitman and President George E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota. Governor Whitman took as his text, "The Interest of the Executive in the Education of the People." In part he said:

"This generation witnesses a growing concern for the elementary schools—the schools of the people—and it is a most wholesome indication of our democratic citizenship. There were days when the boy who sat in the little country schoolhouse received an education as good perhaps as could be obtained in any school in the land, but the little red country schoolhouse has not kept pace in progress with the institutions in the larger centres of population. In these days, when transportation, even in the rural districts, has become comparatively easy, the movement for central rural schools, with trained and well-paid teachers, should make rapid headway.

President Vincent spoke on "The University and the State," saying that the development of universities had been hailed as a triumph of democracy.

"The State," he said, "has created an organ of intelligence for the service of all; has set up a kind of West Point of science for training the soldiers of agriculture, industry and the professions; has brought into being an expert adviser prepared to supply accurate information and constructive suggestions with respect to all the problems of community life. This ideal has naturally impressed the imaginations of many friends of progress, as it has aroused the enthusiasm of the men and women immediately concerned with the work itself.

"Certain evidences, if not of reaction at least of skepticism, have therefore been greeted with surprise. Such evidences I do exist. Surveys have raised doubts. In several States new forms of university control have been adopted; the very principle of State-supported college and university education has been here and there attacked; the activities of experts have been resented; fear that the university is building up machines of alumni and officials to dominate the State have been freely expressed.

"If we lack faith in democracy itself we can have little hope for the highest success of State universities. If we accept the views of Faguet in his Cult of Incompetence we must despairingly conclude that the best ability, the finest talents will seek the service not of the public but of private groups and corporations. This would mean the gradual drift of the best types of teaching and research men from the State universities into the endowed institutions. A certain amount of this is to be expected. The greater prestige, the richer library resources, the larger leisure for private study, the tranquillity will attract many to these older seats of learning. But there will remain men and women with faith and courage; others of an adventurous and hopeful type will rally to their support; the struggle for better things will go on. The ideals of the State university will be more clearly defined and more convincingly presented to the people."

EXPORT BUSINESS TAXES RAILROADS

Traffic Largely Increased by Foodstuffs and Munitions for Nations at War.

ROADS EMPLOY MORE MEN

New York Central Rushing 5,000 New Cars—Sidings of Jersey Central Choked for 35 Miles.

Officers of practically all the railroads coming into New York stated yesterday that traffic was heavier than at any previous time since 1907. Steel products, consisting largely of ordnance and shells for the allied armies, wheat and corn, horses and other livestock for export, and clothing shipments are taxing the facilities of all the roads. The operating forces of several trunk lines have been increased largely since Sept. 1, and further additions will be made if export business grows heavier.

At the Erie Railroad offices it as said tonnage figures for September showed that the traffic handled was greater than ever before recorded for a single month in the company's history. The Erie brings to the seaboard a substantial part of the product of the anthracite coal field of Pennsylvania, but this business has been only a fair part of the general haul picked up from Chicago on through the Eastern States.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's freight tonnage increased 40 per cent. in the last ninety days in so far as shipments to New York for export are concerned. The New Haven Railroad is moving more freight down from the New England States than it has for the Fall period in many years. The New Haven's tonnage has been vastly increased since the end of August by shipments from the arms and munition factories of Connecticut. It brings to this port the output of the Remington Arms Company, the American Ordnance Company, and other concerns with works at Bridgeport and New Haven, and the rifles and cartridges being made by the factories in Massachussets and Connecticut which were bought and put to making rifles by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company last Spring.

The New York Central Railroad reports business so good that several hundred extra men have been taken on to handle the traffic, and deliveries of 5,000 freight cars, recently ordered from equipment concerns, are being rushed. The Central is bringing in from Western elevators a vast quantity of wheat, billed through to London, Liverpool, and the ports of France and the Scandinavian countries. On the New Jersey Central Road lines of loaded freight cars extending for thirty-five miles are held up because of the congestion.

When a boy of business has a birthday—the world forgives the l or the Wel

These cri October days are birthdays for us, and it is not unnatural that w ink and write more of ourselves than is our wont.

After all—it t a good deal of courage to open a clothing business in New York—probably the hardest spot in the world. But we were sure fr the first that we could succeed, if—we would give New York men more style—more quality—and even better service than they had ever had for the money.

Ever since 1890—when we first put clothes into our stores—you have shown your appreciation by helping us build not only one of the largest retail clothing businesses in the city, but in the world.

Which is a good deal to have accomplished in eleven years. Isn't it?

There is a crumpled one-dollar bill in a frame in one of our private offices.

It has been there a good while—for it is the first dollar that was paid to the Wallach boys when they began business.

Even now—it belongs to the man who paid it. He'd rather have it than the goods it bought.

Perhaps one reason for our success is that every dollar that has come to us since has been just as important—the sale of just as much interest—as that first dollar.

We have tried as hard every day as we did that first day. And this spirit has grown up with the business, until you can almost feel it in any Wallach store.

Another reason—is the merchandise we offer and the modest prices we charge for it.

Everything men wear except shoes.

And all of the same character and quality as Hart Schaffner & Marx Clothing.

This year we have set aside—in celebration of our birthday—a fine lot of Hart Schaffner & Marx Varsity Fifty Five Suits and marked them $21.50

Not even the salesmen will know the regular prices.

We simply tell you that you make a great saving on each garment.

Try once, putting your faith wholly in us—and then judge us by the result!

CHAMBER INDORSES NEW CONSTITUTION

Commerce Body Approves Proposed Changes as Good Business Move.

ACTS AFTER INVESTIGATION

Labor Plans Fight on Proposals—Quigg Condemns Recommendations of Convention.

The Chamber of Commerce at a special meeting at noon yesterday approved the main part of the proposed Constitution with only one dissenting vote. The taxation article was approved by the Chamber three weeks ago. No action will be taken on the apportionment article.

The action was taken after the 500 members present had heard the report of a special committee on the Constitution, headed by Eugenius H. Outerbridge, and had listened to Morgan J. O'Brien, Vice President of the Constitutional Convention; Martin Saxe, Chairman of the Committee on Taxation, and Seth Low, President of the Chamber of Commerce and delegate to the convention, all of whom argued that the proposed Constitution represented the embodiment of the best business sense in its provision for the government of the State.

The report of the Constitution Committee said in part:

"After many months of consideration by eminent representatives elected from all parts of the State the proposed Constitution was adopted by a non-partisan vote and by a large majority of the members of the convention.

"With the rapid growth of population, and especially with the large increase in the area and population of municipalities, new problems of administration have arisen and experience has proved the necessity for material changes in the fundamental law of the State if real efficiency and just and economic government is to be accomplished in State and municipal administration."

Indorsed in Resolution.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, recognizing that the magnitude of the political, commercial, industrial, and social affairs now embraced within the administration of the State and its municipalities necessitated a revision of the Constitution in order that more efficient means of government might ensue, and that the proposed Constitution as amended and revised has been prepared after full discussion and mature deliberation by a body of men thoroughly competent to deal with this intricate subject, hereby approves the proposed Constitution adopted by the convention on Sept. 10, 1915, and recommends its adoption by the vote of the people at the election to be held on the second day of November, 1915.

Mr. Low appealed to his hearers to support the Constitution on the grounds of public business policy.

Mr. O'Brien emphasized the non-partisan character of the body of the proposed Constitution to be voted on as Question 1, and said that while he had protested in the convention against not giving New York the representation to which the city was entitled, the apportionment article had nothing to do with the main part of the Constitution.

Mr. Saxe thanked the chamber for its previous indorsement of the taxation article.

"It is high time for a change in our taxation system," he said. "We are using the same system that England used in the twelfth century, and that is the general property taxation system. We all know that general property taxation, so far as personal property is concerned, is a failure. We have got to get away from it. Now in the revised Constitution we make it possible to extend the tax district to the county line so that tax districts may be consolidated, and so that there may be a tax board for the entire county.

"We provide also for the supervision, review, and equalization of assessments. It is a notorious fact that up-State property is not assessed, as the law provides, at its full value. Yet here in the City of New York property is assessed close to its full value, and I have heard some people say that much of it is assessed beyond its full value. I think New York is really subject to some discrimination, but all that can be cured by having a central body with the power of equalization and review of assessments. There these questions of assessment can be thrashed out in the making. That is the place to correct them."

LABOR PREDICTS DEFEAT.

Committee Answers Complaints of Central Federated Union.

The Joint Campaign Committee of the Central Federated Union of New York and of the Central Labor Union of Brooklyn met at campaign headquarters, 210 Fifth Street, yesterday afternoon to hear the report or a committee headed by President Holland of the New York State Federation, which had finished a tour of the State, lining up labor organizations against the proposed Constitution. Mr. Holland reported that the Constitution would be overwhelmingly defeated.

The Citizens' Union Non-Partisan Committee for the Adoption of the Constitution issued a statement refuting the assertion of organized labor that it had got no consideration from the convention.

"The State Federation of Labor filed twenty-four suggestions," said the statement. "The proposed Constitution carries out the following requests:

Retains annual sessions of the Legislature.

Raises the salaries of Assemblymen and Senators.

Abolishes the Governor's emergency message power.

Puts the State Labor Department into the Constitution.

Makes sure that workmen's compensation can be made to cover occupational diseases as well as accidents.

Strengthens the power of the Legislature to prohibit manufacturing in tenement houses.

Keeps short terms for the Governor and the members of the Legislature.

Keeps an elective judiciary.

MARSHALL ANSWERS LAWYER.

Calls His Attack on Conservation Article Most Absurd.

Louis Marshall, delegate to the Constitutional Convention, and a member of the Conservation Committee, issued a statement last night answering the attack made by George A. Lawyer, head of the New York State Fish, Game and Forest League, with headquarters at Watertown, N. Y., against the Constitution because of its article on conservation. Mr. Marshall pointed out that when the convention invited officials of every organization in the State interested in conservation to appear before the committee, Mr. Lawyer did not appear.

"In spite of the efforts made by the lumbermen to commercialize the forests, to permit the cutting of timber and to divide the preserve into zones," said Mr. Marshall, "every effort made in that direction in the convention was voted down peremptorily. The convention removed every incentive on the part of any one to destroy the forests. Not even dead trees or dead timber may be taken away except for the sole purpose of reforestation and fire prevention, and even then they may not be sold. How can any honest man contend that under such provision, it is within the range of possibility for the lumbermen to encroach upon the forests?"

Mr. Marshall said it would be interesting to know who supplied the fund of $50,000 he quotes Mr. Lawyer as saying was available to help defeat the constitution.

QUIGG REPORTS ADVERSELY.

Tells Constituents Constitution Is Not Worth Voting For.

Lemuel Ely Quigg in a pamphlet with the title "Mr. Quigg to His Constituents" yesterday reported to his followers in Columbia, Putnam and Dutchess Counties just what he thought of the proposed Constitution. He comments on the short ballot:

"I am obliged to report to you that in my view this is an attempt to create in New York a novel government, the like of which does not today exist on earth; that it provides absolute despotism, with permission to you to change the despot once in two years, if, with his complete control over the Government, he does not prove stronger than you are."

On Question 1, involving the main body of the Constitution, Mr. Quigg will vote no; Question 2, relating to reapportionment, he says, is a case of tweedledum and tweedledee, doesn't amount to a hill of beans, and he will not vote on it at all; on Question 3 the taxation article, he may vote yes.

APPEAL TO BRONX VOTERS.

Constitution Urged as Good Business Policy for the State.

George W. Wickersham, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, and Morgan J. O'Brien, leader of the minority of the Constitutional Convention, told 300 members of the Bronx Board of Trade at Ebling's Casino, 156th Street and St. Ann's Avenue, yesterday that a business man needed only to study the proposed Constitution carefully to be persuaded to vote for it.

Mr. Wickersham told of the great growth in the State's expenses—from $12,000,000 in 1895 to $42,000,000 in 1915, and of the growth of the State debt from $8,000,000 in 1895, to $186,000,000 in 1915. After telling some of the evils in State Government which the convention tried to cure, among them the growth in departments, the abuse of the emergency message, and the slipshod compilation of the appropriations, he said:

"We have tried to stem this waste and put the State Government on a business basis. The suggestion that the articles should have been voted on separately was impracticable, as the articles were linked with one another. We have attempted a general revision of the Constitution, a complete reformation of the Government of the State."

POLICE ARE PROTECTED.

New York City Force Loses Nothing in Constitution.

The police of New York City have nothing to fear from the proposed Constitution, according to Meier Steinbrink, a delegate to the convention, who issued a statement yesterday contradicting assertions made by opponents of the proposed Constitution that the police would lose the right to have their dismissals subject to court review.

"I cannot conceive for what reason any one should attempt to mislead either the police or firemen by a statement so utterly unfounded," he said. "There is nothing in the new Constitution which takes from either the police or firemen the right to court review which they enjoy by the provisions of the Greater New York Charter, and I think that without egotism I may address the police on this subject, since I championed their cause before the Constitutional Convention."

O. K. OF YOUNG REPUBLICANS.

Club Urges Business System in Revised Constitution.

The Young Republican Club yesterday issued to its members a report on the new Constitution, in which it urged the adoption of the proposed reforms. The letter said in part:

"The opportunity is now given the State of New York to lead the other States in the practice, as well as the principle, of the budget system, of business administration of State affairs, and of the short ballot and responsible, visible government, and to take a great step toward home rule and an effective judiciary."

TAMMANY BRAVES HOOT CONSTITUTION

'BETTER CHANCE NEXT TIME'

Wigwam Indorses Candidates and Cheers for "Al, the Next Sheriff."

Tammany held its first ratification meeting of the campaign in Tammany Hall last night. Although Judge Swann, candidate for District Attorney, and other county candidates spoke, the meeting was decidedly cold until Alfred E. Smith, candidate for Sheriff, got up and turned the affair into an uproarious meeting.

There was little enthusiasm for Judge Swann. He was listened to with respect while he told about what he expected to accomplish if elected, and State Senator Robert F. Wagner, one of Tammany's best orators, fared little better. The hall, which was comfortably filled, was manifestly a Smith crowd, and when the candidate for Sheriff took the platform the audience cheered him for fully five minutes.

Secretary Tom Smith started the proceedings by reading a resolution to the effect that the New York Democracy indorsed all the Tammany candidates. This was greeted with howls of approval.

Tammany Hall as an organization did not go on record on the proposed Constitution, but the speakers did not hesitate to condemn the proposition from beginning to end. Senator Wagner condemned it in unmeasured terms, and Assemblyman Smith told how he had fought to get a real apportionment. Mr. Smith said he had fought hard for three propositions—the demands of labor, the sinking fund provision, and the minimum wage scale, but that all had been defeated by the Republican members. Regarding the home rule provision, Mr. Smith said:

"We were willing to take the best we could get for New York. That's what we went there for."

The house, and it was some time before the Assemblyman could proceed. He condemned the scheme of reapportionment as unfair to the Democrats, and said that if the Constitution was defeated this year, Tammany would have a better chance next time. When he referred to the reapportionment clause as a "gold brick" he was cheered for a long time.

Judge Swann said in part:

"A District Attorney of this county who places himself abreast of the times in the treatment of crime and criminals, instead of following the old course of prosecution and prosecution alone, would become a power for good in the great desired end of crime prevention."

Senator James A. Foley, another member of the Constitutional Convention, and Alexander Yorke also attacked the proposed Constitution.

WAR FAILS TO HALT HEBREW CHARITY AID

MORE GIFTS THAN IN 1914

Reports submitted last night at the forty-first annual meeting of the United Hebrew Charities at Temple Emanu-El showed that the organization, despite the European war, had given more aid and accomplished more along constructive lines during the past year than in 1914.

Leopold Plaut, President of the Board, read the annual report of the Trustees, which called attention to the fact that, although a few contributors had felt obliged to curtail or discontinue their support, the great majority continued their activity undiminished, and many of them had increased it. The receipts in the form of donations and memberships, the report said, amounted to $212,560.86, compared with $189,014.62 in the previous year. In relief work the organization paid out $271,524.43 to meet extraordinary demands.

Aid to self-help had been the primary principle underlying the work, the Board reported, and this had caused the organization to take a strong interest in plans for providing open markets, the establishment of a vocational guidance department and other efforts along constructive lines.

Answering those who have attacked organized charity the report read:

Relief societies during the past five or six years have run a gauntlet of abuse and criticism that has made the position of trustee very disagreeable at times. We have borne with equanimity the contempt of some social reformers for the necessary palliative measures of organized charity in the place of far-reaching political changes, knowing that until the millennium arrives provision must be made to succor victims of social and economic maladjustment.

Of the movement started to raise a fund independent of organized charity to save families on the east side from eviction the report says:

Unhappily, however, we have not yet reached that stage where we have money enough to provide adequate or efficient aid to all our families. We have been provided with enough to supply the elemental needs, that is, shelter, food, clothing, and fuel, sufficiently to keep body and soul together. This was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the city authorities when, acting upon the sensational reports to the contrary of a certain Municipal Judge on the east side, they quietly, without our knowledge, kept tab on several hundred Jewish eviction cases and found, as they subsequently announced, that the reports were unfounded and that the United Hebrew Charities was fully meeting the needs as they were disclosed, preventing evictions by paying the rent of families too poor to pay it themselves.

The Widows' Pension law enacted by the Legislature, the report said, would be a desirable adjunct to the work of private societies, but not more than 20 per cent. of the widowed mothers now cared for by the United Hebrew Charities would meet the requirements set forth in the law. Commenting on future plans the report said:

We do not appeal to you any longer on the negative ground of merely satisfying hunger and preventing cold, but on the positive ground of providing normal living conditions for such of our people as cannot provide them themselves.

The report of the treasurer showed that the society had $371,872 available during the year, and had disbursed $363,104. Of the money received, $153,485 was in membership contributions and $52,145 in voluntary donations. The item of cash relief dispensed was $218,052.

During the year the society dealt with 9,374 cases, involving 41,079 individuals. In 4,599 cases cash relief was granted, and other relief was given in 855. In 3,820 cases it was found that aid was not necessary.

The report of the Committee on Vocational Guidance had a good word to say for the Wirt system of education. The committee felt that permanent aid was best given to a family not by sending a child to school at an early age, but by equipping the child for industrial life so that destitution would be unknown in future years. On this point the report read:

It is with pardonable pride, perhaps, that your committee calls attention to the fact that the United Hebrew Charities, so far as it knows, is the first organization of its kind that has recognized this principle by organizing a vocational guidance department.

The report goes at length into the findings of the committee and the tests it is making with several children. A report of the industrial department, which was started to collect waste materials, to give the useful articles to the poor, and disposing of the rest showed surprising results. Articles collected, and they included almost everything, from toys to an artificial leg, were sold for $10,576, and much was still unsold. In all, 12,417 "bags" had been contributed and a great quantity of clothing had been obtained for needy families.

These Trustees were re-elected for three years: Mrs. J. B. Greenhut, Louis J. Grumbach, Morris Mayer, Alexander New, Daniel Richter, Jack W. Schiffer, Louis Stern, and Edwin C. Vogel.

SELIGMAN FOR PERKINS.

Says Moss Indorsement Was Given Before Primaries.

Isaac M. Seligman has written to Frank Moss and to the Perkins Campaign Committee, calling attention to the fact that his indorsement of Moss for District Attorney was only before the primaries, and saying that in his opinion Mr. Moss acted unwisely in undertaking to run on a separate ticket after the primaries.

"The effect of such a course will only be to endanger the election of Mr. Perkins, and to strengthen the hope of Tammany's success at the polls," Mr. Seligman wrote. "Mr. Perkins is a faithful and able public servant. I shall cast my vote for him and trust that he will be elected."

Saks Suits for Men, at $20 are ahead of any argument we can offer in their behalf

¶ Most clothing arguments are ahead of the clothes. Saks clothes are always ahead of the argument. Nothing that we can tell you here about Saks $20 suits can quite come up to the suits themselves. The performance is better than the promise. The tailoring is better than the telling.

¶ We have gone deeper into this $20 proposition than ever before. We have increased our assortments liberally. We had to. Last season's business proved that. But we have done more than increase the selections. We have increased the value to a point never before reached in $20 clothes.

¶ In every iota of their making they are essentially better than $20 clothes, and whether they are shown in close-fitting, soft roll effects, or in models of more conservative cut, this one unalterable fact holds true of every $20 suit in the Saks stock this Fall—its style is so far ahead of the price that nobody will suspect how little you paid for it.

All the new features—soft roll collars—classy innovations in lapels—sporty pockets—soft roll vests—some with flapped pockets on them—others plain—and a range of choice in fabrics, patterns and colors which you cannot match anywhere in town—and that goes, North, South, East and West of Saks'.

Men's Negligee & Pleated Bosom Shirts at $1.50

Choice of soft or starched cuffs; made of fine imported and American fabrics in a wide variety of patterns and colorings, each in particularly good taste. Men's Imported "Cross Bar" Handkerchiefs, 6 for 95c

Men's Imported Hand-Embroidered Initial Handkerchiefs, 6 for $1.15

The maker thinks they are too light; we think they are just right. How about you?

Made by one of the most famous hatters in the business—lives on his reputation and makes hats on the side—his name is all you need to look for in a Derby—the rest is individuality and style. But these particular Derbies are a little lighter than he likes them—just an excess of fastidiousness. Blocked in eight of the newest models. All have the character and finish which their name implies—and the lightness referred to as a fault we regard as a virtue, for the lighter a Derby the more comfort.

Also about 300 fine soft Hats—that have been selling at $3.00, and a fine assortment of tweed Hats at the same price.

The Overcoat in the Expense Account

MOST men have already, or soon will, spend a part of their expense accounts for a winter overcoat. The question comes up, where to buy it.

Last week an otherwise worthy New York store advertised overcoats at $9.75 and one of our Comparison Department experts bought several coats.

These garments were so thoroughly poor that we take the occasion to call attention once again to the fallacy of judging an article alone on the basis of price.

Macy's advertising does lay stress on price—and so do you. What a thing costs is always important to you. But, what it is worth is even more important. Hence this sermon on quality.

A Low Price is Often the Highest Price

The price in itself is never a safe basis for judgment. An overcoat at $9.75 may be the best bargain you ever had; or it may be a rank extravagance.

For 57 years this store has had the reputation for selling dependable merchandise at prices lower than any other store in the city.

And in that time we have never lost sight of the importance of quality. Our "low price" is always the result of merchandising ingenuity; it is never made by skimping quality.

The Macy reputation for "lowest prices" is built on the solid rock of dependability, for the goods we sell must give satisfaction no matter how much the price.

We sell at "Lowest-in-the-City-prices," but—

We Never Slight Quality at Macy's

DENIES HUNTINGTON GOT A FAKE ROMNEY

Isaac Simmons of Art Firm He Sues for $100,000 Insists Painting Is Genuine.

SAYS EXPERTS CERTIFIED IT

Connoisseur Here Recovering from Severe Operation—Must Go to London for Trial.

Art circles in this city are stirred over the $100,000 suit brought by Henry E. Huntington of this city, bibliophile and connoisseur, against Lewis & Simmons of London, Paris, and 581 Fifth Avenue, New York, on the allegation that a painting which he bought from them is not a genuine Romney. He also questions that the work is a true likeness of Mrs. Siddons and her sister, Fanny Kemble, the English actresses, which it is called.

Isaac Simmons of Lewis & Simmons, at his galleries here yesterday, denied the charges made by Mr. Huntington and said that his firm would fight to the last to maintain the authenticity of the work. The suit disclosed that Mr. Huntington is recovering from a severe operation. On account of his illness his London attorneys proposed that his testimony be taken by commission in this country. The application was granted and then reversed by the Court of Appeals, King's Bench. Mr. Huntington, when his health permits, will have to go to England to appear in the suit. It is thought the matter will be before the courts within six weeks.

Mr. Simmons said that he himself would consent to no compromise and that he had overwhelming proof to sustain the position of his house.

"This picture," said he, "was sold to Mr. Huntington in 1912 by this firm and guaranteed to be a Romney. It was accompanied by a written expert opinion of the best English authority on Romney. After the picture was sold it was hung in the Metropolitan Club in this city and in Mr. Huntington's private apartment. It was seen by several well-known dealers who were advising him and all of them pronounced upon it most favorably. After hanging in the club for some time it was sent to the house of Mr. Huntington at San Gabriel, Pasadena County, Cal. The following year I met Mr. Huntington in Paris and he told me how pleased he was with the picture.

"A well-known firm of art dealers in this city held an exhibition of old English masters which consisted mostly of pictures bought from that firm by Mr. Huntington. It refused to hang the Romney in this exhibition and cast doubt upon its authenticity.

"This poisoned Mr. Huntington's mind, and he asked us to take back the picture and return his money. This we refused to do, assuring him that the picture was absolutely as represented, and that we certainly would not take back a canvas on which a slur had been cast. We offered, however, to submit it to any expert or experts whom Mr. Huntington might name. After this the picture was sent to England under the direction of the firm mentioned, and the matter was placed in the hands of lawyers. There had until now been no publication concerning the controversy. After this action was brought we had the painting examined by the best authorities on Romney in England, and they all pronounced it to be absolutely genuine.

"The integrity of this firm has never been assailed before. We have been established since 1860 with well-known branches in Paris and London. We feel that we will demonstrate to Mr. Huntington, as well as to the art lovers of the world, that this great picture is by Romney.

"In fact, we are pleased that this action has been brought, as it will clear the air and prove to Mr. Huntington beyond a doubt that he has a perfectly genuine and authentic work."

At the home of Mr. Huntington at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street it was said yesterday that he was unable on account of ill health to discuss the case. At his office, 25 Broad Street, reference was made to his American attorney, who, however, could not be found. It is understood that the matter is entirely in the hands of his English lawyers.

ASIATIC ASSOCIATION MEETS

W. D. Straight Re-elected President —Fears Loss of Oriental Trade.

The American Asiatic Association at its annual meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms yesterday re-elected Willard D. Straight President for the ensuing year. These Vice Presidents were chosen: Charles M. Schwab and Eugene P. Thomas of New York, Alba B. Johnson of Philadelphia, Theodore B. Wilcox of Portland, Ore.; John B. Cleveland of Spartansburg, N. C., and Ellison A. Smythe of Pelzer, S. C. Albert Cordes and John Foord of New York were elected Treasurer and Secretary. Mr. Straight in his address said that the general commercial situation in the Far East had appreciably improved during the last year.

"Aside from the question of financing, the importance of which cannot be overemphasized," he added, "the general prospect for increasing our business with the Orient seems more promising than at any time in recent years. But, notwithstanding this fact, we are confronted by a situation which may make it almost impossible for us to take advantage of the present opportunities. The Pacific Mail Steamship Company and the Robert Dollar Company, which have long been among the principal carriers of our export trade to and our import trade from the Orient, are no longer operated under the American flag. The Pacific Mail steamers, for years run at a considerable loss, have now been sold because the provisions of the La Follette Seamen's Bill imposed an increased cost of operation which was absolutely prohibitive. Captain Dollar has placed his steamers under the British flag.

"The situation occurs at a time when there is little British or trans-Pacific shipping available, and American merchants are therefore obliged to rely upon the Japanese carriers. The Japanese lines are heavily subsidized, and necessarily prefer their cargo to our own. They would in any case be unable to provide us with the facilities which we require. The association has already brought this matter to the attention of the Government of the United States. It remains to be seen whether our efforts will be effective."

VICTOR GIVES 8-HOUR DAY.

Talking Machine Company Says It Will Cost a Million First Year.

The Victor Talking Machine Company announced yesterday that it would soon place its 7,500 employes on an eight-hour day with no reduction in pay. It estimates the cost of the concession of labor will be $1,000,000 for the first year. A statement issued by the company giving the reasons for the change said:

"The Directors concluded it was the right thing to do and the right time to do it. There has been no demand for the change on the part of our employes. The change will reduce the company's profits about $1,000,000 for the first year. The company expects that it can, however, by adjustments and improvements, restore its profits to normal. The company believes that shorter hours will result in the production of goods of a better grade and will increase the spirit of co-operation which it is anxious to promote in its organization."

ORPHAN IN ASYLUM INVENTS A SWEEPER

IT IS APPROVED BY EXPERTS

Freddie Stark and the other boys were told that they must learn to think and act for themselves. So at the age of 13, Freddie is the inventor of a device which promises to give him a start in life.

Freddie Stark is a half orphan under the care of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society at Pleasantville, N. Y. He came from the east side of the city, where his parents had much the worst of life, and the boy was sent to the country for a new start.

Many harsh things are said about the wooden ways of institutions, some of which turn out human beings all alike as if from some sociological lathe. Hence the cottage plan, such as is used at Pleasantville and other progressive orphan asylums, and the stress which the teachers put upon the doctrine of self-help. Freddie heard much of "energy" and "drive" and "initiative" from his teachers.

The first time his instructors knew that he had taken their precepts so much to heart was the other day, when there came a big envelope from the United States Patent Office advising "Mr. Frederick Stark," addressing him "My Dear Sir," that as far as could be learned there was no prior claim on file for his combination of broom, brush, and dust pan, for which the working drawings had been received.

Dr. L. B. Bernstein, the Superintendent, who, under the rules, has authority to open the mail of the children, was amazed when he examined the documents and asked the boy to bring out his invention. The youngster had made his practical three-in-one sweeping appliance in the shops, but unknown to any one but himself.

It looks not unlike a broom, and is used as such. As soon as a pile of dust is accumulated, the sweeper may press a button, which releases a spring. This operation lets down a dustpan. Another motion, and the operator takes from the back of the dustpan a small handbrush, with which he transfers the sweepings into the pan. The boy had noticed that the sweeping about the cottages required three motions, and hence the combination. The appliance is now used in sweeping in the cottages.

The director of the technical school at Pleasantville says the device works to perfection, and can be used in sleeping cars, shops, and offices. He thinks that this ingenious efficiency device can be placed on the market at a price within the means of every householder. A lawyer of this city has taken charge of the application for a patent, and it is thought that in a few days the necessary papers will be signed.

The institution keeps the children until they are 16 years of age, and then sends them out into the world. If everything turns out as well as experts who have examined the boy's invention think, young Stark will have enough money by the time he is 16 to pay his expenses through college or to start in business.

Dr. Bernstein said last evening that the success of the boy was the outcome of modern methods in teaching and a good example of the way in which up-to-date institutions for orphans are keeping the minds of the children from getting into set grooves. The Stark youngster had done everything connected with his invention on his own motion, and had thereby shown the value of his training.

STUDENTS TO OPPOSE NIGHT SCHOOL CLOSING

Students in the evening high schools in Brooklyn and Manhattan held meetings of protest last night as the result of the order by the Board of Education to close the evening schools of the city unless the Board of Estimate grants an appropriation of $270,000 to keep them and the day schools open until the end of the year.

The general students' organization of the Brooklyn Evening High School at Albany Avenue and Bergen Street decided yesterday to appear at the City Hall today in a body and try to convince the Board of Estimate that the appropriation should be granted.

President Churchill of the Board of Education has been authorized to close the evening schools on Monday night if the amount asked for is not voted by the Board of Estimate. This action will deprive thousands of pupils of the opportunity to continue their studies until the Christmas holidays.

"No one regrets more than I," Mr. Churchill said yesterday, "the necessity for the action, but we have not the funds to keep the evening schools going."

PLOTZ TYPHUS GERM THEORY CONFIRMED

Reports of physicians who had been in Serbia, submitted last night at a meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine, confirmed the discovery of the germ of typhus made by the brilliant young pathologist, Dr. Harry Plotz of Mount Sinai Hospital.

Dr. Hans Zinsser, Professor of Bacteriology at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, who spent several months in Serbia in direct contact with the typhus epidemic, spoke of two cases under his observation in which the bacillus had been found. His observations in the field thus verify the laboratory experiments made in this city. His report was regarded by the physicians present as being of especial interest, as he had worked under adverse conditions and without the aid of the best equipment.

The discoverer of the typhus germ is now in Serbia, that hotbed of the disease, conducting his researches. A letter from the field read by Dr. E. Libman reported how Dr. Plotz and an associate, guided by a Serbian physician of experience, had selected typical cases of typhus and had succeeded in finding the bacillus.

FIND 'MRS. FLAGLER' STOLE BOY'S $4,000

Jury Convicts Woman Who Posed as Oil Man's Widow of Grand Larceny.

A POOR GIRL'S $500 LOSS

District Attorney Hears of Many More Swindles Charged to "Fairy Godmother."

Mrs. Zora Emma Johnson, on trial before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions for swindling Frank Mahoney, a telephone boy, out of nearly $4,000 by pretending to be the widow of Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil man, was convicted yesterday of grand larceny in the first degree. The jury returned its verdict after being out an hour and twenty minutes.

The indictment on which Mrs. Johnson was convicted recited as a specific act of larceny a loan of $850 which Mrs. Johnson got from Mahoney on May 6 last after she had assured him that she was the widow of Henry M. Flagler and that she would make him her secretary at $20,000 a year salary when she came into possession of her $15,000,000 estate.

The evidence presented showed that the defendant between April 30 and June 3 procured from Mahoney a total of $3,886, most of which he had borrowed from friends, convincing them as he had been convinced that his "fairy godmother" was what she professed to be.

In his charge to the jury yesterday Judge Mulqueen, acting on the request of Abe Levy, the woman's lawyer, emphasized that no inference of guilt was to be drawn from the fact that the defendant interposed no defense. But the Judge also urged the jury to remember that the absence of a defense left the evidence presented by the prosecution uncontradicted.

Mrs. Johnson, who is 51 years old, was remanded to the Tombs for sentence. She was not in the least disconcerted by the verdict and declined a glass of water offered to her by an attendant. She turned to Abe Levy, her lawyer, as she was being led out of the courtroom and remarked:

"I'll prove that I am Mrs. Flagler yet."

Since Mrs. Johnson was brought to trial Assistant District Attorney Minton has heard of other swindling operations not mentioned in the trial. He has been informed that Mrs. Johnson passed bad checks on banks in Washington, one for $5,000. Various hotels in this city where she lived as Mrs. Flagler have bills against her, and one clothing firm where she purchased several suits of evening clothes for the telephone boy to keep up her show of munificence has a claim for $762.

Among the papers in the case Mr. Minton has a letter from "William A. Clark," who says that Mrs. Johnson once tried to interest him in the sale of some Persian rugs. Mr. Minton said yesterday that he understood the writer to be former United States Senator Clark.

THE STROUD PIANO

"In tone and action a musician's piano"

PRICE $285

MORITZ MOSZKOWSKI, famous pianist, orchestral conductor and composer of many widely-known musical works, says of The Stroud—

"I had the opportunity of playing for the first time an upright Stroud Piano, and I acknowledge to have had quite a pleasant surprise. This piano pleases by a very equal touch, a great and fine quality of tone, its beautiful design—in a word by all the desirable qualities, among which one must mention especially an extremely moderate price."

Heretofore only a very small group of pianofortes has shown sufficient musical quality to satisfy the discriminating taste of great musicians and composers. But The Stroud has achieved this difficult pinnacle—it approaches the greatest pianos in all but the subtlest refinements.

The Man Who "Shops" Before He Buys!

USUALLY a store evades the question of comparison. Most stores have the idea that if you go elsewhere to look you won't come back, the theory being that salesmanship instead of value is what "sells" Clothing.

We invite comparison in this Men's Store. We even urge it. Our service, our merchandise and our prices on clothes for men and young men will stand the test. Every day in this store we find that the man who shops around

CALLS INCOME TAX BY STATE CRIMINAL

B. C. Marsh Tells Mills Committee Proposed Plan Is Tantamount to Robbery.

MANY THEORIES EXPOUNDED

Panic Predicter Hits at Silver Tubs in Newport—Hearings Now to Move Up State.

The Mills Legislative Tax Committee in the Woolworth Building yesterday heard exponents of many tax theories. It was the last day of the Committee hearings in the city before its return from its up-State sessions. The first witness was Benjamin C. Marsh, Secretary of the Lower Rent Society. He said that the proposition to levy a State income tax on all incomes exceeding $600, or even $1,200, was criminal.

"Any party which sponsors this proposition," he said, "will be decisively beaten. It is tantamount to robbery under the guise of taxation. Professor Seligman admits that the proposal has no basis in justice, but only in expediency. There are nearly a million families in New York City which get an income from $600 to $2,000 a year. Every dollar they pay as a direct income tax reduces the amount they can spend for food, clothing, and shelter, and affects the up-state farmers and the producers. They consider $10 as an important item, but the wealthy do not consider a matter of $10,000 at all."

Mr. Marsh said that the workingmen paid $66,000,000 annually in taxes while the wealthy paid only $41,160,000.

"I am not a single taxer," he said. "The only real service that this Committee can render, is to show the injustice of the present system of taxation. I ask that you recommend the abolition of State taxes on labor and help us to get real home rule through the referendum in taxation."

No Power for Referendum.

The witness asked Mr. Mills if he was willing to submit the income tax question to the people through referendum. Mr. Mills replied that the Committee had the power to submit the question not to a referendum, but only to the Legislature.

"Of course," said Mr. Marsh, "it would help land speculators here, and the city and State Governments have been run for their benefit for many years. The city and State have no right to an income tax, because the Federal Government would get at least $300,000,000 from taxing large incomes, and the city should make those who get the financial benefit of all municipal expenditures—the land owners—pay for them, instead of robbing the workers under the pretense of solicitude for their civil morals, and under the guise of taxation."

Mr. Marsh said that he believed in abolishing speculation in land as well as in free trade between nations and that he was against the high tariff of the Republican party.

"Would the working man be prosperous under free trade?" asked Senator Mills.

"No," said the witness, "he would only be prosperous until the freedom of production and land speculation was abolished."

"But the country did not vote that way, and only a minority voted for President Wilson," remarked Chairman Mills.

"Well, they certainly did not support the high tariff views of Mr. Taft," replied Mr. Marsh.

"Well, how about Mr. Roosevelt?" the witness was asked.

"Oh," replied Mr. Marsh," he never advocates anything but straddling and large families!"

The witness said that his organization had opposed the new State Constitution because he said it was full of "jokers, trickery, and deceit."

He favored local option in taxation through the referendum, and hoped the committee would favor it also.

Stenographer Gives Up.

James P. Kohler, the next witness, talked so rapidly about his particular theory that the stenographer threw down his pencil in despair. Mr. Kohler, it was learned, was in favor of taxing anybody who could contribute anything. He characterized Professor Johnson's Malthusian theory as "irate nonsense."

"The people are getting millions out of New York and spending it in silver tubs at Newport," he said.

The witness passed around copies of a book relating to panics. He said he predicted the panic of 1907 as well as that of 1893.

"When will we have the next panic?" somebody asked.

"In 1920!" the witness replied with emphasis.

The next witness, Herman E. Goldschmidt, of 1,182 Broadway, said that a committee of experts should have the power to examine all business conditions and should be under civil service rules.

Josiah A. White of Brooklyn charged Lawson Purdy, President of the Tax Board, with playing favorites in making assessments.

"This man has paid no taxes since he moved into my neighborhood," said Mr. White. "I hereby charge openly that Lawson Purdy has discriminated and shown favor to people who are his friends. Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle has an income of nearly $400,000, but he has covered it up in various corporations. He has divided up his property between his carpenter and the workmen. He was assessed for $10,000, but Mr. Purdy exempted him, and now he pays nothing."

James F. Larkin, one of Mr. Purdy's deputies, said Mr. Russell was exempted because the property he owned was church property, and was entitled to exemption. He said that Pastor Russell's securities were non-taxable.

Exchange President Heard.

Joseph Schwab, former State Tax Commissioner, and George Wheelock, who owns real estate in the Murray Hill district, also gave testimony. M. E. de Aguero, President of the Consolidated Stock Exchange, said that it was unfair to tax the "floor trader" of an exchange, because it meant the taxation of that man's ability. He thought that an occupation tax of $10 to $20 a year would be fair, and would amount to more than the revenue derived from the stamp tax on stocks now in vogue. Salaries of $20,000 or less should be taxed $10 a year; $50,000, at $18 a year, and $100,000 at $25 a year. It would certainly not be a burden on any man, he said, to pay such a low rate of taxation. The witness estimated that the stamp tax on sales on the Exchange amount to $400,000 a month. He thought $20,000 a year for the privilege of doing business was not excessive.

"But it must be a pretty profitable business when men pay $75,000 for a seat," remarked Senator Boylan.

"Well, that is because there is a great demand for seats, and there are very few of them," said Chairman Mills.

Mr. de Aguero said that real estate should not be taxed.

The committee will not hold any more sessions in the city until the middle of December. The next hearing will be held up-State, on Nov. 29. By that time the committee will have decided on a plan of taxation and will be ready to hear the opinions of the public regarding it.

Steamship Orduna Will Carry 2,000 Canadian Troops to England.

After being delayed for twelve hours by fog at the entrance to the harbor, the Orduna of the Cunard Line docked at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon and landed nearly 6,000 bags of mail with 204 passengers, of whom thirty were saloon passengers and 117 second cabin. The Orduna carried $1,250,000 in gold consigned by British to American bankers.

After unloading here the Orduna will proceed to Halifax, N. S., where it will take aboard between 2,000 and 2,500 Canadian troops for England.

FERRY CRASH IN FOG INJURES 50 IN PANIC

800 Passengers Terrified When the Netherland Rams Pier at Barrow Street.

HURT BY PLUNGING HORSES

Persons Thrown Under Their Feet in Driveway—Sinking Feared by Struggling Throng.

Confused by the dense fog which had shut down over the harbor, Captain George S. Tuthill, in charge of the ferryboat Netherland of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, strayed from the charted course on a rush-hour trip from Hoboken to Manhattan yesterday morning, and sent his craft, with 800 passengers on board, crashing into the recreation pier at Barrow Street, a block from the Christopher Street slip, at which he was attempting to dock.

In a panic, which followed, five persons were injured gravely, and at fewest fifty more suffered broken bones or contusions. Most of those badly injured were thrown under the feet of horses that reared and plunged in the driveway. Others were trampled by fellow passengers, who became hysterical and fought to save themselves, believing in their terror that the Netherland might sink.

The Netherland, according to the Captain, was under reduced speed and on that point most of the passengers agreed. But the impact tore away part of the railing on the lower forward deck, and badly damaged the pier. Hundreds of the passengers had crowded forward, ready to disembark.

Of the injured, five were taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, which sent three ambulances to the pier. They were:

GAGLIASTRO, JOSEPH, 39, of 506 Grand Street, Jersey City; compound fracture of right leg and shock.

LEE, JOHN, 44, of 29 Jackson Street, Jersey City; compound fracture of right leg.

PHILIPS, EUGENE, 19, of 75 Grant Avenue, Jersey City, fracture of left ankle and possible internal injuries.

Others Seriously Hurt.

The police obtained the names of many others injured who were attended but refused to go to the hospital. Among the more seriously hurt, according to these lists, were:

ARZINGER, A., 38 years old, of Wyoming, N. J.; fracture of right leg and contusions of back.

FROMME, ADAM, 41, of 137 Park Avenue, Jersey City; injury to right hip.

LEHR, RAY, 18, of 5,223 Hudson Boulevard, North Bergen; injury to right leg and back.

NEGLIA, JOSEPH, 30, of 309 Greene Avenue, Lyndhurst, N. J.; possible internal injuries.

NICHOLSON, CHARLES, 42, of 204 Park Avenue, Hoboken; injury to back and possible internal injuries.

RHEINHOLD, JAMES, 28, of 227 Central Avenue, West Hoboken; contusions and injury to right leg.

According to the stories obtained by the police the ferryboat left her slip at Hoboken at 7:53 o'clock after being held back eight minutes by the fog. Captain Tuthill, as an extra precaution, stationed two mates, George Holland and George Rheinbeck, on either side of the pilot house. In midstream the fog lifted a bit, but only for a minute, and the boat proceeded cautiously with fog horns blowing.

The recreation pier, which juts out 300 feet from Barrow Street, was not visible until the Netherland was within fifteen feet of it, and then the mates shouted a warning. The engines were reversed, but there was a strong tide and the action was taken too late. A woman, seeing that the crash was inevitable, screamed and her cry was taken up by many others as they fought to retreat from the forward railings.

The Netherland sideswiped the pier, ripping away ten feet of planking and smashing the overhanging girders and front of the boat, but not doing serious damage below the waterline. The force was sufficient to throw scores of passengers to the decks.

Trampled by Horses.

In the driveway of the craft were ten teams of horses attached to heavily loaded wagons, also a small delivery wagon and an automobile. The horses in the forward section were thrown sprawling, crushing or bruising the passengers who were tossed beneath them. In the panic which followed clothing was torn and many persons were bruised and cut. Quickly the word was shouted that the boat was in no danger, but in the fog it was difficult to reassure the frightened crowd until the powerful engines forced the boat back and swung her into her slip at Christopher Street.

Policeman Moore of the Charles Street Station had heard the screams, and by the time the boat docked he had ambulances on their way from St. Vincent's Hospital and the police reserves called out. They were needed to handle the rush to get off the boat. The waiting room was turned into a temporary hospital and the railroad officials had physicians to attend all the injured. Transportation by taxicab or boat was provided for those who, after being attended, refused to go to the hospital and returned to their homes.

Captain Tuthill reported the accident as unavoidable because of the fog, and at night Captain William Emery, in charge of the marine department of the railroad, said that he was not ready to make a statement.

$2,000,000 FORTUNE WON BY MRS. KIELEY

Relatives Contesting Her Husband's Will Unable to Produce Vital Witness.

COURT DECIDES FOR WIDOW

Orders Verdict by Jury Giving Her Inventor's Estate Ten Times as Large as Expected.

All of the fortune of Timothy J. Kieley, whose home was at 246 Waverley Place, amounting to a little less than $2,000,000, will go to his widow, Margaret. Mr. Kieley died in August, 1913. His will consisted of only fifty words, and left everything he owned to his wife. The will made no mention of his nephews, John and Daniel Kieley, or of his niece, Josephine Waters.

Mr. Kieley began life as an engineer. He formed a copartnership with a man named Mueller to put on the market a number of steam appliances which Mr. Kieley had patented. Money rolled in rapidly. As fast as he got it he bought real estate in Greenwich Village and securities. When he died it was thought his fortune would not exceed $200,000.

The will was probated, and then Mr. Kieley's nephews and nieces began suit in the Supreme Court to break the will on the ground that he was mentally incompetent when it was made. They also charged that undue influence was used by Mrs. Kieley, who was a second wife. There were several postponements of the trial, once because a handwriting expert could not be present, and at other times because of the absence of other witnesses. The trial was set down for yesterday, and when it was called counsel for the plaintiffs asked for another postponement because Dr. Edward C. Titus, who was Mr. Kieley's physician, had left town on a vacatio and could not be reached.

It was explained that Dr. Titus was a necessary witness because it was hoped to prove by him that Mr. Kieley was a hard drinker, and that Dr. Titus had once warned him that unless he quit drinking so much he would not live long.

John Quinn, attorney for the estate, vigorously objected to another postponement, and said that the failure of the plaintiffs to have their witnesses in court ought not to be considered.

Supreme Court Justice Cohalan ordered the trial to proceed, and when the plaintiffs replied that they could not go on, the jury was directed to bring in a verdict for Mrs. Kieley.

ATHLETES UNDER BAN—WOMEN PLAY IN ONE-DAY GOLF TOURNAMENT

KIVIAT AND SMITH CONVICTED BY A. A. U.

Athletes Disqualified for Demanding Excessive Expense Money for Competition.

Abel R. Kiviat of the Irish-American A. C., one of the best mile runners in history, and Harry J. Smith of the Bronx Church House, several times a national champion, were disqualified from further competition in amateur athletics last night, when they were found guilty of professionalism by the Registration Committee of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union for demanding exorbitant expense money to compete at a track and field meeting in Schenectady, N. Y., on Sept. 18.

The decision of the committee cancelling the registration cards of Smith and Kiviat was not unanimous, and was not reached until more than two hours of discussion followed the closing of the testimony. It was said that John F. O'Hara, the Newark member of the board, and Charles Ericksen of Brooklyn voted to acquit the accused athletes.

The case against the athletes was completed last night when Roscoe C. Campbell, the A. A. U. handicapper for Troy, appeared before the Registration Committee and testified that he had received letters from Smith and Kiviat in which they demanded expenses in excess of those allowed by the A. A. U. to compete in the championships of the Eastern New York State Athletic Commission. Smith was charged with demanding $40 and Kiviat $75 for competing in the Schenectady games.

Neither of the athletes was present at the continuation of the investigation of their amateur status last night, nor was John T. Dooling, their chief counsel. They were represented by Congressman Murray Hulbert, who asked for an adjournment, and when it was denied by Chairman Mathews, Hulbert walked out of the room.

The case takes on wide importance through the fact that both Kiviat and Smith represented this country in the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, in 1912.

The Rev. M. A. Galanti, now pastor of St. Antony's Roman Catholic Church in Troy, but in 1912 one of the clergy of Our Lady of Mount Carmel's Church in Watervliet, N. Y., did much to convict Kiviat. He was unable to attend last night's hearing, but turned over to the committee a statement that Kiviat had received $25 from him, through Campbell, to compete in the church sports in September of 1912. In his statement, the priest testified that he saw Kiviat receive the $25 from Campbell, which was in addition to his legitimate expenses for traveling to Watervleit. The expenses were paid Kiviat by Harry Smith, who presumably took a big hand in the securing of athletes from New York for the games. It was Smith who interested handicapper Campbell in the meet and had him direct it for Father Galanti.

Lieutenant John Livingstone, A. A. U. Commissioner for Troy and other upState cities, and James P. Eaton, who holds a like position in Schenectady, gave testimony against the athletes. It was Eaton who verified that Kiviat, on a yellow slip of paper, asked Campbell for $75 to compete in the district championships. The slip was not produced and it was learned from Campbell that it had been burned by his wife, who found it on the floor in Campbell's room and regarded it as insignificant.

In the Mount Carmel games, which resulted in the conviction of Kiviat, representatives of the Dartmouth A. A., Boston A. A., Fordham A. A., New York A. C., Union A. A., Hamilton A. A., numerous small clubs, and Harry Smith competed, but according to Campbell's testimony Kiviat was the only athlete who received more money than he was entitled to

Owing to the absence of counsel for the athletes, no decision could be announced whether an appeal of the Registration Committee's decision will be taken. The Irish-American A. C. will make known its stand today. An appeal may be taken to the Board of Managers of the Metropolitan Association and should they deny the appeal the matter will be placed before the Registration Committee of the National A. A. U.

OFFERS REPLICA OF CUP.

Sir Adam Beck Will Replace Canadian Trophy for Horse Show.

Sir Adam Beck, Director of Remounts for Canada in the Department of Militia and Defense, has offered a replica of the Canadian Challenge Cup for competition at this year's National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden. This announcement was made yesterday after a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Horse Show Association. The trophy will replace the original cup if the latter is not found in time for the Garden show.

Lord Decies is making every effort to locate the trophy from England, but has met with little success. The Executive Committee has applied to the French Government for its aid in tracing the cup, which was won at the last National Show at the Garden by a French officer now at the front. The desire of the officials to recover the Challenge Cup is due to the greatly enhanced sentimental value now attached to it as a result of its disappearance in the war. Alfred B. Maclay, Chairman of the Executive Committee, presided at the meeting.

Earlier in the day a party of Horse Show officials and judges, which included Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Robert A. Fairbairn, Alfred B. Maclay, John Mc. E. Bowman, and E. von der Horst Koch, were the guests of Charles A. Baudouine, one of the judges of harness ponies at the Garden, who is the only amateur whip in New York now driving four in hands daily in the park. Mr. Baudouine took his guests to the Claremont on his coach, starting from the Biltmore.

Freshmen Swim Best of C. C. N. Y.

By scoring all the points in three events the freshmen of the College of the City of New York defeated the sophomores in the annual freshman-sophomore swimming meet in the college natatorium. The showing of the freshman team brightens the swimming outlook at the college. Liebner, who won the dive, bids fair to surpass the form displayed by O'Connell, who has graduated. The point score was: Class of 1919, 32 points; class of 1918, 21 points. The best contest was the 100-yard swim. Schoenberg of the lower class pressed Bosworth, who holds the college record for the distance all the way. The sophomore swimmer proved the stronger near the finish, and won by a yard. The 50-yard swim proved a disappointment. The sopha' best swimmer slipped on his start and was unplaced, three freshmen finishing within inches of each other in slow time. The summaries:

600-Foot Relay.—Won by 1918, (Hays, Cording, Howay, Bosworth;) 1919, second. Time—2:52.

50-Yard Swim.—Won by Edelman, 1919; Kurzman, 1919, second; Friedlander, 1919, third. Time—0:32 2-5.

Fancy Dive.—Won by Liebner, 1919, with 69 points; Chambers, 1919, second, with 35¼ points; Goldberg, 1918, third, with 33 points.

Plunge for Distance.—Won by Lewis, 1919, 52 feet; Auerbach, 1919, 51½ feet, second; Pepple, 1919, 46 feet, third.

220-Yard Swim.—Won by Howay, 1918; Baehr, 1919, second; Karston, 1918, third. Time—3:07 2-5.

100-Yard Swim.—Won by Bosworth, 1918; Schoenberg, 1919, second; Bornoman, 1918, third. Time—1:06 4-5.

N. Y. A. C. to Aid Sullivan Fund.

The New York Athletic Club has come to the aid of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Fund, and a campaign has been started in the Mercury Foot organization which, it is thought, will add at least $2,000 to the fund now being raised by the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. Through Martin S. Paine, treasurer of the Mercury Foot club, the members have been asked to contribute from $1 to $5, or any sum exceeding that amount, to the fund. This move was approved at the special meeting of the club held last week, and although notices were issued only Tuesday, money is already being turned into the fund. No announcement to the effect has been made yet, but it is probable that the money subscribed by the New York A. C. members will go toward a fund which will be placed in trust for Mr. Sullivan's widow.

RECORD BOXING ENTRY.

Amateur Season Starts with Almost 100 in New York A. C. Tourney.

A record for entries was established at the first Winter amateur boxing tournament held under the auspices of the New York Athletic Club last night in the club's gymnasium. Almost 100 aspirants for pugilistic honors of various weights took part in the preliminary bouts.

The entries were so numerous that two bouts were put on at the same time. The large gymnasium was crowded with members and their friends and the overflow went to the boxing room on the next floor, where a temporary ring had been built, and where between fifteen and twenty bouts were held.

Of the individual classes, the 110-pound division had the largest representation, and these youngsters put up some fast and interesting bouts. C. Leonard, a brother of Benny Leonard, the professional boxer, had an easy task in the 130-pound class. He was scheduled to box L. Kurtz of St. Bartholomew's Club, but the pace was too fast for the latter, and he quit before the first round was half over.

C. Pilkington easily defeated J. Nieburh, unattached, in the 120-pound division, while the judges gave S. E. Lipsky the decision over R. G. Sauer after three fast rounds. The summary:

110-Pound Class, Preliminaries.—M. Hockstein, Jersey Harriers, defeated M. Silverman, Educational Alliance, three rounds, judge's decision; E. Neithardt, Wormosa C. C., defeated J. Bowdan; unattached, three rounds, judge's decision; M. Smilowitz, Educational Alliance, defaulted to G. Denette Ozanam A. A.; W. Segelman, unattached, defeated J. Multz, unattached, stopped by referee in second round; T. Eisenstadt, New West Side A. C., defeated A. Morris, East Side House, judges' decision; G. Ratz, Glenco A. C., defeated B. Rambler, East Side House, referee's decision; E. Guimetti, Ozanam A. A., defeated S. Osborne, unattached, referee's decision; J. Seigleman, unattached, defeated A. Leifmenstein, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; T. Eisenstein, unattached, defeated F. Prienzenzio, Y. M. C. A., in one round.

130-Pound Class.—C. Leonard, unattached, defeated L. Kurtz, St. Bartholomew's Club; latter quit in first round. M. Leits, Educational Alliance, defeated E. Weinstein, unattached, in one round; G. Schroder, East Side Y. M. C. A., defeated W. Dickinson, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; P. Comerford, Ozanam A. A., defeated G. Mazzio, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; C. Leonard defeated S. Brads, in one round; H. Richards, unattached, defeated M. Eddleman, unattached, in one round.

140-Pound Class.—M. Stark, Ninety-second Street Y. M. H. A., defeated M. Kline, Union Settlement, judges' decision.

120-Pound Class.—P. Farrell, unattached, defeated Joe Recht, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; S. E. Lipsky, unattached, defeated R. G. Lauer, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision; J. Fischella, E. R. C. 71, defeated H. Strangler, Ruis House; stopped by referee in first round. A. Enz, Paulist A. C., defeated S. Neichanberg, unattached, three rounds, referee's decision; C. Pilkington, Union Settlement, defeated J. Nieburh, unattached, three rounds, judges' decision.

Dundee and Ritchie Are Next.

Johnny Dundee and Willie Ritchie, two of the best lightweights before the public, are putting on the finishing touches to their training for their ten-round bout on Tuesday night at Madison Square Garden. Both are boxers of the sensational order, and as a result an interesting contest should be witnessed. Dundee, who boxed Freddie Welsh at New Orleans about eighteen months ago, is after another bout with the lightweight champion, but the latter refuses to consider Dundee unless he wins from Ritchie. Joe Mooney and Paul Freda were matched yesterday for the semi-final of ten rounds.

WESTFIELD LINKS TEST FOR WOMEN

Hills and Dales Too Difficult for Many Players—Mrs. Lawrence Wins.

A new gross score prize-winner came forward yesterday in the one-day tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association on the links of the Westfield Golf Club when Mrs. C. B. Lawrence of Plainfield carried off the prize with a score of 101. Her net of 101, 14—87 also led the field, but the two prize rule prevented her from getting it.

Another player who never has won a cup came to the fore when Mrs. A. E. Keller of the home club, with 109, 14—95, took the net. After the medal round a driving competition was run off, the professional, A. J. Conway, donating a club for second place. Mrs. H. Reeve Stockton of Plainfield won, with Mrs. Irving Brown of Haworth second.

The Westfield course is only a nine-hole circuit, so the competitors had to play twice around to obtain an eighteen-hole total. There were many players who found the hills and dales too difficult for them, and as a result fully two dozen failed to return cards. Mrs. Stockton, after difficulty on the seventh and again on the ninth green, picked up. Mrs. F. B. Ryan of Cranford, who had 49 for the first round, might have taken the gross prize of the day, but she became discouraged at the pond hold and also picked up.

The next one-day tournament, which will be the last this season, is scheduled for Monday at the Hackensack Golf Club. Yesterday's scores:

SQUASH TENNIS SCHEDULE.

Fall Invitation Tourney at Columbia Club to Open Season.

The playing season of the National Squash Tennis Association will start next month, when the Fall invitation scratch tournament will be held at the Columbia University Club, beginning Nov. 6. During the last few seasons the interest in the game has grown considerably, and it is now one of the leading sports among the college clubs. The annual handicap tournament will be played at the new Yale Club, starting on Dec. 6, while on Jan. 15 the Class B championship will begin at the Brooklyn Heights Casino. The national championship tournament is scheduled for the Harvard Club on Feb. 5.

The Class B championship is a new feature on the squash schedule and was inaugurated because of the increased interest among Class B players. The new Yale Club has three standard courts and the Harvard Club has two new courts and has standardized two old ones. The Columbia Club has also added a new court and standardized two old ones. The Princeton Club and the Squash Club have combined this season to enter a Class A team, which will increase the class to four teams, one more than last season.

The Princeton and Yale Clubs will be new entries in the Class B event, which will give a total of five entries. The schedule for the Metropolitan League team matches follows:

CLASS A TEAM MATCHES.

Four Teams of Seven Each.—Dec. 2, Princeton-Squash at Casino, Harvard at Columbia; Dec. 16, Columbia at Squash Club, Casino at Harvard; Dec. 23, Harvard at Princeton Club, Columbia at Casino; Jan. 6, Casino at Squash Club, Columbia at Harvard; Jan. 13, Princeton-Squash at Columbia, Harvard at Casino; Jan. 20, Princeton-Squash at Harvard, Casino at Columbia.

Loomis Wins Cross-Country Run.

J. Loomis of the Erasmus Hall High School won the three-mile cross-country run held over the Prospect Park course yesterday afternoon in 20:37. The run was closed to athletes from Erasmus Hall and Manual Training High School, and the Erasmus runners defeated their opponents in the point score by one point, Erasmus getting 28 to Manual's 27. A field of thirty-nine athletes started and ten finished. The ten to finish were: J. Loomis, Erasmus, 20:37; C. Beggs, Manual, 20:38; P. Laubes, Erasmus, 20:39; R. Swayne, Manual, 20:45; R. Halstead, Manual, 20:48; J. Rogers, Erasmus, 20:50; V. Curnaw, Manual, 20:53; L. McGourgle, Erasmus, 20:58; A. L. McMulkin, Erasmus, 20:59; A. Mahaison, Manual, 21:09.

Fitzgerald as Presiding Steward.

Christopher J. Fitzgerald has accepted a position as presiding steward of the race meeting to be held in Cuba this Winter under the auspices of the Cuba-America Jockey Club. For many years Mr. Fitzgerald has been a conspicuous figure on the Eastern race tracks, officiating as starter and filling other positions. He is well qualified for the position and is regarded as a high-class man by horsemen and racegoers, and his presence in Cuba will add prestige to the racing game there. Mr. Fitzgerald's appointment should attract many horsemen to Cuba.

JUNIOR AND SENIOR RUNS.

Both the junior and senior national cross country championships of the Amateur Athletic Union will be contested over the three-mile course at Van Cortlandt Park this Winter, if the suggestion of Frederick W. Rubien, Chairman of the National Championship Committee, is adopted by his associates. Rubien yesterday asked for a mail vote on the question of holding the junior and senior events on the Van Cortlandt course on Dec. 11 and 18, respectively.

The New England Association, through Edward L. Babb, the Boston member of the Championship Committee, some time ago made application for permission to conduct the junior title contest in Boston. The application was withdrawn, however, when Rubien called the attention of the association to the heavy expense the New York clubs were under this year in sending track teams to the Panama-Pacific exposition championships, and how impracticable it would be for them to send teams to Boston.

Babb then assured the Championship Committee that the New England Association would defray the expenses of a junior team to the title run, and probably will select the harriers of the Dorchester Club which has made a sweep of the more important distance runs around Boston this year as its representatives. The Dorchester Club is scheduled to compete in a dual, hill and dale chase with the Harvard cross-country team on Nov. 13.

The selection of Van Cortlandt Park as the scene of both the national championships may eliminate Prospect Park from the list of cross country courses. Last year the junior metropolitan and junior national races were contested over the rough Brooklyn trail. The Metropolitan Association has not yet decided definitely on the dates for their titular events, but just now the opinion prevails that both events should be held at Van Cortlandt Park. The present plan is to stage the races on Nov. 20 and Dec. 4, and it is not improbable that one of the events may be awarded to Brooklyn.

We Think This Is Sensible Reasoning—
We Believe You Will, Too

THIS is the best time of year to buy your motor car.

Don't wait until spring.

There is nothing to be gained by waiting—and something may be lost.

For you may pay more for your car in the spring.

Materials Going Up

A great flood tide of prosperity has set in and raw materials are advancing very rapidly.

If we had to buy material for the Chalmers Six-40 in the present market we would surely have to price the car at least $100 more.

You are thus saved a considerable amount. You are buying a car for $1350 that is worth a great deal more.

We Foresaw the Rise

For we bought ten months ago, in a much lower market, and therefore can leave the wonderful price of $1350 undisturbed—for the present.

We are building a great quantity of these cars. But the tremendous demand for the first three months—an increase of over 300 per cent—has been such that we now seriously doubt whether we can meet the balance of the season's requirements with material already bought.

And if we have to buy another "making order," at present prices the price of the Six-40 will simply have to go up nearly, if not quite, $100.

We can guarantee every buyer that there will be no reduction in the price of this car next spring.

But we are sorry we cannot guarantee there will be no increase.

A Better Reason for Buying Now

There is, however, another reason wholly aside from price why you should buy your car now.

Those who own motor cars are really getting the most enjoyment out of them just now.

For there is no better time to tour in the country or drive in the city than the beautiful autumn days we will have between now and December first.

Improves Your Health

The air is crisp. It gets into your blood—brings the color to your cheeks.

Motoring in its coolness rests the tired body and throws off the fatigue of the day's work.

It will do you and your entire family more good than anything else you could do.

And think of the delightful surprise for the family—a car out in front they did not expect until spring.

But we suggest that you do not attempt to surprise your wife. Take her along when you buy the car. For one woman's judgment on quality, comfort and easy riding is worth that of a hundred men.

A Touring Car and Closed Car—One Price

Then, when winter comes, for only $350 we can fit your Six-40 touring car (Price $1350) with the handsome Chalmers Palanquin, which will make it look like a "built-to-order" limousine. It will give you all the pleasure and comfort the highest priced closed car could give. Think it over—only $350! Isn't it really a fine investment for winter?

In the spring you can take off the Palanquin top and have the perfectly appointed touring car for summer service. This top is so built that it can be taken apart and stored in a small corner of your garage, which removes the objection of bulk.

Have the Added Pleasure Now

Again we say there is nothing to be gained by delaying your purchase. The chances are you will pay more for your car in the spring; and you will be out not only the extra money, but the added pleasure and enjoyment that will be yours if you buy a car now.

A visit to our sales room will show you all the latest Chalmers models and implies no obligation to buy. We guarantee you will not be importuned by a salesman.

Just drop in and see the cars while it is on your mind. And don't forget—materials are going up.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL TEAMS COMPLETE HARD WORK FOR THEIR GAMES TOMORROW—BILLIARDS

YALE FRESHMEN DEFEAT 'VARSITY

Youngsters Frequently Smear Attack Before It Gets Under Way.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 21.—Closing their preparation for the Washington and Jefferson game with a scrimmage against the freshmen, the Yale 'Varsity were today defeated 6 to 0. A 20-yard side-line run and the tackle plunge by Wallace Charles Winter, Jr., took the 'Varsity's measure. Winter is the son of one of Yale's most famous tackles who was graduated twenty-two years ago. He came down from the Hotchkiss School this Fall, and is one of the most aggressive members of the Yale Cubs' back field. He is the first freshman to score a touchdown against the 'Varsity this year.

Although the 'Varsity took the ball from their 20-yard line to the freshmen 10-yard line, they lost possession of it on a forward pass, and did not score during the afternoon. Because of the warm weather and the absence of Wilson, the 'Varsity machine moved slowly, and the attack was frequently smeared by the freshmen before it got under way. The 'Varsity made no long gains.

Church and Blodgett were used as the 'Varsity ends. The coaches decided to rest Captain Aleck Wilson, and, as his understudy, Bill Savage, slightly injured his knee yesterday, Ames of the third team ran the eleven. Guy Hutchinson assisted in the quarter-back coaching, and Jim Rodgers in the rush-line instruction.

The practice was open and the scrimmaging lasted fifteen minutes. Tomorrow the squad will go to the Bowl for half an hour's signal rehearsal. Today's line-up, which is expected to be the one used Saturday, except that Moseley will return to left and Wilson to quarter back, was as follows:

WALLACE IS ELIGIBLE.

Harvard Centre Rush Acceptable to Yale and Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—The Harvard Athletic Committee announced this evening that, after due consideration and conference with the Yale and Princeton athletic authorities, Don J. Wallace, last year's 'Varsity centre rush, had been declared eligible to play with the University team this Fall. Wallace came to Cambridge from the University of Southern California three years ago, and while on the Coast played soccer football for his university.

The Harvard A. A. considers rush playing soccer, which is considered a minor sport, should not make Wallace ineligible to play three years of Rugby football at Cambridge. The committee decided that, according to the Harvard rules, Wallace was eligible, but put the matter up to Yale and Princeton. Telegrams several days ago sent word that Wallace was regarded as eligible to play against them, and tonight word to the same effect was received from those in authority at New Haven.

Wallace has been keeping in trim all Fall, and is ready to get into the Harvard line-up at any time. Whether he will be used, however, probably will not be decided until after the Cornell game on Saturday.

Changes in Lafayette Lineup.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTON, Penn., Oct. 21.—For the first time this year Coach Crowell closed the gates of March Field and worked the Lafayette team in secret. The team was in splendid physical condition and showed more vigor than they have in the practices for some days. There were a number of important changes in the line-up, and Coach Crowell with the assistance of Coach Baillin, is evidently planning to build an entire new aggregation for the game with Pennsylvania on Oct. 30. Lowe was shifted from his position on the line to the back field to the quarter post. Hartman took his place at the extremity. Ryon was placed at guard, instead of tackle. Livzey and Mummert were placed at tackle. Scovi was back in uniform this afternoon, but he did not get into the scrimmage, which was marked by sensational running in the broken field by Hill, the clever half back, who starred in the Delaware game yesterday.

Building Team Around Cahall.

Special to The New York Times.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Penn., Oct. 21.—The plays which are being built around Cahall, Lehigh's quarter back, were perfected to quite a satisfactory degree this afternoon at Lehigh. In building up this strong defense around his premier drop-kicker Resident Coach Keady kept his men out in Taylor Stadium until it was too dark to see the ball. The tendency yesterday of the men to get mixed up in their signals was absent today. Still, to be on the safe side, the men were told to come to the gymnasium after supper, where an hour was spent in signal work and a general school of instruction. What is considered the most powerful backfield Lehigh has had in years, because of their triphammer plunging ability, Coach Keady has now been able to get together in Halstead, full back; Maguinnes and Keady, half backs, and Cahall, quarter back. There are few better back-field quartets in college ranks.

Williams Rips Up Scrub Line.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Oct. 21. — The most marked improvement in form of the entire season was displayed by the Willia ms 'Varsity football team here this afternoon on Weston Field. Assisted by Captain Payson of the 1914 eleven and Howard E. Ellis, star tackle on the same aggregation, Coach Daly instilled considerable "pep" and fight into the first string men, with the result that they tore up the scrub team on both offense and defense. Repeatedly the veteran backs crashed through the scrub line for large gains, and when on the defense completely smothered every play directed against them. Only once, on a forward pass, were the second string men able to make a long gain, and on other occasions were thrown for a loss once probably out of every three trials. Only one shift was made in the line-up today, H. Wright taking the full back position while Captain Tomkins coached from the sidelines.

Stevens Has Long Practice.

It was after dark when the Stevens team left the field last night after the hardest workout they have had this season. The engineers cannot get on the field for practice until 4 o'clock, so they have to use every available minute. The 'Varsity and Scrubs had their daily scrimmage, and although neither side scored the Scrubs showed up the weakness of the 'Varsity line. The first team backs made some long gains around the ends. Rogers is still undecided about two positions in the line, and there may be a general shake-up before the game with Union.

Dies of Football Injury.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 21.—Bryan Scott, who was injured in the St. Louis University-Knox College football game here last Saturday, died late today. Scott was on the Knox team and was injured while making a tackle. He struck the opposing player with his head, instead of with his shoulder, and dislocated vertebrae in his neck.

TIGERS TAKE A REST.

Only Second and Scrub Elevens Do Hard Work on Gridiron.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 21.—The excessive heat today interposed to give Princeton's 'varsity rest from their hard practice of the week. Although Coach Rush had planned for a fairly hard workout the heat caused him to spare his men, and the 'varsity took part in no scrimmage. The second team was lined up against the scrubs for a short while, and after everybody else had been excused two scrub teams scrimmaged together.

The program for the afternoon mainly called for signal practice and a demonstration of known Dartmouth plays by the scrubs. The signal practice was the feature of secret practice on the old field and little else was attempted there. Three 'varsity elevens, one generaled by Captain Flick, one by Ames, and another by Blake, ran through their plays for one hour.

Although the emphasis appeared to be mainly on the simple plays, there was more open work in evidence than usual. All of the backs took turns tossing the ball in these plays. The nearest approach to 'varsity scrimmage was seen when the scrubs were lined up against the regulars on the open plays, but no tackling was allowed.

Moving down to the new stadium the kicking game attracted the attention of the men. Driggs and Law were put at the punting end, while Tibbott, Shea, and Ames tried some field goals from within the forty-yard line. Tibbott proved the steadiest of the trio, but Shea put one over the bar from the 35-yard line at a difficult angle. Several punts were tried with the team lined up, and the ends got a tryout on getting down the field. Both Highley and Brown showed to advantage in this line.

As a defensive measure Rush had his scrub eleven coached in all the Dartmouth plays that they knew, and had them go through the repertoire against the 'varsity. Again no tackling was allowed. Defense against forward passes came in for its share of the day's work. In this department the improvement was very marked and several of the attempts of the scrubs were intercepted by the 'varsity backs.

While the team was having an off day the Princeton rooters were put through a hard drill by Haskell, head cheer leader. A band of 500 marched down to the stadium, where they practiced their songs and yells throughout the practice.

Dartmouth to Practice Here.

Special to The New York Times.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 21.—After running through light signal practice thirty men of the Dartmouth football squad left this afternoon for the Princeton game on Saturday. Over 700 men from the undergraduate body marched to the field and cheered the team as it left. In spite of fears for the team's defeat, enthusiasm is high, and over 200 men will follow the team by special train tomorrow. The team that will start the game is: Emery, left end; Captain McAuliffe, left tackle; Merrill, left guard; Baxter, centre; Spears, right guard; Cotton, right tackle; Dussossoit, right end; McDonough, quarter back; Gerrish, left half back; Thielscher, right half back; Duhamel, full back. Many second-string men will probably get into the game, especially in the backfield and at the ends. The ends are the weakest spots in the New Hampshire team. Both of the men, though hard players, are inexperienced, and will probably be replaced before the end of the game. Hager and Soutar will probably get a chance to make their letters. McDonough will start at quarter back, but Coach Cavanaugh is likely to use Worthington before the end of the game. The substitutes taken were: Ends, Hager, Soutar, Gibson, F. McDonough, Burns; tackles, Fishback, Trier; guards, Colby, Scully; centres, Gile, Youngstrom; quarter backs, Worthington, Holbrook, White; backs, Carolan, Ponder, Tyler, Duhamel, Lehman, Barrows. The team will stay at the Hotel Cumberland in New York and practice tomorrow at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn.

It is generally believed that the Big Green team which faces Princeton in Tigertown on Saturday will not be up to the standard of Dartmouth elevens which Cavanaugh has been turning out during the last few years. The fact that the Dartmouth team has had no real test so far this year makes it difficult to get a line on its scoring power against a foe such as Princeton, but it is well known that the coaches have been experiencing great difficulty in getting backfield men to fill the places made vacant by the graduation of such stars at Whitney and Ghee. A factor which has dampened the enthusiasm of the Dartmouth followers is the large number of injuries which the team has suffered this year. Every game has added one or two cripples to the list, and, while most of them will be able to go against Pennsylvania and Syracuse, they won't get a chance against the Tigers.

Rutgers Resumes Drilling.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 21.—After a three days' rest, during which none of the regulars donned a suit, the Rutgers football squad resumed practice this afternoon on Neilson Field. The lay-off has done the men a world of good, and the work was characterised by snap and dash. In the scrimmage with the scrubs the 'Varsity showed to advantage and had little difficulty in penetrating the opposing line. George Foster Sanford is spending considerable time on Jackson, the former Andover Captain, who gives promise of developing into a star tackle. He played part of the game against Muhlenberg on Saturday and showed up well. Another man who is attracting attention by his aggressive work is Cole, the Erasmus Hall boy who started the Muhlenberg contest in preference to several of last year's regulars. Miller, the chubby centre, is again out in uniform after a three weeks' absence, and will probably play the pivot position for the remainder of the season. Kelley, the Stamford High School "phenom," who has been unable to play all season because of a sprained ankle, is doing light work and will be in shape in a few days. Rutgers will not play this Saturday, but on Oct. 30 the team will play the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College at Newark.

Two Dog Shows at McAlpin.

Two dog shows are scheduled for the Hotel McAlpin by next week and will formally open the season. On Wednesday the Pomeranian Club will hold forth and on Friday The Toy Dog will stage its first show. A number of novelties will be introduced by the latter organization both in entertainment features and competitive classes, while several trophies have been offered for coming Pomeranians, most of which must be won three times before becoming the absolute property of the exhibitor. The judges for Friday's event are Miss Clarice Litthaur, English toy spaniels and Japanese; Miss Ellen Lafin, Pomeranians; Mrs. A. McClure Halley, Pekingese; H. L. Hoffman, French bulldogs; A. B. Webb, Boston terriers and English bulldogs; and A. B. Rosenberg, all other breeds and unclassified specials. As an innovation this season litter classes for puppies under three months will be added at each show.

Barnard A. A. Elects Officers.

At a meeting of the Barnard School Athletic Association the following officers were elected for this year: Perry R. F. Marshall, President; Clinton Brown, Vice President; William Backer, Secretary; Giles Tasman, Treasurer, and Robert Archbold, to membership on the Executive Committee. It is planned to have the interclass track meet in the near future.

BEST CORNELL TEAM OFF FOR CAMBRIDGE

Coach Al. Sharpe Says "It Will Take All That Harvard Has to Beat Us."

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 21.—"It will take all that Harvard has to beat us," said Dr. Albert H. Sharpe, Cornell's head football coach, this evening in addressing a crowd of 2,500 Cornell students who marched to the station to give the team its biggest send-off in history. "It will take all that Harvard has got," repeated the Cornell leader, as the big crowd cheered itself hoarse.

"In all my fifteen years of experience here this is the best lot of football material that has ever gone out of Ithaca," said Dan Reed, the veteran line coach.

"I promise that the team will do its very best, and we hope to bring that football here to add to our trophies in Schoellkopf Hall," said Captain Barrett.

This was the optimistic tenor of the farewell speeches made by the leaders of the Cornell football team just before the squad left for Cambridge. While Dr. Sharpe and his assistants are not confident of a victory they expect a tight game, and they are sure that Cornell will score both by touchdown and field goals.

The team held a final practice this afternoon, running through signals. Every man reported in good condition, and the coaches feel certain that they have come out of the slump in which they have been struggling for the past few days. Cornell is confident that her line is stronger than Harvard's and that the backfield is better balanced, but in generalship and in the fact that the game is to be played in Harvard territory admits that she is at a disadvantage.

The Cornell squad, which left here tonight headed by Coaches Sharpe, Reed, and Vanorman, and Jack Moakley, was as follows:

Ends—Shelton, Eckley, Zander, and Ryerson; tackles—Jameson, Gillies, Welles, Fisher, and Jewett; guards—Miller, Anderson, Bard, McKeage, and Tilley; centres—Cool and Brown; quarter backs—Barrett and Shock; half backs—Collins, Shiverick, Schlichter, Lewis, Benedict, and Hoffman; full backs—Fueller and Kleinert.

HARVARD BACKS LIGHT.

Crimson Not in Good Trim for Cornell Game Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—Harvard completed its preparation for the Cornell game this afternoon, tomorrow's practice being reserved for getting smoothness into the Crimson's own plays. There was a long scrimmage, and one which was the hardest of the week, but several of the regulars were missing from the line-up. Neither Harte nor Soucy was at end, L. Curtis and Weatherhead taking their places, while Duncan filled in at Cowan's place at right guard, and Rollins was in the back field in place of Mahan, who is still on the sick list.

Captain Mahan did not work in the hard scrimmage, but he did get into the play when the scrubs held up the regulars' attack at midfield. The Harvard leader tried a drop kick goal standing exactly in the middle of the field, and the ball passed over the bar from the crossbar. The 'Varsity scored a touchdown finally on line plays, with Wiggin, the former centre rush, taking the ball in the last play. Robinson also added a score for the 'Varsity, this coming on a drop kick from the 40-yard line. Robinson was used for a few times at quarter back. He played in this position as a substitute on the freshmen last year, and was pressed into service today because neither Watson nor Boles is in the best of shape. It is hardly likely, however, that he will be used in any of the remaining games.

Harvard, it appears, will have to rely on a light back field for the Cornell game. Horween was not in trim to work today, and his defensive play and interference this week has not been very good. Whitney was at full back today, while Rollins, who is a good end runner, and especially fast on fake kick plays, was very effective in the running attack. Harte and Soucy will be all right for Saturday, but are not expected to go through the entire game. Parson can play for a time, but Curtis is in far better condition to go through the game. Dexter Campbell, the 1901 Captain, joined the coaching staff today. The end situation here is one that needs a lot of attention, and Campbell has been very successful in getting a lot of speed out of the Crimson's wing material. Robinson played some fine defensive football this afternoon, and is likely to be used soon after the game begins on Saturday.

Army Team Badly Crippled.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 21.—Two sessions of football were engaged in by the Army football men today in preparation for the Georgetown game on Saturday. The squad reported for an hour's drill and a talk at 3 o'clock, and after the military drill tonight the men were sent out on the gridiron for a short workout. It was more of a substitute for the "real thing," as a half dozen of the headliners were missing on account of injuries. The hospital list in the Army camp has assumed such proportions this week as to cause real apprehension with the Georgetown game so close at hand. Yesterday's rough work incapacitated Oliphant, Mitchell, Weyand, and O'Hare. Ford, Coffin, and Parker have done no work since the Colgate game, and the line-up tonight was very much patched up. The back field was made up of Bringham, Hoge, and Page, the latter another new man who is showing up strongly of late. Almost everybody got a chance at one time or another in the play of the forwards, Captain Ernst Graves, the new line coach, following the game closely and criticising the play time and again. There was no scoring.

Indians' Charging Unsatisfactory.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Oct. 21.—Carlisle Indian Coaches Kelley and Welch put the 'Varsity through a strenuous workout this afternoon on Indian Field. The coaches are not satisfied with the charging of the line, and these players were put at the heavy bucking sled and shoved it around the field for thirty minutes. The back field and ends had twenty minutes at tackling the dummy, followed by running down the field under punts. Hawk Eagle, the aborigine guard, has been called home, and his place is being filled by Mays. Lassa, the other guard, has been shifted to end, and J. Morris takes Lassa's position. Signals required considerable attention this afternoon in order to accustom the players to their new positions, and a thirty-minute scrimmage against the reserves completed the afternoon's practice.

TWO FORDHAM CRIPPLES.

Corriden and Kane Hurt in Practice with N. Y. U. Eleven.

Weakened by the loss of Corriden from right end and Kane from right guard, both of whom were injured in the practice game against New York University on Wednesday, and with Delehanty still at centre in place of Treanor, the regular centre rush, the Fordham eleven yesterday opposed the "prep" team in its last scrimmage before the battle with Holy Cross at Fordham Field tomorrow. Benson, who got in against Connecticut Aggies last Saturday, took Kane's place, while Billy Grace was at right end. Grace played on Brooklyn Prep two years ago.

Although the patched-up team was strong enough against the prep yesterday, during the last part of the practice game the rooters were considerably worried over the probable outcome of tomorrow's game. For two years, ever since the 65 to 0 victory by Holy Cross over the weak team then representing Fordham, the Bronxites have been looking forward to tomorrow's battle. So far this year Holy Cross, with Anderson and Devlin as the two big factors, has been depending on the forward pass for most of its gains. As a result, when the "prep" started off yesterday by getting two first downs on heaves over the line, the coaches were considerably worried. A brief lecture by Harry Vaughn saw the 'Varsity brace, and after that the high school players were almost all the time on the defense. Dunn ripped off forty yards through right tackle, while Yule proved a veritable battering ram through centre. Grace showed up well in his new position, and was used to good advantage for interference.

The line-ups for both Holy Cross and Fordham have been announced. The Bronxites will have J. Conklin, left end; Mulcahy, left tackle; Kendrick, left guard; Delehanty, centre; Benson or Kane, right guard; May, right tackle; Corriden or Grace, right end; Dunn, quarter back; Coatwell, left half back; Butler, right half back, and Yule, full back. Holy Cross will depend on McCarthy, left end; O'Keefe, left tackle; Leach, left guard; Bradley, centre; O'Connor, right guard; Zimmerman, right tackle; Anderson, right end; Devlin, quarter back; Foley, left half back; Donnellen, right half back, and Bradly, full back. Tickets for tomorrow's Fordham-Holy Cross game have been placed on sale at Spalding's and Taylor's stores in this city.

COLUMBIA BATTERED UP.

Five of 'Varsity Men Will Not Be Able to Play Tomorrow.

Columbia football practice yesterday was very light. Three scrimmages have been held this week, and Head Coach Metcalf wanted to give his men a rest. After the usual signal drill the Varsity had final instructions in the offensive, and particularly in making interference. This afternoon the work will be confined to a short signal drill.

Announcement was made yesterday that at least five of the 'Varsity men will not play in the first game tomorrow against St. Lawrence on account of injuries. Captain Simonds has not recovered from his recent attack of blood poisoning, Monroe has an injured hip, Sulprizel and Glover have dislocated shoulders, and Korsand's leg is still giving him trouble.

There are still two or three positions over which there is an uncertainty. Left half back will be filled by either Donoho or Wadleton. Donoho will probably start and Wadleton will be substituted later in the game. It will be either Donaldson or Wilber for right tackle. The former is a slight favorite because of his weight. Miller has sufficiently recovered from an injured knee to start at quarter back, and Calder at left end will probably be substituted for Miller as he has done at times. Quarter back will also take place Healey will move from left tackle to end and Kennedy from guard to tackle. Van de Water will "sub" for Kennedy. Brown is likely to start at centre, Cleveland at right guard, Buermeyer at right end, Littauer at full back, and Ransbach at right half.

Shake Up Union College Team.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Oct. 21.—A general shake-up seems to be in the air for the Union College 'Varsity. This afternoon in practice a number of new men were tried out, the 'Varsity line in particular looking unfamiliar. Phil Mallen, formerly a backfield man, worked at end, with Young, a freshman, on the other wing. Captain Jeffers did not report, and Dubois took his place at tackle. Gardner, who has been at centre all year, went in at guard for Dubois, while Jackson, a veteran of two seasons on the 'Varsity, played the pivot position. Price was the other guard and Hay the other tackle. On the scrub opposing Price was a freshman, Bellinger, who showed up remarkably well for his first time in scrimmage. Price is the game of his life. Girling, whose work at halfback for the past two seasons has been excellent, shifted to quarterback, in place of Goff, for some time during scrimmage. This change, however, in no way reflected upon Goff's handling of the team, but seems to be a precaution taken by Fred T. Dawson, the coach, in case of injury to the clever freshman. Further changes are predicted by those on the inside, and the college may be handed a big surprise by the team that will oppose Stevens Tech on Saturday. Scrimmages tonight lasted till long after dark. The 'Varsity scored one touchdown, due to Dow Roof's brilliant line bucking, but the way was hard owing to the new material playing.

Columbia's Cross-Country Runs.

Cross-country work at Columbia will get under way this afternoon with the first of the annual series of Van Amringe runs, open to students in all four classes. About thirty have entered. The course is nearly four miles long and extends from South Field to Riverside Drive, around Grant's Tomb, to Ninety-seventh Street, and return to the field. The second run will be one week from today. These events have a blind handicap, and the winner is declared only after the aggregate scores of the series are computed.

Three-Day Dog Show.

A large entry is expected for the first of the dog shows which will be held at the Hippodrome this Winter. The event is set for the afternoons of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, with two silver cups as the trophies for each day. The competitions are open to thoroughbred dogs, which will be judged by three experienced men, Frank S. Sternberg, Harry A. Baxter, and H. E. Hoffman. No entry fee is required, and a dog is eligible for the show if it is at the Hippodrome by 2:30 in the afternoon. The entrance for owners with their dogs is on the West Forty-third Street side of the building. Many of the theatrical profession will take this opportunity of showing their dogs. Olive Fremstad of the Metropolitan Opera Company will enter one of her dogs. The exhibitors will have the opportunity of showing their entries to the audience in the Fifth Avenue scene of "Hip Hip Hooray."

N. Y. U. SEEKS MORE MEN FOR FOOTBALL

Good Substitute Material Lacking—Will Urge Eligibles to Come Out.

New York University is making further efforts to get more candidates out for the 'Varsity football team in order to meet the difficulties which the coaches have encountered in finding good substitute material for the regular team. Coach Reilley has devoted some attention to the matter, and as a result a list has been made of twenty-eight men who are in college and who, according to Reilley, are on the average better material than the men who have been reporting for the daily practices. In many cases it is felt that a little encouragement will induce these men to come out for the Violet eleven, as many are remaining out of the game because of ineligibility, parental objection, and for other reasons. The student body took the step yesterday of appointing a committee to look into the individual reasons that have been responsible for the failure of these men to appear on the field, and will try to induce most of them to come out while the season is still in its early stage.

Coach Tom Reilley put the Violet squad through a varied program yesterday afternoon, the practice period being divided between rudimentary drill in handling the ball and a rigorous scrimmage. It was the first time in several days that the coaches have had the players on the field without the prospect of scrimmaging with an outside eleven, and the opportunity was used to correct weak points in the Violet's playing which came out in the practices with Columbia and Fordham. Before beginning the scrimmage between the 'Varsity and scrub elevens the coaches gave the men a long drill in passing and catching the leather, with the idea of remedying the many fumbles which in the recent work-outs have marred the forwarding passing game. Cann, the principal figure of the New York back field, did the greater part of the tossing, and from the demonstration which he gave the Violet should experience no difficulty as far as accuracy in hurling the leather is concerned. In the 'Varsity scrub with the scrub played the regular eleven reviewed most of its offensive tactics, using a variety of straight-line plunging with which to gain ground.

The shift in the line, by which Captain Somers has been moved into the guard position instead of right tackle, was repeated again yesterday when the 'Varsity had the ball, but Somers remained out of the scrimmage during a greater part of the period in order to rest up for the game with Haverford on Saturday.

Middies Full of Fighting Spirit.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 21.—Friends of the Navy football team saw no lack of the fighting spirit of the old Navy teams in the work of the squad this afternoon. After a long spell of signal work, the first and second teams lined up for about a quarter of an hour, most of the time being spent in sending the line men down the field under Von Heimburg's punts. Later the third team and fourth-class eleven had a lively encounter. The improvement of Von Heimburg in his kicking has been notable this week, and the length of his punts this afternoon was good, and he also sent them high in the air, giving his ends and other linemen plenty of time to get to the receiving man. Captain Miles was at quarter back during the signal practice, but Luth succeeded him when the scrimmaging began. There were also changes in the line. H. M. Jones, the big fellow who has played so well at centre during the season, but who was slightly hurt in the Pennsylvania game on Saturday, was back in his place, and Harrison was at right end in place of Blodgett, who rested today.

Trinity Not Overconfident.

HARTFORD, Conn., Oct. 21.—The Trinity College football team has not improved as much as the coaches would have liked during the last week. Every game played this season has resulted in a victory for the Gold and Blue, but there have been pronounced faults in the work of the eleven that might prove disastrous against strong teams. Trinity will play Williams tomorrow, and, while there is confidence that the team will score a victory, it is not expected that the eleven will roll up a large score against the Williamstown collegians.

Columbia Rows Seven Miles.

Columbia crews increased the length of practice from six to seven miles yesterday afternoon on the Hudson. The water was rough and the work was rather hard. For the first time in more than two weeks the junior 'Varsity was ordered out. Owing to the many resignations in the squad, there were several changes in the boat of the second crew. It was as follows: Bow, Trowbridge; No. 2, Burghardt; No. 3, Piel; No. 4, Rene Wormser; No. 5, Lorenz; No. 6, Heoven; No. 7, Munroe; stroke, Felix Wormser; coxswain, Paddock. Munroe, who has been in the 'Varsity and who took a physical examination yesterday, was found to be in good condition and not suffering from stomach trouble, as was feared. For the present he will be seated in the second crew.

THE WRESTLERS MEET.

Zbyszko and Aberg Tax the Fitzgerald Building Elevators.

The tiny elevator in the Fitzgerald Building sagged and almost bulged yesterday afternoon when Alexander Aberg, accompanied by "the Russian Giant," Fukelofski, Waldek Zbyszko, and his 142-pound mulatto trainer, Bobby Dobbs, stepped into it. The lift operator was pushed into his corner until he looked little thicker than the rope with which he operated the machine. There was a groaning of machinery, a stuttering, staggering trip to the eleventh floor, where are the offices of Herr Rachmann, theatrical manager in Berlin when there is no war; American promoter when a wrestling match is on the tapis.

When those guys come down, they come down in chunks, not in a lump. Safety first," snapped the elevator man, as he deposited his cargo. "Must be some new stunt on at the Hip; Coney Island's closed."

"Those are the champion wrestlers of the world, who are going to thrash it out at Madison Square Garden Monday night," volunteered the ubiquitous reporter. "It would be good medicine, young man, to treat them with a heap of respect, or they're liable to eat you alive. They use men like Moran and Coffey for dumb bells in morning practice."

"And to think I didn't know I was lugging up real champs. My head must be a kidney bean. No wonder I'm nothing but an elevator boy."

In Herr Rachmann's office things were different. Hats came off with a low obeisance. The best, and biggest, and softest chairs were dragged into the den of Herr Rachmann. Gold pens took the place of steel nibs. Even the nap on the rugs brightened up on the worn spots. George Bothner smiled amiably at the mastodonic wrestlers. He seemed a pigmy beside them, and time was when the boys at the New York Athletic Club, who were trying to learn the mysteries of wrestling, deemed Bothner a mountain of flesh, as they tried to turn him over with any old kind of a hold they could get. A half dozen more giants of as many nationalities, but all gutturally German in speech, drifted in. That office looked as if Brobdignag had been transferred from a musty volume of Gulliver's Travels into the office up near the tip of the Fitzgerald Building. The live press agent was for sending up to the Museum of Natural History for the restorations of the mastadon, the megatharium, the dinosaur, and their lapdog kins, the mounted Jumbo and the Colonel's white rhinoceros. "What a chance for a suitable setting for a page picture in every paper in the city, I've missed," he groaned.

With the office attendants recovered from their surprise, the assembled company were ready for business. That was to sign articles of agreement for the wrestling bout to finish at Madison Square Garden on Monday night next. The articles were read to them, met with their approval, and Zbyszko and Aberg attached their names to the document, and agreed that, comparatively small as he was, Bothner was full about the right size to wrestle three. He had served them as such last June. Then after grappling, and puffing, and struggling for three hours and forty minutes, these two giants failed to get a throw out of it, and their bout, which was to end the international contest which had run for five weeks, had to be called a draw, because the crowd of spectators would let it go no further, as both of the big men had seemingly reached the limit of human endurance.

Wrestlers' Money for Charity.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 21.—Mayor Bosse today was holding the box office receipts of a wrestling match held here last night, in which Joseph Stecher, Dodge, Neb., defeated "Strangler Ed" Lewis, Lexington, Ky. Claiming that the promoters did not live up to their guarantee of a fair match, the Mayor says a settlement will be offered the wrestlers and promoters by which two-thirds of the proceeds will be given to local charities. The match last night ended in a decision for Stecher when Lewis fell through the ropes and said he had been injured.

Notes for the Boxers.

Twenty-eight rounds of boxing are offered the patrons of the New Polo Athletic Association tonight. The program consists of two ten-round bouts and two fours. The feature event will bring together Terry Miller of the east side and Young Seiger of Hoboken. The second ten-round contest will see Bobby Dunn of the Bronx and Frankie Young of the east side in action. The other bouts will be between Smiling Willie and Buddy Brown and Laughing Larry and Frankie Farmer. The American Sporting Club will make another bid for local patronage on Monday night when Jack McCoy and Tom Kelly will be the headliners. The semi-final bout of ten rounds between Harry Gattle and Tommy Hogan of Buffalo should provide a lively contest.

Professor Mike Donovan, former boxing instructor at the New York Athletic Club, will second his son, Young Mike Donovan, in the latter's ten-round bout with Charlie Shands, the Yonkers middleweight, on Monday night at the Olympic Club of Harlem. Marty Cross and Farmer Sullivan are scheduled for the semi-windup. The curtain raiser will bring together Scotty Welsh and Young Milligan.

Manager Weismantle of the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn offers three attractions to the patrons of his club. For tomorrow night Leach Cross, the fighting dentist, and Harry Fitzpatrick will furnish the fireworks in the windup. The six-round preliminaries will bring together Jimmy Dunn and Young Irving Murray, Sailor Krug and Willie Bacon, and Young Bruno and Kid Lewis. The matinee entertainment on Monday afternoon will consist of a ten-round bout between Jack Coyne of Orange, N. J., and Charles Zappos, the Greek lightweight, and semi-professional try-outs, while Next Monday night's bill will be headed by Jack Dillon and Jim Flynn, with Sally Woods of Bay Ridge and Shaw of Brooklyn in the semi-windup.

DE ORO INCREASES LEAD OVER SLOSSON

Cuban Again "The Student's" Master in Three-Cushion Match at Doyle's.

Alfred De Oro increased his lead over George Slosson to 28 points in the fourth night's play of the 250-point, three-cushion billiard match at Doyle's Academy last night. The Cuban defeated Slosson last night by a score of 50 to 35, the totals for the match now standing De Oro 200 and Slosson 172. The match will be finished this evening.

De Oro's billiards last night was both good and bad. He started off well and for the first seven innings averaged two and had runs of 4, 8, and 8. Then he started a long string of misses and for twenty innings was able to gather only three carroms. The Cuban lost his control of the balls and was a long time recovering his form. It wasn't until the fortieth inning that he got going with a string of 4 and another of 5 in the forty-second trip to the table.

Slosson was not up to his usual form at any time. "The Student's" stroke was so weak at times that he fell short of his object ball by several inches. Three times he was lucky and made his point with unexpected kiss shots which brought forth much applause from the gallery. Twice during the match Slosson resorted to safety play.

De Oro had an unusually large number of zero innings. Although he ran out his 50 points in 50 innings, he had 41 innings of monotonous misses. If Slosson had played as well as he did in other periods of the match he could have gained much ground because of De Oro's lapse of play last night, but instead of taking advantage Slosson's stroke was so poor that he made miscues and several misses of simple shots. When Slosson did manage to count the carroms, however, it was usually the result of clever play. Last night's spectators included a number of women. The score by innings:

TRUST PROBLEMS, NEW AND OLD.

So long as neither politicians nor men of business will let the trust problem alone the pot will bubble, and seldom more vigorously than in these present days. It is needless to emphasize the part the Government is playing. It suffices to mention the railway conspiracy trial which will run for weeks or months, and the third case against the Shoe Machinery Trust just begun in St. Louis. Already there were pending civil and criminal cases against these alleged conspirators in restraint of trade, and that the Government is persistent is indicated by the fact that the third case was brought under the Clayton law because the defendants refused to allow amendment of the case against them under the Sherman law. The activity of the Government is beyond doubt.

On the other hand, the new combination in the steel trade is proceeding regardless of the official declaration that the eagle's eye was upon the combination. It is announced this week that all the sugar refiners had agreed upon their price policy. The American company led the way, and the "others," sometimes called the independents, "agreed to adopt and adhere" to it. The prices are not to be fixed "harmoniously," not at all. But having been fixed independently nobody will be able to get a cut price. Also there is forming a combination in the sugar trade resembling the combination, sometimes spelled conspiracy, in the steel trade, the idea being to consolidate and control the neighboring supply of raw sugar in adjacent islands which enjoy a preference under the present tariff. Of a different sort is the International Manufacturers' Sales Company of America. Fifty manufacturers are uniting to promote their exports by unity of action, especially in Russia. Together they can endure costs and realize benefits impossible to them otherwise, and also unavailable to those not in the combination. They are preparing not only to assist each other in selling, but also in financing. The company is preparing to sell on credit against notes guaranteed by foreign banks. Upon the security of these notes American banks will be guaranteed in paying the American sellers, the cost of the operation being absorbed in the price to the Russian buyers.

These are only some of the developments of the current days. Government is discrediting its own operations by lack of teamwork between its branches. For example, Congress passed the Clayton law and its twin, the Trade Commission Bill. Yet the prosecuting arm of the Government proceeds under the old Sherman law in some cases, under the Clayton law in other cases, and never consults the Trade Commission. One of the breakfast food companies considers that it is suffering from unfair competition from a company including former employés that is selling a product of a similar sort and in a similar package. Is there any application to the Federal Trade Commission? Is there any resort to the Clayton law? Both were enacted to meet such cases, and business waves both aside, and also the Sherman law. Remedy against fraud and unfair competition is sought in a Federal court "in equity and at common law." As for the various combinations in defiance of the Attorney General and the Sherman law, it is probable that they think they know the law as well as either the Government attorneys, or perhaps even, with the assistance of the Supreme Court of the United States, as well as the Judges of the lower courts. Apparently we have passed the days when the law was to be learned by inquiry of an Attorney General, or even of a President. Apparently business men have reached the conclusion that the law is not in the keeping of any man or men, and that one man may know it as well as another, if he seeks to learn it and follow it.

Business cannot stand still and is seeking hard to go ahead. Across the path stand prosecutions which are unsuccessful oftener than successful, and which are pressed even after defeats showing that business men were sustained by judicial authority. It is to be desired that bad men shall be punished, but there is little to be said in support of persistence with prosecutions in cases where it is found to be a fact that the public has been benefited and that compliance with the law was the intention of defendants. It is lamentable that Government and business should be at cross purposes. It is so even when Government prosecutions are sidetracked and ignored, or defied. The very latest twins of Congress appear to have gone the way of the forgotten Seven Sisters of New Jersey. Yet there are those who contend that new laws are the proper remedies for our economic troubles, and arraign business for doing the best it can under the redundancies and inconsistencies of uncounted statutes.

THE ACTORS' FUND.

The announcement this morning that a systematic country-wide campaign has been opened to obtain a large sum of money for the Actors' Fund of America will surprise nobody who comprehends how gravely a period of bad business affects the fortunes of the players. The Fund, which aims to care for the sick and destitute in the theatrical calling and provide means of sustenance for actors temporarily in need, expends about $70,000 yearly. Its treasury at present contains scarcely enough money to carry on its work for another year, and its requirements are increasing. No great charity could be more economically administered. The sums paid out annually for salaries and rent are insignificant, yet the aged and infirm in the profession are comfortably housed, the sick are provided with nurses and medical attention, and the actual wants of others are relieved.

A crisis has been reached in the history of the Actors' Fund. It is true that more capital is now invested in theatrical enterprises in this vast country than ever before, that money enough is annually lost and made in theatres to support respectably a small but not too economical national government. The actors have multiplied and in ordinary times the proportion of needy ones among them might be large; in these times it is too large for the resources of the Fund to supply all their wants. As the theatre exists everywhere the campaign for the Fund is to be carried on all over this country. The object is to secure a permanent endowment for the worthy charity which has always depended for its maintenance upon the occasional contributions of its well-to-do members and the profits of benefit performances. The movement has been taken up zealously and we have no doubt that it will be successful. The details of the plan are published elsewhere in THE TIMES today.

"A PUNK STATE."

The grapes in New Jersey are sour in the mouths of some of the champions of the Cause there and elsewhere. The acerbity of the beaten women politicians will be sweetened later. The brokers call women "bad losers," but the wail of the walloped on the morning after election is stereotyped. The suffragists have been defeated in the Jerseys, it seems, by the same old league of all the iniquities that always licks "our side." The "corrupt bosses," "the interests," the dear old truepennies, the Rum Power, the machine—the World, the Flesh, and the Devil against the children of light. Fraud and Corruption were "rampant," as usual. That great anti vote and majority in New Jersey could all plausibly be attributed to the ignorant, the political machine, the saloon keepers. Woman suffrage is right, therefore those who oppose it must be wrong, but there is no good in them. New Jersey is an unprogressive, a backward State. A distinguished Bay State suffragist calls New Jersey, in that urbane and polished English to be expected of the Boston Pale, "a punk State." Can there be so great angers in celestial minds?

Only with regret must Fact be summoned to testify against Poetry. New Jersey, as the Massachusetts indignant one knows on any day but the day after election, is the State of Mr. WILSON, of reform, progressive and even radical, and still forward-looking in its policies and its parties. It was because of his liberal and advanced theories and official action that he was named for President. To assail New Jersey as unprogressive because she has beaten woman suffrage is to forget the record. If they will forgive us for saying so, the woman campaigners who abuse Mr. WILSON'S State irresistibly remind us of angry children kicking at the chair against which they have bruised their shins. The decision of New Jersey against woman suffrage is especially significant because it is the decision of a progressive State, a soberly progressive State, not given to the worship of novelty for the mere sake of novelty. Deaf to voices that are always heard with respect, refusing to follow Mr. WILSON and Mr. GARRISON, New Jersey rejects a political experiment untried in the East and of at least doubtful service anywhere. When the country has so many vital questions, national and international, before it, when it needs all its thought and energy to adapt itself to the new financial and commercial situation made by the war, when the extension of its trade and banking demands the wariest attention, when tariff changes, new taxation, and the momentous issue of military and naval preparedness are discussed in every hamlet, when everybody waits for the revived general domestic prosperity which mighty crops and mighty export trade are sure to bring, what place has woman suffrage in the immediate program of politics?

In every State the public mind has more than enough to do without being distracted by that. And the case of New Jersey seems to show that the electorate, satiated with the unsettling and reforming movement that has been going on for fifteen years, is resolved for the present to prefer safety to adventure. After protracted, and on the whole fruitful, reform legislation, the conservatism which is at the bottom of the American political temperament, in spite of the fervors of the moment, reasserts itself. The postponement of woman suffrage, if it be merely postponed, causes no injury. Whereas, its adoption might.

This year is probably the most unfortunate time in which to try to persuade the voters to grant Votes to Women. Men's minds are occupied with matters much more important. Doubtless that delightful Massachusetts critic of New Jersey will be able to add three more "punk States" to her collection in November.

THE CITY'S PASSENGER TRAFFIC.

The traffic returns of the local railways show that the city is losing its elliptical form, and is becoming rounder. Ten stations north of Ninety-sixth Street report a decrease of travel on the subway, both the Broadway and the Lenox Avenue branches contributing to the number. There is only one station showing a decrease south of Ninety-sixth Street until Twenty-third Street is reached. There begins another series of eleven decreases, with but three exceptions, and only one of them considerable. The decreases at the southerly tip of Manhattan reinforce the inference from the decreases at the northern end, and further north.

That there are not fewer people riding sufficiently appears from the increase of over 5,000,000 fares. If more people are riding, despite numerous stations which show decreases over the length of the city, it follows that they must be riding in different directions. This idea is supported by the fact that a single station in Brooklyn now has a traffic approximating the entire branch on Broadway above Ninety-sixth Street. The riders are using increasingly the stations taking them southerly and easterly. The dividing line, the crest of the movement on Manhattan, the "great divide" of the riders on Manhattan Island, is at the two stations on Forty-second Street which, between them, furnish 45,000,000 fares.

There is no third in comparison with them. The Grand Central traffic is not separated regarding its directions, but at the Times Square station, although it has only local facilities, there are just about 7,000,000 riding each way, the southerly travel being a quarter million larger, whereas it used to be much smaller. It is now oftentimes as necessary to stand up to ride to Brooklyn as it used to be to ride to the Bronx. The trend to the east is as marked as to the south, and promises to be much emphasized in the near future. The Steinway tunnel is carrying large and increasing traffic, although it ends nowhere. The Queensboro Bridge is increasing its traffic, although it is still in the infancy of its usefulness, and kept there by the fact that it does no rapid transit business. Queens residents now are pressing for the extension of the facilities of the Steinway tunnel to the Long Island Railway, and for the operation of the elevated lines over the Queensboro Bridge before the subway trains can reach it.

When that is done it may be supposed that much of the travel which now goes south to get east may ride directly eastward. It would be rash to say that the northerly growth has been seriously checked. It would be more true to say that hereafter it will be less abnormally great, and that the easterly travel will assume its proper proportions under an equality of accommodation. It is all the same to Manhattan which ever way people ride, provided that they are kept within the city, and no compelled to live elsewhere by deficiency of transit or by oppressive financial legislation.

THE COURT HOUSE.

The appeal of the Court House Board to the Board of Estimate for final approval of the new Court House plans is based on sound and practical arguments. The almost useless delay since the plans were submitted, June 18, has caused a loss of $557,460, more than the cost of constructing the foundations of the building. Reports made to the Court House Board by its expert advisers, including Mr. GUY LOWELL, the architect; Mr. WALTER COOK, the consulting architect; Mr. GOODRICH, the consulting engineer, and others, dispose completely of the statements, charges, and suggestions made by Mr. TILDEN ADAMSON, Director of the Bureau of Contract Supervision, last Summer.

We thought at the time that Mr. ADAMSON had discovered a mare's nest in the Court House plans, and said so. But with his statements about clubrooms, extravagant library space, palatial dining rooms, a bar and a buffet, and various other supposed features of the plan, there has come a delay in the work for some months. The experts declare that Mr. ADAMSON'S statements were predicated upon "misinterpretations of the plans, specifications, and contracts." Some modifications have been made in the original plans of the building, its cost complete will be less than $10,000,000, and, although this is a huge sum, the city is practically committed to the expenditure, and there is no reason why more money should be wasted by delays.

MR. QUIGG AND THE BOGEY.

Mr. QUIGG, explaining to his constituents his part in the deliberations of the Constitutional Convention, tells them why he opposed the short ballot and will vote against the not very short ballot provision in the proposed Constitution. It is because in the hands of a strong Governor it would prove a mighty instrument of boss control and for the furtherance of his personal ambitions, and in the hands of a corrupt Governor the power of appointing so many officeholders would be an instrument of personal profit.

If the question of creating the President's Cabinet had come up in the Constitutional Convention of 1787 it is easy to imagine what lines the debate would have taken. Some one would have been sure to propose that the President appoint the members of his Cabinet, and some one else that they be elected in the same manner as himself. This is certain, because men's minds work in the same way, however the centuries change, and there are Quiggs as well as Roots in every age.

It is easy to imagine the argument that the Quigg of 1787 would have made. "In the hands of a strong President," he would have said, "it would prove a mighty instrument of boss control and for the furtherance of his personal ambitions, and in the hands of a corrupt President the power of appointing so many officeholders would be an instrument of personal profit. It is dangerous and undemocratic. Let the people rule."

If the Convention of 1787 had acted on this proposal as did the New York Convention of 1915, it would have compromised. It would have allowed the President to appoint, say, the Secretaries of State, War, and the Treasury, and made the rest of the Cabinet places elective. That would have been a senseless compromise, but giving the President the power to appoint even a few of his Cabinet would have been better than nothing. Then would the Quigg of that day have issued an address to his constituents explaining that his forebodings over giving the President even this meagre power were such that he must vote against that provision of the Constitution?

Mr. QUIGG is seeing things. What, after all, is the essential difference between the heads of departments in the State and the heads of departments in the nation?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Necessity Learns of a Law.

From the strictly military point of view, which sees obvious justification for the exercise of any severity that may be needed for the enforcement of military decrees and the carrying out of military plans, probably every one of the civilians recently put to death or sentenced to death by the Germans in Belgium has deserved his fate. The women among them, no less than the men, have been doing things forbidden by the army in possession, and, to the extent of their abilities, they have been endangering the occupation of the country by its conquerors and giving aid and comfort to Germany's foes.

To the military mind, therefore, it is right to stop those activities in the simplest and promptest way, and in the way which is final—as far as concerns the individual whose insubordination has been discovered. As all German minds just now seem to be military, there is presumably almost as much surprise as resentment in them as a result of the indignation which is finding expression in other lands since news of these executions, accomplished and proposed, have reached them, and of the several attempts at interference which have started.

There are, however, other necessities than military necessity, and this fact the rulers of Belgium, no matter how reluctantly, have had to recognize. They find that critics whom they cannot ignore, while understanding the argument of military necessity, deny the adequacy of its justification for the shooting, for instance, of women against whom nothing can be charged except that they have resisted an authority which they had many reasons for holding illegitimate. Their acts have been in accord with the dictates of humanity and patriotism. With courage and devotion they have been trying to mitigate a little the sufferings of an unfortunate people, and while in one sense what they did was criminal, in all except German eyes it was noble and heroic.

When such spies and rebels are made to face a wall and then are shot, it shocks the universal, as distinguished from the military, conception of right and justice, and from one capital after another there are reaching Berlin carefully worded protests and strong suggestions that the executions be at least delayed. They have been heeded, and the indications are that in not a few of these cases military necessity will yield to a higher law.

They Are Occupied Otherwise.

In the course of a public address answering critics of the League to Enforce Peace, SAMUEL J. ELDER, one of the league's organizers and President of the Boston Bar Association, made a statement that ought to be provocative of no little thought. What he said was:

> If it were a pestilence instead of a war which in one year had killed off 2,000,000 of the strongest young men of a nation, and disabled many millions more, the wisdom and science of the age would assuredly devote themselves to find a remedy or at least some safeguards.

Pestilences with any such number of victims as that are things of a past now rather remote, but that great plagues do not and cannot occur in these days is unquestionably due to the slow growth and increasing application of wisdom and science which to an ever greater and greater extent has ignored the existence of national boundaries.

Until more than a year ago it was thought, or at least hoped, by a considerable fraction of the world's inhabitants calling themselves civilized, that the plague of war in its severer manifestations had also been conquered. The analogy between war and disease, however, is not very close. If the only difference were that most fighting, that done defensively included, is voluntary and even eager, it still would be so important as to make unsound any argument based on the likenesses of the two.
